HORTON, DEBARRED PHYSICIAN, HELD FOR BLACKMAIL

Throws $1000 in Marked Bills Out of Office Window When Arrested in Kansas City.

PROSECUTOR AIDS INTENDED VICTIM

Central Figure in 'Diploma Mill' Scandal Said to Have Sought Money to 'Suppress' News Story.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 3.—Dr. R. B. Horton, debarred physician, named in numerous medical "diploma mill" activities, fell into a trap this afternoon laid by investigators of the County Prosecutor and was arrested and arraigned on the charge of blackmail.

When Horton hastily threw an envelope containing $1000 in marked money out of the second-story window of his office into Grand avenue, Robert W. Coffey was there to catch it and two other investigators were at Horton's door to restrain him.

Horton was taken only after a fight, in which for a time he bested two investigators. It required the combined efforts of Frank Howland, Jack Harrington and Tom Sullivan to subdue him.

Extortion Plot Alleged.

Dr. C. A. Beard complained to Prosecutor James R. Page today that Horton had attempted to extort money from him. Beard is a graduate of the old Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery. That institution later became, it was alleged, one of the "diploma mills" from which diplomas were sold at a nominal sum.

Beard said Horton told him another "diploma mill" news story was due to "break" Sunday morning and that since he (Beard) was an early graduate of the school, his name would be included in a list the story would contain. He said, Beard charged, that, for $1000 he (Horton) could keep Beard's name out of the articles.

$1000 in Marked Bills.

Page instructed Beard to go through with the deal. The Prosecutor furnished $1000 in marked bills—one $500 bill, four $100 bills and two $50 bills. They were placed in an envelope and turned over to Beard, who was to take them to Horton's office.

Four men trailed Beard. Robert Coffey was stationed in the street in front of Horton's office, Howland, Harrington and Sullivan waited in the corridor. Beard said later he turned the envelope over to Horton. Then Howland rushed through the door. Horton grappled with him and Harrington went to Howland's aid.

Horton accepted the challenge and had both men down on the top of his desk long enough for him to reach into a drawer, get the envelope containing the money and throw it out an open window into the street, according to the investigators' report to the prosecutor. Then Sullivan entered and Horton was subdued.

Fiancee Is Questioned.

In the office was a young woman who indignantly protested against what she termed was an attack on Horton. She identified herself as Miss Florence Davis, and asserted she was engaged to be married to Horton. She said her father was Judge Arch Davis of Chillicothe, Mo., and protested against being questioned in the case.

Miss Davis and Horton both were taken to the Prosecutor's office. A charge of blackmail was filed against Horton. Miss Davis merely was questioned. She denied any knowledge of blackmail or extortion. Horton was taken from the Prosecutor's office before Justice Joseph J. Daugherty and arraigned.

Horton was released on $10,000 bond raised by Miss Davis.

Horton denied there was any element of blackmail in his proposal to Beard. He explained the $1000 was given to him to be used by him as attorney's fees in his (Horton's) fight for reinstatement of his license to practice in Missouri. The State Board of Health long ago revoked Horton's license when his connection with worthless medical diplomas was disclosed. The board has known for some time that he had opened an office here and only last week James Stewart, secretary of the board, said efforts would be made soon to determine whether or not he was practicing without a license.

$200 Mail Order Auto, With Garage, Planned

New York Airplane Maker Reported Negotiating for Large Production of Car Without Axles.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The New York Times tomorrow will say negotiations are under way for the large scale production of a new "baby" automobile, which would be sold through a mail order house for $200.

The car is the invention of James B. Martin of the Martin Airplane factory, Garden City, N. Y., where the models were built.

A feature of the car is that it has no axles in the usual sense of the word, each wheel being independently mounted in the reinforced body. Rubber "aviator cord" is used in the suspension of each wheel instead of a spring.

Three models of the car have been built and were recently demonstrated.

The new car has a wheelbase of 60 inches, compared with the 103½ inch wheelbase of the smallest car now being produced in the United States.

Martin asserted his method of wheel suspension eliminates rebound when the car travels over an uneven surface. He said his invention will do 50 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

He declared he planned to have it shipped in a weather-proof packing case with a hinged door which may be used as a garage.

CHIMPANZEE FOR ST. LOUIS ZOO ON BOARD ZEPPELIN

Vierheller Will Meet Airship to Get Animal Bought in Germany.

When the Graf Zeppelin lands at Lakehurst it will be met by George P. Vierheller, superintendent of the St. Louis Zoo, who will bring the chimpanzee, which has been shipped from Germany to the St. Louis Zoo aboard the huge dirigible, to St. Louis.

It was learned yesterday through a message received by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce that the animal was put aboard the Graf Zeppelin by Herman Ruhe of Alsfeld, Germany.

The chimpanzee, which was ordered originally through the Foreign Trade Bureau, will be placed in the monkey house at the zoo with the rest of the chimpanzees which are trained there for the amusement of St. Louisans. It is three years old, tame and weighs 20 or 25 pounds.

MAN ON WHOM NSURANCE WAS PAID, IS FOUND ALIVE

Body Had Been Identified as That of Bartholomew Casey, but He Turns Up in Hotel.

Bartholomew Casey, who is officially dead upon the records of the city, is alive and well at the Page Boulevard police station. He wa sarrested last night at a downtown hotel, after police of the Page Boulevard district received an anonymius telephone call stating that he would be found at a cheap downtown hotel.

Casey, 59 years old and a truck driver, was reported missing May 23, by Mrs. Fannie Ayers, 5210 Washington avenue, a friend, who said she believed he had drowned in a water-filled quarry at Ashland and Euclid avenues. On June 3, she identified the body of a man found in a rooming house at 3425 Bell avenue, as that of Casey, and according to the police, collected $700 insurance on Casey.

Casey told the police he had been on the Pacific Coast and knew nothing of his reported death.

BIGGEST OF ALL PARROTS GIVEN WASHINGTON ZOO

Imperial, One of Rarest Species, Captured on Dominica in West Indies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—"Old Soak," Secretary of State Stimson's parrot, must look to his laurels as the first parrot of the land. A rival as the most interesting bird in America, a very rare imperial parrot, presented itself today in custody of Dr. W. M. Mann, director of the United States Zoological Park.

While "Old Soak" can speak for himself, the rival has the honor of being the largest of all parrots and the second of its kind ever to come to America. This type of parrot is so rare that in 100 years of London zoo history there have never been more than two of the kind ever on exhibition.

The imperial was secured in the West Indies, Dominica, by Stephen Hawels, amateur naturalist and former companion of Dr. Mann on African hunting expeditions.

DRY RAIDERS FIRED ON, SHOOT BACK; NONE HURT

Four Federal Prohibition Agents Attacked by Charles Freese With a Shotgun.

THEY DISARM AND ARREST HIM

Got Search Warrant for Empty Building Next Door to 2718 Semple Street Where He Lives.

Charles Freese, alias Camelo Fresina, who was arrested frequently during the Italian gang feud of 1927-28, exchanged shots with four Federal prohibition agents yesterday afternoon during one of the department's periodical raids at his home.

Agents Charles Stanley, Joseph Harris, John Waters and Thomas Byrd, with a search warrant for 2716 Semple avenue, where Freese resided until after a fire there last December, searched the vacant residence at that address and found no liquor. Byrd and Harris knocked at the rear door of No. 2718 to inquire for Freese.

Freese answered the door with an automatic shotgun in his hands and fired at Harris, according to the raiders. Byrd and Harris returned the fire, following Freese into the house where he fired three or four more shots before he was disarmed. In all, seven or eight shots were fired but no one was hurt.

Freese complained that he had been shot in the right hand but City Hospital physicians said the cut he exhibited was not a gunshot wound. He was booked at Page Boulevard Station charged with assault to kill.

The raiders reported that no liquor was found in the residence at No. 2716 but they did not search No. 2718 because they had no warrant to enter that building. Last April, in a similar raid, when Federal agents seized a quantity of moonshine whisky and wine at No. 2716, Freese cursed them from the porch of No. 2718 and dared them to come over.

SENATOR SWANSON CALLS ON HOOVER TO BUILD CRUISERS

Ranking Democrat of Navy Committee Makes Attack on President's Act in Halting Construction.

SHARP DEBATE IN SENATE FORESEEN

Administration Apprehensive About Discussion — Republican Leaders Are Invited to White House.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—A new broadside against President Hoover's action in postponing the laying down of three ships of the 15-cruiser program was fired today by Senator Swanson of Virginia, ranking Democrat of the Senate Naval Committee, upon his return from vacation.

It came at a time when the chief executive is holding conferences with Republican congressional leaders to acquaint them with the reasons for his action, and it enhanced the rather general belief that sharp debate in the Senate on the subject is likely after it reconvenes on Aug. 19.

With the negotiations for naval reduction proceeding between Ramsay MacDonald, the British Premier, and Ambassador Dawes, there was growing apprehension in administration circles as to the possible effect of any prolonged discussions in the Senate over the authority of the President to take the action he did. His move was made immediately after Premier MacDonald had announced suspension of construction of certain portions of this year's British naval program.

Swanson, in opposing the President's action on the cruisers, used even blunter language than did Chairman Hale of the Senate Naval Committee and Chairman Britten of the House Naval Committee in expressing their opposition to the course of the chief executive.

Calls Act "Contrary to Law."

Describing the President's action as "contrary to law," the Virginian said it behooved "the President, especially when he has appointed a committee to study law enforcement, to obey the law himself."

He added that Hoover would set a good example if "he should reconsider this matter and state that he will proceed to construct these three cruisers as directed unless Congress should repeal the direction given him."

Turning to the naval limitation negotiations, Senator Swanson said he did not think the President's action would aid in obtaining a naval agreement between the United States and Great Britain, as it would strengthen the British belief "that all Great Britain has to do is to delay matters and negotiate to keep the present status which gives her nation an overwhelming superiority over ours."

Not Too Hopeful for Agreement.

Asserting that it was the former Ramsay MacDonald Government which continued and approved the building of cruisers which made the British navy superior to the American navy, the Senator said the American people should not be too hopeful about the outcome of the present negotiations. He mentioned suggestions which he said came from England that Great Britain has no intention of scrapping or reducing her present navy; that American battleships should not be replaced until 1936 instead of 1931, and that the size of battleships and cruisers is to be greatly reduced. The Virginia Senator said that if these suggestions were carried out the American navy would be "a poor second to the British navy."

"I believe the best interests of the United States and Great Britain, and the peace of the world would be accomplished by substantial equality of the American and British navies," he added. "I would prefer this equality to be acquired by reduction instead of increase of navies.

"I feel that the best interests of America require substantial and fair parity between Great Britain and the United States, in which must be considered the naval bases of the two countries. Since the protection of commerce is dependent upon cruisers, we must have parity in cruisers.

"It would be much better for the United States to proceed to construct a suitable navy to its own needs and wants and let Great Britain do likewise than to let Great Britain and the United States make a treaty which would

KRISHNAMURTI DISBANDS CULT

Says Organizations Are Barrier to Understanding of the Truth.

By the Associated Press.

OMMEN, Holland, Aug. 3.—Jiddu Krishnamurti, young Hindu theosophist, widely known among his followers as the "world teacher," today announced the dissolution of the Order of the Star in the East.

He explained that the truth could not be organized. "Religious philosophical and spiritual organizations are barriers to understanding of the truth," he said. "The truth needs no disciples. It wants nothing from any man, only a few will understand and they need no organization."

Krishnamurti explained that the Order of the Star in the East had been preparing for him 18 years, but declared its members were not willing to face the truth. "What then is the use of this organization?" he asked.

Members of the order who have been attending an international congress in a little city of tents among the pines of the Castle Eerde estate, were taken completely by surprise by their leader's announcement.

The Order of the Star in the East has been described as a brotherhood and fellowship of faith founded in Benares, India, in 1910. It is said to have been based on the common belief of many members of the Theosophical Society that the world teacher's coming was near. Krishnamurti became head of the order in 1926.

The young Hindu, who is a protege of Mrs. Annie Besant, visited the United States in 1926. Mrs. Besant has expressed belief frequently that Krishnamurti had been used by the world teacher as his appointed vehicle.

ARREST OF C. C. PYLE ORDERED AT LOS ANGELES

Claims Growing Out of Bunion Derby Basis of State Official's Action.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 3.—Deputy Labor Commissioner M. E. Richardson today instructed the City Prosecutor to issue a warrant for the arrest of C. C. Pyle, promoter of the transcontinental bunion Derby. Pyle is said to have failed to pay $1000 toward claims for wages made against him by entertainers and patrolmen who accompanied the runners from New York to Los Angeles.

When the promoter appeared at the Labor Commissioner's office he was greeted by a crowd of claimants, including many of the runners, who were to have participated in the $60,000 prizes.

Richardson spoke to Pyle alone and a moment later told newspaper men, "It is no use. Pyle said he didn't have a thin dime. I informed him, therefore, I would ask for his arrest Monday.

Tuesday Pyle sent from Santa Rosa, Cal., $500 to be applied on claims allowed by the commission which totaled $1500.

AIRSHIP TRAVELING 62 MILES AN HOUR IN GOOD WEATHER

Preparations Made for Policing Crowd of 100,000 Expected to See Dirigible Arrive.

By SIR GEORGE HUBERT WILKINS,
Famous Arctic Explorer.
(Copyright, 1929.)

ABOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 3.—If all goes well, by 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon we should be swinging over gay old Broadway.

This message, which we anticipate will be picked up by the radio station at Tuckerton, N. J., about 8 o'clock this evening, New York daylight time (6 p. m. St. Louis time) finds us passing through lines of gulf weeds between which several whales are seen to be mingling their foamy wake with the waves tossed high by southerly winds.

The thrill of the trip is gradually easing off into a feeling of comfort and ease that will make us sorry when it is over.

Sturdily slipping along, following in a general way the thirty-seventh parallel, we have spanned the hundreds of miles of ocean between the Azores and Bermuda, and when we were due tonight to possibly pick up the glimmering lights at Hamilton, it was like coming to the next station in a railway journey.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 3.—Radio messages from the Graf Zeppelin to the Navy Department at Washington, relayed here late tonight, indicated that the dirigible was turning south in its course to avoid stormy weather. The airship was about 810 nautical miles from Lakehurst at 9 p. m. St. Louis time when the dirigible communicated with the navy.

The dirigible gave its position as 35.40 North latitude and 58.05 West longitude, which would place it about 330 miles northeast of Bermuda. The latest figures compared with the ship's position as reported to the navy at 2 p. m. today indicated that it had traveled 435 miles at an average speed of 54 knots (about 62 miles) in ten hours up to 10 p. m.

If this speed is maintained the dirigible should reach Lakehurst in about 15 hours, or about 1 p. m. tomorrow.

While the ship will meet favorable winds half way from Bermuda to Lakehurst, however, adverse winds prevail off the coast and the weather is cloudy and showery from the coast to Bermuda. These conditions would tend to slacken speed, probably as much as 14 knots an hour.

A swing to the south by the dirigible was suggested by government weather authorities in a radio broadcast today. On the original course conditions are stormy and although somewhat bad weather extends over the new route, it is better than that which would have been encountered on the first course.

At 8:29 tonight, St. Louis time, the third full day was completed in the air, so that it appeared that the total voyage would require at least 90 hours. The 1928 flight took 111 hours because of storms.

The Zeppelin left Friedrichshafen, Germany, at 3:29 a. m., Thursday (8:29 p. m., Wednesday, St. Louis time.)

By the Associated Press.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Aug. 3.—A radio message received tonight at the Zeppelin works from the Graf Zeppelin said: "Everything is in the best order aboard. Splendid weather. Following direct course to New York. Hope to fly over New York Sunday noon.

CAUSE OF RIOTING IN PRISONS BARED YEAR AGO IN HOUSE

Leavenworth, Where Outbreak Occurred, Has Quarters for 2000 but Houses 3770.

ATLANTA, BUILT FOR 1712, HAS 3107

Erection of Two New Penitentiaries Recommended to Provide for Overflow.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The crowding of prisoners into Federal penitentiaries, cited today as one of the causes of the riots in the Leavenworth (Kan.) prison, was denounced in a report by a special committee of the House of Representatives made a year ago after a survey of prison conditions.

The riots followed closely similar outbreaks in prisons at Clinton and Auburn and served to direct attention to conditions in the Federal penitentaries, where nearly 19,000 convicts are confined. The prisons at Leavenworth and Atlanta, Ga., it is said at the Department of Justice are badly overcrowded, the former housing 3770 inmates while intended to hold less than 2000, and the latter 3107 while intended for 1712.

"The committee believes that under no circumstances should the existing penitentiaries at Leavenworth, Atlanta and McNeil Island, be enlarged to accommodate more prisoners," said the report of the committee made to the House of Representatives, "but that as quickly as possible the prison population in Leavenworth and Atlanta be reduced to not more than 2000 in each prison. Only in this manner can the vicious practice of placing two prisoners in cells designed for one be ended. The committee cannot too strongly condemn this practice. The committee believes further that two additional penitentiaries should be established as soon as possible. One should be in the northeastern part of the country and the other at such place as the board of experts may determine."

The committee also said there were twice too many prisoners in Leavenworth without proper employment.

Observers point out that the Army's disciplinary barracks, three miles from the prison, contains cell room for 2000 prisoners, with an average population of 700. It has been suggested that the War Department consent to the use of available space by the Federal prison, thus relieving to some extent the crowded condition at the penitentiary.

Besides the overcrowding of the individual cells, 180 prisoners are confined in rooms which were built for bathrooms in the basement of the prison where artificial light is the only means of illumination. The number of prisoners is growing each year, the increase during 1928 being 49 men.

Prison officers recognize the underlying causes but are prohibited from discussing conditions in the prison and cannot make public appeals.

OUTBREAKS LAID TO OVERCROWDING

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Aug. 3.—Overcrowding and idleness in the Federal Penitentiary here are blamed for the prison riots yesterday, when serious consequences threatened for a time. Prison officials today reported the situation well in hand, although the prisoners were still expressing verbal resentment against their guards.

At present 3770 convicts are crowded into quarters designed for 2000. In one type of cell, which is 26 feet long and ten feet wide, 10 men are confined in space designed for five. Except for brief periods when they are permitted to walk in the yard or march to the mess hall, the prisoners are confined continuously to their cells, a condition which breeds growing dissatisfaction.

Most of the prisoners spend their days in idleness because of the lack of opportunities for work. The prison laundry employs 140 men; the shoe factory, 374; the broom factory, 45; the boiler house, 100, and the kitchen and dining room, 180. All of them are over-manned because of the effort to give as many prisoners as possible a chance to work.

Recommendations are now before the Department of Justice for more room for prisoners and means of keeping them busy. The only relief, however, must come from Congress which alone has authority to provide funds for the necessary expansion.

Prisoners at Leavenworth will not enjoy their regular Sunday band concert and ball games tomorrow.

Warden Thomas B. White today said the situation was under complete control and that he expected no further trouble. At the same time he announced no Sunday entertainment would be allowed. The public has been invited to the concerts heretofore.

One prisoner, Mike Martinez, a Mexican, was slain by guards in putting down the mutiny with riot guns. Three other prisoners were wounded.

Auburn Prisoners to Stay in Cell Today; Church Service Abandoned

By the Associated Press.

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 3.—There will be no religious service, tomorrow at the State prison here where an uprising occurred among the prisoners last Sunday.

Prisoners fortunate enough to have their headsets in working order may listen to church services or other radio features if they wish but all prisoners will be kept in their cells and there will be no assemblage either for spiritual or recreational diversion.

The four prisoners who escaped during the rioting were still at large today. At North Rose two campers said they were held up and robbed of their clothing late Sunday night by two men apparently convicts.

$2 PAPER SUITS FOR SWELTERING MALE PREDICTED

Scientist Says 1000 in Pajamas Would Save Day — Can't Be Found.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Waldemar Kaempfert, director of the Rosenwald Industrial Museum, says man's enslavement to fashion will be broken by paper suits, costing about $2 apiece and thrown away after about two weeks' wear.

"The fibers," Kaenpfert says, "will be made of paper and will be spun like cotton or wool, then woven into attractive patterns. Instead of being sewn together the woven paper will be glued. A man will step into a clothes shop, where an expert tailor will in a few minutes drape strips of paper about his form and then fasten them with fish glue.

"Such a suit—unlike a paper tissue towel—will be unaffected by rain and hold its shape for at least two weeks, after which it can be thrown away and a new one purchased.

"There is no question that present clothes are quite mad. But we are slaves of convention. Although a thousand men marching down to work in pajamas would liberate us from the present style tyranny, it is impossible to find a thousand such men. The paper suit is our only hope."

SOUTHWEST HEAT WAVE ENDS; THREE DEATHS IN KANSAS CITY

Breezes From Northwest Bring Relief, but Drouth Still Is Unbroken.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 3.—Cooling breezes from the northwest today broke a heat wave which for several days had caused suffering, several deaths and considerable crop damage to the Southwest. Temperatures in the 80s prevailed today instead of the 100-degree marks previously generally reported. A few scattered showers were reported, but the prevailing drouth remained unbroken.

Death of Oscar Williams, 37-year-old barber of Oklahoma City, Ok., here, brought Kansas City's death list from the heat to three persons. Williams was reported to have been pushed yesterday from a freight train by a companion. He was found later with one wrist severed by car wheels, lying in the sun. He died today from effects of the heat.

Newton Harkness, 55, a janitor, died last night following a prostration. Harry Gustin, a laborer, died after being picked up prostrated from a ditch in which he had been working.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PANA, Ill., Aug. 3.—The excessive heat spell of the last ten days throughout Central Illinois was broken today by frequent showers. The temperature dropped 20 degrees in two hours.

Ground Crew of 400 Ready for Landing at Lakehurst.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 3.—The arrival of the dirigible Graf Zeppelin here tomorrow will be an all hands maneuver for the Navy, meaning that a task is assigned every man at the post. The normal ground crew has been expanded from 275 to 400 men. The Philadelphia navy yard will send 25 Marines to supplement the 160 normally on duty here, and 60 New Jersey State troopers have been detailed to help handle the crowd of more than 100,000 which is expected to be on hand at the arrival.

Even while the Graf Zeppelin was far from the end of its 4100-mile flight complete preparations for its arrival were made.

Danger spots on the landing field have been marked with red flags, especially in the vicinity of the hangar and the mooring mast.

Within the hangar the dirigible Los Angeles and two Navy blimps have been put close together leaving a full side of the hangar for the 776-foot Zeppelin visitor.

On top of the hangar two loud speakers have been placed. Each is nine feet in diameter and capable of throwing a voice to any corner of the 2500-acre field. An effort will be made to pick up and send through the loud speakers the story of the arrival to be broadcast as the ship nears its destination by Frank E. Nicholson, a passenger.

On the arrival of the big ship Dr. Hugo Eckener, its skipper, will either be the overnight guest of Commander Maurice R. Pierce, Captain of the station, or will go direct to a hotel in New York. A special train will carry the Zeppelin's passengers to New York.

On the return trip, which also will be the first leg of the Zeppelin's cruise around the world, Lieutenant-Commander Charles E Rosendahl, skipper of the Los Angeles, and Lieut. J. C. Richardson, attached to the Los Angeles, and C. P. Burgess of the Bureau of Aeronautics in Washington will be passengers.

Synthetic Cigarettes Popular Among the Passengers.

ABOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 3.—We passed two whales at 11:30 a. m., going in the same direction. Our position at noon was 36 degrees 4 minutes north and 43 degrees 36 minutes west. Our speed was 128 kilometers an hour (about 80 miles) and we had covered up to noon 5519 kilometers (about 3430 miles). About half of the passengers are smoking synthetic cigarettes.

(It is apparent that the first demand of the passengers at Lakehurst will be for cigarettes. The inflammable lifting gas makes smoking impossible during the flight.)

Showers in Virginia Only Bad Weather Likely on Route.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — The weather bureau tonight predicted fair weather for tomorrow in the Atlantic Coast States along the probable route of the Graf Zeppelin as she heads toward New York, except in Virginia, where cloudy weather and showers were indicated. The forecast for Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware and Eastern New York indicated favorable conditions after the airship reaches land.

In a special forecast for the Graf Zeppelin the bureau said that a disturbance over Lake Ontario, Ottawa, tonight would move northeastward with a trough from the New England coast to the Virginia capes and during the course of the day shifting winds would cause squalls, overcast weather and heavy showers off the coast.

On her previous voyage to the United States, the Zeppelin encountered unfavorable weather between Bermuda and the American coast line and this, combined with an injury to the dirigible's fabric, occasioned some anxiety for her safety.

CAULFIELD LIKELY TO REJECT FIRE INSURANCE COMPROMISE

Governor Expected to Give Decision Soon on Proposal of Companies in Rate Reduction Fight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 3.—Gov. Caulfield likely will reach a decision within the next few days on disposition of a proposal by the stock fire insurance companies operating in Missouri to compromise litigation over a 10 per cent rate reduction order issued by the State Insurance Department nearly seven years ago.

It is thought the Governor will reject the compromise proposal, which is one financially advantageous to the insurance companies, and leave the issue to the courts if the companies decide to continue the legal fight. The State has won on virtually every point in the litigation so far in the State and Federal courts.

The stock fire insurance companies have collected approximately $13,000,000 in excess premiums over the rates ordered by the State for fire, lightning, hail and windstorm insurance. The amount of excess premiums collected was estimated by the Insurance Department at approximately $2,000,000 a year since the date of the reduction order, Nov. 15, 1922.

Under the proposal of the companies, they would refund to the policyholders approximately $5,000,000 and immediately put the reduction into effect. The refund would extend back to Jan. 1, 1927, instead of the date of the reduction order.

POISONED BISCUITS KILL THREE; FIVE HELD BY SHERIFF

Trail of Chemical Leads to Sack of Flour Which Louisiana Woman Used in Preparing Breakfast.

By the Associated Press.

MONROE, La., Aug. 3.—Following the death of three persons from eating biscuits made with poisoned flour, Sheriff W. S. Smith tonight had five persons under arrest charged with murder. The warrants were sworn to by E. L. Wallace, who was recovering from a violent illness caused by the poison. Two members of the Wallace family and a lodger at their farm house, are dead. They are Mrs. Wallace, her son Bruce, 9 years old and W. Blakefield, 65.

Those under arrest are: Elmer Leonard, 40, a white tenant on a neighboring farm, and his wife, L. A. Draper, a white tenant on the village plantation, and two Negroes, C. P. Townsend and Burnie Townsend. All of them denied knowledge of the crime.

Mrs. Wallace and her son, Bruce, died today. Other members of the family were thought to be recovering.

Smith said he found finger marks on a sack of poison in an outhouse and a trail of the poison led to a flour sack in the kitchen of the Wallace home. The flour was used by Mrs. Wallace in biscuits for breakfast yesterday. Immediately after breakfast all six became violently ill.

A neighbor who went to the farm home found them in agony. Wallace had put a pan of grease on the stove and all of them had swallowed grease, the farmer believing they were suffering from ptomaine poisoning.

Dr. P. N. Pulley, West Carroll Coroner, returned a verdict of "poisoning, resulting from an act of a person or persons unknown." Sheriff Smith said he expected to make a fourth arrest during the day.

Those arrested today denied any implication in the case.

give a great inferiority to the American navy."

Thus far President Hoover has discussed the naval situation with Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader in the Senate, and Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. As other leaders return to Washington for the reassembling of Congress, he is expected to invite them to the White House for similar discussions.

One thing upon which administration officials lay emphasis at this time is the public statement of Premier MacDonald that there has been an agreement on equality of fighting strength between the British and American navies. They regard this as a long stride forward in the negotiations, although many details in this connection remain to be worked out.

Songs and Cards Occupy Passengers in Zeppelin When Not Writing Notes

Bag of Mail Dropped on Santa Maria Island and Another Will Be Lowered at Bermudas.

By SIR GEO. HUBERT WILKINS.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 3.—Next port of call the Bermudas. We expect to sight the eastern extremities of the Bermudan group after sunset tonight and the landfall will be a joyous one.

At the present moment, shortly after noon, we are sailing along in a stiff easterly wind, avoiding a low, clouded area to the north. A few hundred miles still separate us from the Bermudas, where we expect to drop more mail, as we did yesterday on Santa Maria Island in the Azores.

Below us, the Atlantic is kicking and tossing recklessly, but the passengers aboard the sturdy Graf are serene and calm. We anticipate our landing at Lakehurst joyously, but are beginning to dread the end of our pleasant air-journey across the Atlantic.

Our breakfast this morning consisted of the usual delicacies, and every one was busy between then and noon writing post cards and letters for the Bermuda mail bag After the luncheon, we played bridge and spent the forepart of the afternoon chatting in the saloon.

Making 60 Miles an Hour.

At 2 o'clock this morning, New York time, we were speeding along at about 60 miles an hour through typical broken trade wind clouds at an altitude of 700 feet. A 15-mile northerly wind was slightly unfavorable to us and retarded our speed along the same westerly course we have been following. At that time our position was 35 west longitude, 36 north latitude, several hundred miles southwest of the Azores, which we cleared at sunset last night, and almost directly on the early route followed by the Zeppelin last year, when it encountered the furious storms that ripped the port stabilizer open.

But that didn't bother the passengers. At that moment all were settled snugly in their berths, sleeping soundly. They were worn out by the tense atmosphere which pervaded the Graf while the gallant ship was struggling along all yesterday afternoon against the headwinds trying to reach the Azores.

It was 8:15 p. m. when we dropped several bags of mail on Santa Maria Island, casting them on a small point of land, near a group of houses. The islanders came curiously out of their homes to stare up wide into the dim light at the giant silver cloud hovering above their houses. The course thereafter was clear, and we made good progress.

Music and Cards.

My first direct message to the United States, filed for this account of the trip, was sent just as the passengers were struggling to see this little isle of Santa Maria. The Azores disrupted our dinner and the posting of the mail broke down the general formality.

Then began raillery and jollification which lasted well into the night. The saloon was divided into two parties: these who lack the musical sense but who possess strong voices, exhausted their knowledge of hymns, student and popular songs. Others, with a capacity for suffering silently, joined in the almost aimless card games.

Everyone is now quite familiar with his surroundings, but can scarcely keep in mind the fact we are eating up space at about 60 to 80 miles an hour. They are conscious, however, of the rapid approach toward Lakehurst, and the greetings they are to have from their friends amid a joyous reception on their native heath.

Already we have placed bets on the exact time of our arrival, basing our conclusions on the speed made so far and the expectation that we will be pulled from the skies at Lakehurst around noon Sunday.

EVIDENCE THAT SNOOK GAVE LOVE POTION TO VICTIM

Chemist at Murder Trial of Ohio U. Instructor Describes Examination of Stomach of Theora Hix.

FOUND HUMAN BLOOD ON SLAYER'S CLOTHES

Landlady Says That the Day After the Killing She Found Both Keys to Room Pair Shared.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—James H. Snook, former Ohio State University veterinary professor, listened with academic interest today while the State introduced one of its principal witnesses to prove that he fed his student paramour, Theora K. Hix, a "love potion" and killed her in a fit of anger.

It established through City Chemist Charles F. Long that stains found on the clothing of Snook after he was arrested were made by human blood and that an examination of the young woman's stomach after death disclosed the concoction he was alleged to have given her.

For nearly two hours Long occupied the stand for direct and cross-examination about the tests by which he had made these discoveries. He was called as a State's witness. Prosecutor John J. Chester Jr., introduced his testimony to show that Snook administered the preparation to the woman in a beef sandwich as they drove out to a lonely rifle range the night of June 13.

Landlady Testified.

The death of Miss Hix ended a relationship which she had carried on with the former professor for three years. The prosecutor is attempting to prove to the jury that Miss Hix was tired of her 49-year-old admirer and was unwilling to accompany him that night to the apartment house where at intervals they shared a room.

The owner of the apartment house, Mrs. M. M. Smalley, who has time to read nothing but the Bible, according to her own testimony, occupied the stand for about an hour this morning.

She looked at the figure of a big man stretched out in a colored canvas beach chair in the court room and referred to him not as Snook but as "Mr. Howard Snook." The defendant, recovering from a physical ailment that followed a spinal fluid test last week, neither shifted nor stirred in his comfortable chair nor did he pay any attention to Mrs. Smalley.

The testimony disclosed that Snook gave up the room on Friday, June 14, the day after Miss Hix had been murdered, and the same day that he took a blood-stained suit to be cleared.

Returned Both Keys.

Before Mrs. Smalley left the stand she testified that Snook on that day had returned both of the keys to the room he occupied with Miss Hix, one of which had been torn from the key ring that was found beside the young woman's body.

Long's testimony dealt not only with the bloodstains that were on Snook's gray suit, even after it had been cleaned, but with stains that were found on the hammer he is alleged to have used to beat the girl, and the penknife with which he cut her throat.

He likewise testified human blood had made the stains found on the door and seat of Snook's automobile, on a pair of Snook's gloves and on a piece of waste which it is alleged the slayer used to wipe off his machine before he drove away from the rifle range.

Bottled samples of the narcotic preparations removed from Dr. Snook's office and the drug room were presented to Dr. Oscar W. Brumley, director of the Ohio State University clinic, for identification. Cross-examination of Dr. Brumley showed that the samples were at least 12 years old. After he had ascertained from the witness the therapeutic uses of these preparations in veterinary medicine, Attorney Seidel asked him if it would not be possible to find samples in any veterinary or medical department. Brumley said that it would.

"And it is a fact that these samples were used by Dr. Snook in the instruction of students, isn't it?" Seidel asked.

Again Dr. Brumley replied in the affirmative.

Mrs. James H. Snook, wife of the defendant, will be called to testify in her husband's behalf, defense counsel E. O. Ricketts announced late today.

FRISCO ROAD SETS ENDURANCE RECORD FOR LOCOMOTIVE

One Engine Goes 4410 Miles Without Having Fire Drawn and Is Keeping On.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 3.—Claiming the world's endurance record for locomotives, engine No. 4113 of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad reached here today and officers of the railroad announced two more round trips from Kansas City to Birmingham, Ala., would be attempted before the fire was extinguished under the boiler.

For 15 days the locomotive has been drawing freight cars between here and Birmingham. O. D. Forsythe of Springfield, an officer of the road, has ridden 4410 miles in the cab since the engine started its record-breaking run.

The old record for continuous service was 3500 miles. An attempt is to be made to establish a mark of 7250 miles.

SEA SCOUTS ALMOST RAINED OUT IN 'JAMBOREE' PROGRAM

One of Problems Now Is Whether Baden-Powell as Peer Will Favor Scouts.

ARROWE PARK, England, Aug. 3.—With all the rainy weather of the first week of the Boy Scouts' world jamboree it was appropriate for sea scouts to feature today's program.

But even the sea scouts were almost rained out. Their "desert island" erected in the center of the lake on moored boats was almost scuttled, their "pirate ship" almost sank to Davy Jones' locker, and their "merchant ship" lost its masts in the high wind. Nevertheless, the sea scouts carried out a pageant in which they demonstrated they were not dry land sailors.

Chief Scout Baden-Powell complimented them on the fact that everything about their performances today proved the sea scouts are not merely fine weather birds.

The Prince of Wales' address delivered to the 50,000 scouts yesterday afternoon already has been translated into 40 languages.

One of the problems now engaging the attention of all scouts in the big camp is the title the chief scout will take as a peer. It is understood this will be either Lord Barden-Powell or Mafeking or Lord Baden-Powell of Brownsea Island, where the first Boy Scouts rally was held.

The Governor will return to the capital in about a week.

LONDON EXPRESS INTERVIEWS HUSTON 3000 MILES AWAY

Youth So Interested in Phone He Can Hardly Turn Mind to Questions.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—London was so interested in the selection of Wilber B. Huston by Thomas Edison as his protegee from the picked candidates of every State that the Sunday Express interviewed him 3000 miles away in East Orange, N. J., over the trans-Atlantic telephone.

Huston, already the scientist, was so interested in this, his first chance to see the trans-Atlantic system in operation, that the interviewer had difficulty in turning the conversation to himself.

Finally he revealed that fencing was his favorite game and said, "I play a little baseball. I am not much good though."

Huston Tells Radio Audience Why He Became Scientist.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Wilber B. Huston tonight told a radio audience why he chose to become a scientist rather than the classical student his father wanted him to be.

Speaking over a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Co., the protege of the electrical wizard said:

"When I looked around for the thing which made life most interesting, I realized that science was the solution for me.

"Had Mr. Edison specialized in the classics, we would not have the electric light, and, for that matter, I would not be talking to you over the radio this evening. Certainly it wasn't the knowledge of the siege of Troy which enabled him to discover the radio's basic principles, or to invent the phonograph. It was his genius first of all, plus his scientific training in which he learned useful things."

MAGISTRATE MARRIES MAN, FINES HIM IN TRAFFIC CASE

Police Employe Turned Car Around in Middle of Block on Way to Be Wed.

An arrest for a traffic violation did not delay William F. Ferie, 22 years old, switchboard operator at the Dayton Street District Police Station, in his plans to wed Miss Lucille Lucks, 5215 Maple avenue.

Ferie went to Belleville Friday and obtained the marriage license. Yesterday afternoon the pair, accompanied by the bride's sister, Janice, set out to be married. The prospective bridegroom turned his car around on Main street in front of the police station in East St. Louis just as Chief James Leahy was looking out the window. Ferie was arrested.

When arraigned before Justice of the Peace J. C. Brady, Ferie asked him to delay disposition of the traffic violation charge and perform his wedding ceremony. The Justice obliged and then fined him $5 for violating the traffic ordinance.

ST. LOUIS ROBIN AT KANSAS CITY FOR EXHIBITION

Will Give Refueling Demonstration at Airport Dedication Today, Then Continue Tour.

In contrast to last week, when they flew in a monotonous wide circle above Lambert-St. Louis Field, ever within gliding distance of the airport, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, St. Louis Robin endurance champions, had a busy day yesterday in Chicago, Springfield, Ill., St. Louis and Kansas City.

The log of their day's activities:

Chicago: Flew over Lake Michigan at 11 a. m., demonstrating the refueling contact while thousands watched from downtown streets.

Springfield: Greeted at 12:25 p. m. by Gov. L. L. Emmerson and the largest crowd since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh visited Springfield Airport.

St. Louis: Returned to home field at 1:32 p. m., filled their gasoline tanks and took off for Kansas City at 2:50 p. m.

Kansas City: Arrived at 5:40 p. m. to participate in dedication ceremonies of Fairfax Airport today.

Chicago Program Delayed.

Rain interfered with the Chicago program, which called for a refueling exhibition over Grant Park Friday afternoon, and on the way to Chicago Friday, rain drenched the Robin thoroughly for the first time since the start of the endurance flight, July 13.

Murky, threatening clouds delayed the flyers yesterday morning, but the rain that seemed impending had not arrived at 11 a. m., and they took off. A few moments later they were soaring over the lake front in the view of throngs who gathered along Michigan avenue and in Grant Park, or who watched from the windows of office buildings fronting the lake.

Contact was made by the time the St. Louis Robin and its refueling ship moved over the downtown section at 800 feet, low enough so that the gasoline feed hose suspended to the endurance ship was clearly visible. After the refueling exhibition, the flyers, without landing, headed southwest for the State capital.

There they stopped 20 minutes, received wrist watches from Gov. Emmerson and took off at 12:45 for St. Louis, aided by the tail wind that had boosted them from Chicago to Springfield in an hour and 15 minutes.

Small Crowd at Lambert.

Three-quarters of an hour later, they landed at Lambert-St. Louis Field, replenished their gasoline supply under the gaze of a small group of spectators, and departed for Kansas City at 2:50, the last leg of their 516-mile day's journey.

At Fairfax Airport, parachute jumps, landing and stunting contests, races of various kinds and other entertainment had been planned to supplement the refueling exhibition. Flyers and other visitors began arriving at the Kansas City field early yesterday.

Inside the fuselage of the endurance plane are pencilled notations bearing witness that Jackson and O'Brine spent part of their time in air computing the profits from their endurance feat and the hours they had exceeded previous records.

Among the notations is one reading, "$6000." Others are: 299 minus 246 equals 55; 408 minus 246 equals 162; 172 multiplied by 2 equals 344. The figure 172, no doubt refers to the Fort Worth endurance record, while 246 hours was the record of the Angeleno, which the flyers set out to beat.

Special bus service between the Wellston trolley loop and Lambert-St. Louis Field will be provided today starting at . p. m., by the Public Service Co. No special events have been announced at the airport, but interest aroused by the endurance flight is expected to cause a crowd to visit the place.

Jackson and O'Brine will return to St. Louis for a short time tomorrow morning and then will take off either for Louisville, Ky., or Memphis, Tenn., on an exhibition tour for Curtiss Flying Service that will last until Aug. 18.

ART AT CAPITOL GETS NEW CHANCE AGAINST HOT DOGS

Proposal to Move Lunch Counter From Rotunda Favored by Governor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 3.—Art, exemplified by the great Brankwyn paintings in the rotunda of the Missouri capitol is about to have another chance in its heretofore ineffectual struggle against commercialism, as symbolized by a hot dog and pie counter which has flourished for years under the capitol dome.

Some of the elective State officials on the State Board of Permanent Seat of Government, aroused by caustic comments about the offending contrast, are considering banishing the hot dog stand to a less conspicuous spot. Among them are Gov. Caulfield and Treasurer Brunk.

The holder of the hot dog concession, an employe in the State Auditor's department, pays $80 a month for the privilege.

Once in Gov. Baker's administration, art lovers had the lunch counter moved from the rotunda to a room in the building, but the concessionaire protested and presently was back at the old stand.

MAN AND ANOTHER'S WIFE FOUND SLAIN IN WOODS

Third Person Thought to Have Known Their Meeting Place Is Sought.

By the Associated Press.

ANNISTON, Ala., Aug. 3. — A third person thought to have known the meeting place of W. C. Gallahar, 55-year-old taxicab operator, and Mrs. Lucy Wilkerson, 39, whose bodies, apparently hacked with an ax and bearing bullet wounds, were found in a wooded section 10 miles from here this morning, was being sought tonight by Calhoun County authorities.

Sheriff W. E. Parker, with a force of deputies, was leading the search in the vicinity of White's Gap, near Fort McLellan, Army Post, where the bodies were found by another searching party. The Sheriff said the two apparently had been dead since Friday morning.

The body of Gallahar was found about 15 feet from that of the woman. His hat and coat and a pistol with one exploded cartridge lay near by. They had been struck several blows on the head and the woman had been shot twice.

Gallahar is survived by a widow and several children. Mrs. Wilkerson is survived by her widower.

BOY, 12, KILLED BY TRAILER OF TRUCK ON EADS BRIDGE

Arthur Wilson, Negro, Was Attempting to Board Vehicle, Witnesses Say.

Arthur Wilson, 12-year-old Negro, of 3910 Fairfax avenue, was run over and killed by the trailer of a milk truck on the Eads Bridge yesterday afternoon. Witnesses said he was attempting to climb to a position between the truck and the trailer when he lost his balance and fell under the wheels.

Walter Stone of 301 Geyer avenue, the driver, told police he did not see the boy. The truck is owned by the Schwartzman Service Co., which handles milk transfers for the Pevely Dairy Co.

LABOR ORGANIZER SOUGHT AS SLAYER OF SERVICE DRIVER

Leo Brothers, With Record of 54 Arrests, Accused by Eye-Witness of Killing John De Blasi.

Leo Brothers, 30 years old, a labor organizer, who has been arrested 54 times but never convicted of crime, is being sought on a Coroner's verdict of homicide, returned yesterday, naming him as the man who shot and killed John de Blasi, 18-year-old service car driver, in an alley in the rear of De Blasi's home, 5051 Delmar boulevard, Friday evening.

The verdict was that De Blasi died from gunshot wounds in the chest "caused by bullets fired from a gun in the hands of Leo Brothers."

Police raided a room occupied by Brothers at the University Hotel, 6600 Delmar boulevard, but he was not there. A membership card for the Mounds Country Club, East Side gambling resort, was in the room but he could not be found at the club, either.

Accused by Eye-Witness.

The homicide verdict was based on testimony by John Prosperito, 18, service car driver and former schoolmate of De Blasi. Prosperito testified that Brothers had been extorting money from drivers and had quarreled with De Blasi Friday at Third street and Washington avenue, the eastern terminus of the Washington-Delmar service car route.

Breaking the silence which has surrounded similar killings in the past, Prosperito told his story to police and repeated it under oath at the inquest, where he appeared closely guarded and obviously fearful. He wept as he testified.

"Who shot your friend?" asked Coroner Dever.

"Leo Brothers—that's what they call him," Prosperito answered.

"Why?"

"He shot him, I guess, because they had an argument down at the loop. Brothers tore a service card off John's car."

"What does Brothers do for a living?"

"He's supposed to be a 'red hot.'"

"Ever see him before?"

"Oh, yes, all the time. I saw him more yesterday than ever before. He seemed to be following John and me."

Had Been "Squeezing" Drivers.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Griffin continued the questioning, asking:

"Has Brothers been 'on the racket,' squeezing service car drivers?"

"Yes."

"How much did you give him?"

"Not a dime. I'm only a driver, not an owner."

"When did you see him first yesterday?"

"At Hamilton avenue, at 10 a. m. He was riding up and down Washington all day."

Prosperito related that he and De Blasi, after making several trips together, drove to the rear of De Blasi's home, parked their car in the alley and got out, just as Brothers, accompanied by two men, drove up from the opposite direction.

"Brothers jumped out with a revolver in his hand, cursed De Blasi and began to shoot. I dropped behind the car until the shooting was over and they drove away. Then I ran through a yard and went home."

De Blasi Had No Chance.

Brothers gave De Blasi no chance for his life?"

"No," said the witness, adding that De Blasi was not armed.

In reply to further questions Prosperito said Brothers was reputed to be an extortionist, and that he had known Brothers for three months and could not be mistaken as to his identity.

De Blasi died without making a statement.

Sister Sees Slayer Drive Away.

His sister, Minnie, who heard the shots and ran to his side, saw a man with a revolver jump on the running board of the Cadillac with two men inside.

"Why did you shoot my brother?" she demanded. The armed man called to his companions: "Come on, let's get out of here." The car drove east in the alley to Kingshighway, turned north and disappeared in the heavy evening traffic.

De Blasi woke Friday morning to learn a stench bomb had been thrown overnight into his Packard auto, parked in front of his home. When killed he was using another car borrowed from Jack Devine, 5228 Delmar.

"I know who threw that bomb, but I'm not going to tell," De Blasi had said to Devine.

De Blasi, according to relatives and friends, had spoken of being threatened since he and some friends withdrew recently from a service car drivers' union and joined an independent association of drivers in which the due were lower.

De Blasi's Police Record.

De Blasi, police records show, had been arrested several times for investigation, had been fined for peace disturbance, had served a workhouse term for tampering with an automobile, and had been under $25,000 bond since last May, accused with three other youths of attacking a 15-year-old girl. The bond was returnable Sept. 16.

Brothers has a much longer police record. He was reported identified in January, 1928 as one of two men who robbed the Arco Cafeteria, 409 North Broadway, of $475 in a holdup. He was arrested the day after the holdup as he entered the home of a woman friend. Money, totaling several hundred dollars, was found in every pocket of his suit, police reported. However, Brothers was discharged at a preliminary hearing in Court of Criminal Correction.

In June, 1928, he was arrested and accused of stealing an automobile, throwing stench bombs in the garages of the Coronado and Chase hotels and firing shots at the Chase garage. Last March he was identified as one of three men who threw a stench bomb in a truck of the Paris Dyeing & Cleaning Co., setting it on fire. Again he escaped prosecution.

SHOTS FIRED IN CHASE, MOTORIST CAPTURED

Joseph Trinka Charged With Careless Driving, Resisting Arrest, Destroying Property.

Joseph Trinka, 27 years old, a printer, was arrested, charged with careless driving, resisting arrest and destruction of property last night after a motorcycle policeman fired three shots into the rear of a rented automobile driven by Trinka through the heavy traffic of after-theater crowds on Washington avenue between Sixth and Eighth streets. A companion, William Gracey, 44, also a printer, was held for investigation.

The policeman, Carl Schlogl, reported that he arrested the two men on Ninth street, near Franklin avenue, and ordered them to drive to the Carr street police station, Tenth and Carr streets. The men complied, Schlogl said, but as he was parking his motorcycle in front of the station, Trinka instead of stopping drove east to Broadway, north to Wash, west to Sixth, south to Washington avenue and then west to Eighth street.

After firing a shot in the air and failing to halt them, Schlogl sent three bullets into the back of the car, a sedan. One pierced the rear of the front seat, but the occupants escaped injury.

Before the car stopped, headed east in St. Charles street, a westbound one-way thoroughfare, it collided with three other cars. Schlogl took his prisoners to the City hospital, where physicians said Trinka had been drinking, and where the policeman was treated for a sprained finger, suffered in subduing them.

EX-KAISER'S RETURN RUMORED

Visit of Wife to Germany Sets Communist Press to Gossiping.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—Princess Hermine, wife of the former Kaiser, is on a journey to Nuremberg of a "purely private nature." It is generally supposed that she is to take the cure at Berchtesgaden but the communist newspaper Berlin Am Morgen sees in the trip a definite plan to make arrangements for the return of the former Kaiser to Germany and his establishment on a Bavarian estate.

The Reichstag recently voted against extending a defense of the Republic law which specifically barred the former monarch from German soil. It was said, however, at the time of expiration of this law that the former Kaiser had no intention or desire of returning from his exile at Doorn, Holland, and that in any case he would have to seek official sanction to procure a passport.

LIGHTNING SETS FOREST FIRES

Rangers Estimate 300 Were Started by Bolts in Four States.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 3.—Forest Rangers today were fighting fires started by lightning in national forests in Northwestern States. An electrical storm which swept over the Cascade Mountains from Southern Oregon through Washington to the Canadian border last night started at least 200 fires, officials of the Forest Bureau at Portland, Ore., estimated. Lighning started 100 forest fires in Montana and Idaho, rangers at Spokane said. None of the fires in Oregon and Washington was considered serious. Quick action by rangers prevented most of them from spreading.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Nine destroyers left the Philadelphia Navy Yard today carrying 500 civilian sailors for two weeks' intensive training in gunnery, engineering, seamanship and naval tactics in waters up the Atlantic coast to Maine and return. The 500 men represent divisions of the U. S. Naval Reserve from Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbia and Detroit.

CITIZEN SOLDIERS WARMLY PRAISED BY GEN. PARKER

Corps Commander Reviews Final Parade of 1600 in Camp at Jefferson Barracks.

THINKS ATHLETICS PLAYED A PART

Trophies for Athletics and Medals for Marksmanship or Military Excellence Awarded.

Summer soldiers whose drill-ground efforts three weeks ago caused leather-faced Sergeants at Jefferson Barracks to bark and groan alternately, won the commendation yesterday of Major-General Frank B. Parker, ranking army officer of the Middle West, on their clock-work maneuvers.

"I saw you when you first came to camp," Gen. Parker, commander of the Sixth Corps area, said after the parade, "and I want to say that you've made progress—wonderful progress. Drilling didn't do it all. Those athletic afternoons played their part."

For more than half an hour, Gen. Parker and Brigadier-General G. H. Estes, barracks commandant, standing before an open tent on the north side of the carefully clipped parade ground, reviewed the cadet battalions, marching in rigid lines to the music of the Sixth Infantry band.

Lads from Arkansas who, on the opening day of the camp, thought that skirmish line was a piece of rope, were clicking units in a marching machine. Late graduates from the awkward squad did not betray themselves, but maintained that parade-grounds cadence which drill sergeants dream about.

Generals Show How to Salute.

While civilian soldiers turned their heads in unison, to the command "Eyes right!" Gens. Parker and Estes, to the company commanders and the company colors rendered salutes that—the post-parade unofficial cadet committee admitted—were REAL salutes!

It was the final regimental parade and the civilian army of 1600 did itself proud. But after the parade, when all the boys grabbed seats in the big grandstand and got ready to watch the awards of medals and trophies for soldierliness, marksmanship and athletics, no one could very well expect 100 per cent discipline.

A few parents, astonished at (1) gains in weight on the part of their sons or (2) losses in weight, if the sons were portly when they left home, or (3) the newly acquired slang vocabularies of their offspring, sat with shining faces in the grandstand. But their presences did not stem, to any degree, the barrage of wisecracks that showered from ranks of khaki-clad youths who, 30 minutes before, had marched with silent graven faces.

Rookie Wisecracks.

"Yea for Company C! Took all the sports trophies!"

"Hey don't forget old Howitzer Company, the cleanest outfit in camp."

"Yeab, Howitzer Company's the broom and bucket brigade."

Smiling Captains, who up to yesterday morning had exacted the letter of discipline, let the yells go uncurbed. The two Generals on the raised platform where the trophies and medals were stacked, looked on amusedly.

Each company cheered itself hoarse as its commander climbed to the stage to receive its awards. Youths who had won popularity through their prowess at fisticuffs, or broad jumping, or pistol shooting, were cheered and applauded as they gathered their medals.

"There's Tom Smart."

"Hey, Tommy, the old pistol shot."

"Old Johnny Temple, best basic soldier!"

Winner in Hospital.

A search was made for Temple, who carried off several medals, including an award for being the most soldierly youth among the first-year men in camp. He was found to be in the hospital.

"Poor Johnny!"

"Leave those green apples alone, John."

Temple, unshaven, was allowed to leave the hospital long enough to collect his laurels and pose for a photographer.

"Billy Baum, the heavyweight socker, 'ray for Company E."

Carl F. G. Meyer, named as civilian representative of the Secretary of War, for the training camp of the St. Louis district, awarded the athletic trophies and cups, after Gen. Estes had spoken briefly, praising the earnestness of the cadets and declaring the 1929 encampment "the best we have ever had at Jefferson Barracks."

Parker for Athletics.

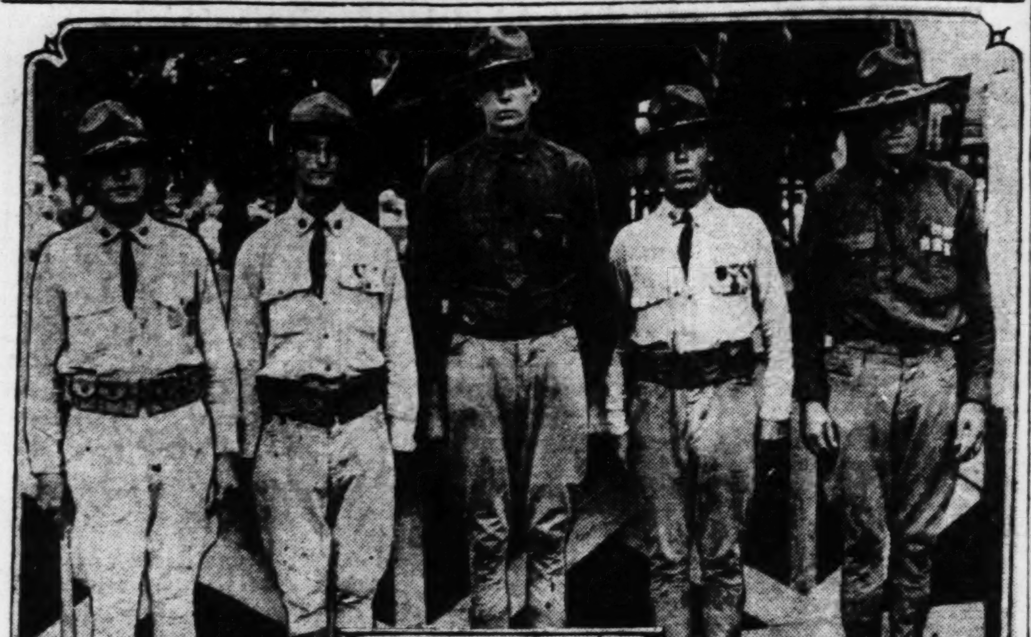
Roy Miller, commander of the Skinker Post of the American Legion, spoke briefly of the late Capt. Alexander R. Skinker, World War hero killed in the Argonne, and for whom this year's encampment is named. Capt. O. B. Prosser, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Maj. Miller, of the Missouri Military Order of the World War, also spoke briefly, and presented trophies.

Gen. Parker conferred the awards for purely military merits, explaining first that although he believed in strict military training, he also subscribed to the view that athletics are essential in conditioning soldiers. He reminded the cadets of the battle of Waterloo, which was really won, he declared, "on the playing fields of Eton."

Four hundred medals and trophies were awarded. Many a lad, proficient on the athletic field and the rifle range, was able to appear following the ceremonies with a shirt front lined solidly with ribbons and bronze. First Lieut. P. E. Hunt, commander of Company C, which took most of the athletic events, staggered from the grandstand under an armful of silver and bronze cups—company awards given into his custody.

The cadets will be able to wear their medals for a scant three days. The camp closes Tuesday, when the youths will be returned to their homes. Tonight and tomorrow, the 1600 cadets are to remain at the post. They begin to turn in their equipment tomorrow afternoon.

Winners of Awards at Training Camp



Above, Channing Beasley of Marion, Ill., best all-round ballplayer; Jas. A. Maguire of Little Rock, Ark., best pistol shot; J. W. Maguire, qualified sharpshooter; Thomas Smart of St. Louis, most excellent fourth-year student in the camp; Norman Ramsey, Grayville, Ill., best track and field man.

Below, 17-year-old John Temple, Jr., of Pine Bluff, Ark., the most excellent first-year cadet. The award was based on showings on the drill ground, the athletic field and the rifle range.

CONVICT DEFRAUDS CELL MATE OF $500

Missouri Penitentiary Prisoner in Solitary Confinement After "Selling Parole."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 3.—S. T. Napper, Greene County convict in the Missouri Penitentiary, was so convincing in cell-room conversations about his influence with the State Penal Board that a cellmate was persuaded to give Napper $500 to obtain a parole for him, prison officials learned today. The officials investigated after Napper's sudden prosperity and purchases of luxuries at the prison commissary aroused suspicion.

Napper was placed in solitary confinement, where he will have no opportunity for salesmanship. Warden Rudolph said charges of operating a confidence game and obtaining money under false pretenses would be filed against him in Cole County Circuit Court.

The investigation also disclosed several bills in Napper's cell which had been raised from $1 to $10.

Warden Rudolph said Napper and Earl Jones, St. Louis convict, were implicated in raising of the bills, and said they would be placed under Federal charges of counterfeiting.

The convict who placed $500 worth of confidence in Napper's boasts of influence with the Penal Board is Hugo Scurlock, 46 years old, of Schuyler County, who has served three months of a three-year sentence for stealing sheep.

According to the Warden Napper admitted the transaction after guards found approximately $300 hidden in Napper's cell and in the lining of his shoes. He and Scurlock were cellmates. The only thing Napper has done for Scurlock, the Warden said, was to obtain from the prison offices a parole hearing application blank, which is furnished to any convict upon request.

Scurlock told the Warden that he asked Napper to get a parole Napper said it would require $250, Scurlock said, and this was obtained by Scurlock from relatives. Scurlock said Napper told him the parole would be forthcoming within seven months, but he became impatient and asked for immediate action. He said Napper told him this would require another $250, which was obtained by Scurlock from relatives and paid to Napper, with a stipulation the parole be obtained by Sept. 1.

Purchases of silk underwear and other supplies by Napper at the prison store caused guards to investigate. Napper is serving a five-year sentence from Greene County for highway robbery. Jones, also in solitary confinement in connection with finding of the raised bills, is serving a two-year sentence from St. Louis for issuing a worthless check. He served a previous term in the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan.

"Gentlemen, make mine a horse"

says:

H. C. Witwer

famous American Humorist

THIS is the time of the year for the writer to launch his nation-wide "Own Your Own Horse" movement, my masters, because it's almost New Model Time when auto proprietors gets fit to be tied.

Gangs of skilled workmen is busy oiling up adjectives that will make a gooseneck tire-carrier sound more important than the burning of Rome.

Skilled engineers is hunting through dictionaries for bigger and better phrases. A huge force of polishers is dusting off that big word NEW and getting it ready for this year's campaign.

Then after teasing you to watch, look and listen, up goes the curtain on a new model which tells you the designers has had a few more thoughts and got out something which makes your one-year-old car look like the first auto ever concocted.

Next in importance after completely changing the body lines away from last year's, no matter what they was, comes a flock of dazzling improvements which they was able, by some strange magic, to jam onto a car which they had already spent days telling you was twice as perfect as perfect itself. But the mystery kind of fades when you find out that these revolutionary advantages is generally such hair-raisers as door-handles which turns left instead of right; famous Taj Mahal design tail-light, gilt four-leaf clover (and you'll need it) on the instrument board; scientifically balanced rug-rail, etc., etc., and even etc.

By the time you get through reading about the new model you feel like going out to your car which seemed almost new yesterday and see can you find any arrow heads or other relics under the seat. If it'll run at all, which seems out of the question after seeing the list of all the improvements it hasn't got, you'd hardly dare roll around in it in the day times because people would always be asking you did you still wear peg-top pants.

Then the worst comes to the worst and you find the wife has been showed about the new model by that woman next door, which is also the one who's kid give Junior measles. So the next time you drive the car up to the door of your igloo she looks at it like it was something puss dragged in on a rainy night and makes some remark such as don't you think the new model has got this looking like something Washington might have slept in and hadn't you better turn it in for one of those new models even if it does hit us some four or five hundred dollars depreciation.

It's right then that the salesman of the Witwer "Own Your Own Horse" movement will get your name on what I'll call the dotted line, if I'm allowed to coin a expression. The advantages, unlike Paris, may be saw at a single glance. You see, patrons, when you own your own equine you don't have to toss about nights worrying that somebody will bring out a new model on you.

It don't make no difference whether you get a tall horse or a short horse or even a Shetland pony, if the latter is your price class. Whichever make of steed you select, you can bet all the tea in China that no smart horse manufacturer's coming out with a new horse which has streamline legs and square ears and makes a bum out of your last year's horse.

You can stake yourself to a July 1929 horse without being afraid to read the papers for fear of seeing that the new and improved late 1929 palfreys will be displayed next week. For some reason, the horse makers don't go over their horses each year and suddenly find out they was a couple hundred things they forgot to put on 'em and if you had one, why, that's your hard luck.

So my earnest plea to each and every inhabitant of the globe (and that means you too, you little Esquimauxs you) is to think these facts over and join the great Witwer movement in saying, "Gentlemen, make mine a horse!"

H. C. Witwer

"Mr. Witwer," say we, "Make yours a Reo"

Reo is not, and never has been a "yearly model" car.

This does not mean that Reo stands still. Reo, throughout its long career, has always marched at the head of the parade in the automobile industry—left-hand drive, center control, balloon tires, the new world-famous internal-hydraulic brakes.

But Reo has never "saved up" these revolutionary advances for incorporation in "new models." They were embodied in Reo as soon as Reo's usual period of testing had proved them to be worthy of a place in this car.

That's why the Reo of today represents, not just another "model" in a long succession of "new models"—but the proud result of a never-stopping, never-ending evolution in motor car manufacture.

That's why, when the "new model" ballyhoo starts in a few weeks, Reo will be conspicuously absent.

So, if you were looking for an automobile that would be outmoded in a short twelve months from now, we would beg you to excuse us—we haven't that kind of car.

But if you are looking for an automobile which, like the very highest priced cars, has that graceful simplicity of design that never goes out of style—a car whose smart lines stay smart...

If you are looking for an automobile whose advanced construction has won and held for it the title of the "Engineers' Ideal Car"—whose motor will be the standard of comparison in 1930 as it has been in 1928 and 1929—whose brakes are known throughout the world as the best and safest made...

If this is the kind of a car you want—a car you can own and drive and be proud of, not for one year, but for four, five or even ten...

Then there is just one motor car for you to buy—the Reo Flying Cloud!

MRS. WILLEBRANDT TELLS OF HER STORY

"Nothing but the Truth," She Says of Series to Appear in Post-Dispatch.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON Aug. 3.—Now it can be told and Mrs Mabel Walker Willebrandt is telling it.

In a series of articles to be published in St. Louis exclusively by the Post-Dispatch, she has written the story of eight years of prohibition enforcement from the inside, as she saw it, in her capacity of Assistant Attorney-General charged with the duty, among others, of the general conduct of cases under the national prohibition act.

Some of the reasons why she wrote the articles, and what, in part, they will disclose, she told briefly today, in the intervals of moving into her new suite of offices in which she is resuming her private law practice.

"I wrote them," she said, "because so many stories have been told of and about me, that it seemed to me more satisfactory, more dignified, to tell the story of the last eight years once and for all and close the book on those pages of my life and work.

"What specifically are some of the things I am telling? Well, first and last and all the time, facts, and facts and again facts. With names and dates.

Expects to Shock Some.

"Some of these facts will surprise a great many people, shock others and seriously displease, I suspect, a considerable number of friends as well as foes of prohibition.

"That is because I have told the plain, unvarnished truth, hewing to the line and letting the chips fall where they may in dealing frankly with this difficult national problem. It is my hope that those who are sufficiently interested to read what I have written may at least be enabled thereby to get clearer and less emotional view of the actual task and obligations involved.

"I have written only the truth as I see it, as in fact I saw it through eight years of personal dealing with a great number of officials, the courage of some of whom had been sapped to the vanishing point by political ambition, and with certain spineless others who were suffering from that Washington malady, 'Governmentitis,' which is another way of saying "never displease anyone and do as little as possible."

"Others, too, there were of whom I have written. Those courageous and fearless ones, some of whom were fired for daring to buck the politicians.

"I have told the stories of some of the 'higher-ups,' who have so mishandled prohibition enforcement that it will take many years for the country to recover from the harm they did.

Source of the Supply.

"Some will not like to hear that a good deal of the source of supply of liquor today is coming from an avoidable looseness in handling permits and from the strangle hold on enforcement machinery by certain alcohol lobbyists.

"There are illustrations, too, which may be displeasing here and there, of how prohibition enforcement has suffered at the hands of its friends.

"But these facts cannot be left out of a fair picture of the national situation.

"They explain some of the reasons why prohibition has not succeeded, but in outlining them I well know I shall probably displease an even greater number of people than I seem to have displeased already.

"Yes, I have told the facts about my speeches during the last presidential campaign. I have even told the things that amused me most and hurt me most in that curious and hectic time.

"But what I have especially tried to do is to present clearly the facts in regard to prohibition enforcement, its comedies and tragedies, for they must be seen clearly and understood as an essential precedent to any intelligent appraisal of the present situation."

PROCTER & GAMBLE SELLS J. P. MORGAN 250,000 SHARES

Cincinnati Soap Manufacturers Arrange also for Issue of No-Par Stock.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 3.—The Procter & Gamble Co., through its president, William Cooper Procter, today announced the sale of 250,000 of its shares to J. P. Morgan & Co., New York bankers.

Stockholders of the soap company, at a special meeting here today, also formally announced their approval of a plan to change the present common stock with a $20 par value to no-par value on a basis of five shares of new for one old.

The stockholders approved the resolution releasing all pre-emptive rights on the shares sold to the Morgan concern, of which 150,000 shares were disposed of at $66.67 a share and the remaining $100,000 shares at $80. The Morgan sale was completed, it was said, at a time when the old stock sold at $378 a share.

Procter said application had been made to place the new issue on the New York Stock Exchange and probably would be effective Aug. 12. This step was taken, officials said, to broaden the scope of ownership in the firm.

DEMOCRATS RAKE SMOOT'S SLIDING SUGAR SCHEDULE

Senator Harrison Calls Tariff Proposal "A Fine Scheme to Fix and Manipulate Prices."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Democrats today attacked the proposal of Senator Smoot of Utah for a sliding scale for sugar tariff rates which was carried by the Utah Senator to Virginia for discussion with President Hoover at the executive's fishing preserve in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi, a member of the Finance Committee, of which Smoot is chairman, described the proposal as "a fine scheme to fix and manipulate prices," and Senator Connally of Texas, also a Democratic member of the committee, asserted that the sliding scale was sure to cause a higher rate on sugar than at present.

Considerable interest was manifested in Washington in the visit of Smoot to Mr. Hoover's mountain lodge where it was regarded as certain that the sugar schedule would form the principal topic for discussion. Smoot's committee will hold a hearing on the proposal Wednesday and committee action is expected to follow promptly.

Borah Not Content.

There are indications that a number of prominent Republican Senators, including Senator Borah of Idaho, also are not wholly satisfied that the Smoot plan will prove efficacious for meeting the President's wish to frame a sugar schedule which will benefit both the producer and consumer.

Whether the tariff bill will be ready for Senate attention on Aug. 19, the date set for that body to re-convene, depends on the progress made by the Finance Committee next week. Chairman Smoot has ordered night sessions to speed up the work, but there has been some discussion of notifying the Senate membership that three-day recesses will be taken between Aug. 19 and Sept. 3 in order to give the committee more time.

Senator Harrison said in his statement, issued by the Democratic National Committee, that little can be hoped for from the conference between Smoot and the President. A similar conference, he asserted, was held by the President with House leaders when the tariff bill was before that body.

"A Sugar Coated Plan."

"No one at that time heard of the President raising a protest against any part of the House program," Harrison said. "It may be that it is the aroused force of public opinion that has caused this important conference in Virginia; or it may be that Senator Smoot wants to sell his sugar-coated plan to the President."

Senator Connally said the objective of Chairman Smoot was to increase the price of sugar and he added that the sliding scale would do this.

"Its design is to fix the price," Connally asserted. "It also will fix the consumer. The sliding scale will slide upward rather than downward. When stripped of words and theories, sugar will cost more than it costs now. That is what Senator Smoot wants. Is that what President Hoover wants? Is that the President's plan to 'protect the consumer?'"

FIVE KILLED, TWO MISSING AFTER OIL BARGE EXPLOSION

One Man Blown 75 Feet to Top of Loading Crane at Kosmosdale, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3.—An explosion of oil fumes this afternoon wrecked a 170-foot steel tank barge moored at Kosmosdale, Ky., 20 miles west of here on the Ohio River, killing five men. Two other men who were on the barge were missing and were thought to be dead. The detonation reduced the big barge to a twisted mass of junk which sank at its mooring.

One of the dead men, Leslie Underwood of Louisville, was blown to the top of a loading crane, 75 feet above the river level.

The barge had discharged a cargo of oil and two inches of oil remained in the tank. The seven men were members of a repair crew and were believed to have been engaged in the task of burning paint from the barge.

The dead besides Underwood are: Murray Jockel, West Point, Ky.; Alfred Sauer, Louisville, Ky.; E. O. Jopline and Cleve Skeeters of Kosmosdale. The missing are Franklin Reeder and William Welderly, both of Kosmosdale.

Local jewelers were unable to decide its value, but they think it is worth about $2000.

FREED OF 'NOW ON' SENTENCE WHEN WIFE PAYS DEBT

John Paulik Had Owed Estate of Dead Friend for Which He Was Executor.

John Paulik, who on June 27 was sentenced to jail "from now on" for contempt through failure to pay a debt to the estate of a dead friend, was released yesterday when his wife paid the debt. She told Probate Judge Hodgdon that she had borrowed the money from friends and relatives.

Mrs. Paulik paid into court $343.26, which represented the balance due on the debt, $20 attorney fees, $50.05 costs and $28.50 for the board of her husband while he was a prisoner.

Paulik, 52 years old a painter, living at 119 Little Broadway, Luxemburg, owed the estate of Joseph Keller, who died Aug. 9, 1927. He was executor of the estate and frequently was ordered to pay the debt before he was sentenced to jail for contempt of court. He served 38 days.

ITALIAN DEPUTY QUITS POST AFTER GRAFT INQUIRY

Belloni, Former Mayor, Cleared of Irregularities in Milan's $30,000,000 Loan Placed in U. S.

OUSTED FOR WASTE OF CITY'S MONEY

Keen Competition Among New York Banks for Business, Shown in Commission's Report.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

ROME, Aug. 3.—The keen competition of a group of New York banking firms for the privilege of making a $30,000,000 loan to the City of Milan is shown today by the publication of the complete report of the special inquiry into the loan which resulted in the definite dismissal from political activities of Ernesto Belloni, former Mayor of Milan by Premier Mussolini.

It was also shown that the offer of Dillon, Reed & Co., which was accepted by podesta (Mayor) Belloni was less advantageous than some of the other offers, notably the American Bankers, Blair & Co. and the Italia Banca Commerciale.

The decision to accept the terms of Dillon, Read & Co., rested with the cabinet council of which Count Volpi, then treasurery secretary, was informed of Blair's advantageous offer. Among the mountains of documents the commission of inquiry appointed by Mussolini examined a paper in English, dated April 1, 1927, from an agent of Dillon, Read & Co. It offered the loan for Milan at 6.5 per cent payable at par, the emission price being 88.5. The margin bears the "accepted" of Belloni and his signature.

The Italia Banca Commerciale offered a similar loan but at 89 Count Volpi testified before the commission and absolved Belloni from responsibility.

He said that 27 banking firms, most of them American, pressed him to let them float the Milan loan, but those sifted out for the eventual negotiations were J. P. Morgan & Co., Blair & Co., Hallgarten & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Sisto & Co., Harris Forbes, Guaranty Trust Co. and the Bankers' Trust Co. Neither the Dillon Read & Co. offer nor Blair's was among those transmitted to the treasury by Belloni, on March 26.

Placing the Loan.

The name of Dillon Read & Co. first appears in the ministerial archives on March 31. The treasury tried to raise the emission price above 90, a figure which was conceded shortly before on a loan to the city of Rome. Blair then offered a 40-year loan at 6.5 per cent, leaving the emission price open for further negotiation, but Belloni did not answer because the treasury had taken over the negotiations. On April 6 Blair again wrote offering an emission at 90.25 and 6.5 per cent interest, with an emission price of 85 or 90 if the loan were refunded in 25 years.

But April 1 the treasury had engaged with Dillon Read. Count Volpi informed the Council of Ministers about Blair's offer, qualifying it as very advantageous but likely to miss the success of the other Italian loans floated in America. The Milan loan's success was necessary, he said, for Italy's prestige and ulterior operations. The treasury secretary also said that Belloni had morally, if not officially, engaged with Dillon Read & Co. to sign a loan contract within the coming week. Belloni's position was such that the treasury left the final decision to the Council of Ministers, which meant Mussolini, really, because he holds most of the portfolios. The result was the ministerial decree of April 8, 1927, authorizing Milan to conclude the Dillon Read & Co. offer at 6.5 per cent, the interest and principal repayable in 1952. The report stresses the fact that the Dillon Read offer was taken because, considering all things, it was most favorable to Italy's interests.

Although Belloni is cleared of interference in the Dillon Read loan and representatives of the bankers testified before the commission that he asked nothing for himself and did not even meet the American bank's agents until the contract was signed, he comes badly out of the inquiry.

The commission found him guilty of great carelessness and of favoring friends who were utterly unfit for municipal responsibilities and who abused their official position for private ends. The report notes the intense opposition to him in Milan where the wildest rumors are current regarding his newly acquired wealth. These rumors are supported by a sudden radical change in Belloni's mode of living.

Belloni Resigns.

When Mussolini studied the report, which consists of over 1000 pages, he issued orders suspending Belloni from all Fascist activities.

Belloni tonight resigned his membership in the Chamber of Deputies but protested his innocence of the charges of graft in the city administration of Milan which led to his removal.

No Irregularity in Loan, Says Dillon Read & Co.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Dillon, Read & Co., New York investment banking house, which headed the syndicate that offered the $30,000,000 City of Milan loan mentioned in the Belloni scandal, said today in a statement that the company had not been advised of "any shortage or irregularity" connected with the issuance of the loan in this country in 1927.

"All of the proceedings in connection with the issue," said the statement, "were examined and approved by counsel for the American banking group, who were Hughes (Charles E. Hughes), Rounds, Schurman & Dwight of New York, and Coudert Bros. of Paris.

"The proceeds of the loan were paid over in 1927 to the Italian Government's fiscal agent in this country on instructions to the bankers from Count Volpi, then Finance Minister of Italy."

Questions Asked by Edison In Test to Find Youth Best Qualified to Succeed Him

Wilber Huston the Winner Made Grade of 92 in Examination Dealing With Physics, Chemistry, Mathematics and General Subjects.

FOLLOWING is the questionnaire submitted to 49 boys who took the Edison scholarship examination Friday, and which was won by Wilber B. Huston, 16-year-old youth of Port Madison, Wash., whose grade was 92. Four others averaged between 88 and 92.

Physics.

1. Define work, energy and power, and give an illustration of each. How does weight differ from mass? How does force differ from energy? Would a body weigh more or less on the moon than on the earth? Why? Where would bodies weigh nothing?

2. The specific heat of water is 1 and of mercury 0.033; the specific gravity of water is 1 and of mercury 13.6. For a foot-warmer, state which you would choose and why? A two-quart hot-water bottle filled with water at 100 degrees Centigrade or a two-quart flask of mercury at 100 degrees Centigrade.

3. The specific resistance of an alloy is four times as great as that of copper. A copper wire 1000 feet long has the resistance of 40 ohms. How long a wire of the alloy having the same diameter as the copper wire would have the same resistance as the copper wire? Compared to the diameter of the copper wire what diameter of alloy 1000 feet long would have the same resistance as the copper wire?

4. The index of refraction of a glass is 1.5 and of another glass 1.7. If a biconvex lens of the same geometrical design was made of each of the two glasses, how would they differ optically? If they were placed in a transparent liquid of index of refraction 1.6, what effect would each have on a beam of light parallel to its principal axis?

5. The captain of a boat when passing a certain cliff on a summer night heard the echo of his whistle four seconds after blowing. How far away was the cliff? If he repeated this observation from the same point on a day in January, would he notice any change in the time? If so, what and why?

6. The volume of an automobile tire is approximately 900 cubic inches and it is pumped up to a gauge pressure of 60 pounds per square inch. Its temperature is 20 degrees Centigrade. Left in the sun its temperature increased to 35 degrees Centigrade and it exploded. What was the volume of the expanded air directly after the explosion? Could the pressure just prior to the explosion be computed from the above data?

Chemistry.

A set of bottles was known to contain the following powdered substances: Blue vitriol, ultramarine, manganese dioxide, carbon potassium chloride and potassium chlorate, but the labels on the bottles have been destroyed. What tests would you apply, mental as well as physical, which would enable you to correctly and quickly re-label the bottles?

4. If you were nailing a copper sheeting on an exposed surface, what kind of nails would you use and why?

5. Steel producing companies often have large quantities of ammonium sulphate for sale. How does the production of this substance happen to be connected with the iron industry?

6. Balance the following equation by inserting the proper coefficients:

TO SEEK 700-HOUR FLIGHT AT CHICAGO

Three Pilots in Plane Will Attempt to Beat St. Louis Record.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—With a goal of 700 hours in the air, a Stinson Detroiter plane, carrying three pilots, will go aloft tomorrow to begin an endurance flight over the Municipal Airport, weather permitting.

An effort will be made to better the world endurance record set by Dale (Red) Jackson and Forest O'Brine at St. Louis, who stayed up in the St. Louis Robin for 420 hours.

The three pilots for this attempt are Russell Mossman of Chicago, Wilson Herren of Barrington, and Earle Steele. The plane selected is larger than the Curtiss Robin.

Joe Heydon of Cleveland has been chosen to handle the hose on the refueling plane, also a Stinson Detroiter, and another pilot accustomed to handling Stinson ships will be selected as his companion.

One of the features of this flight will be that the craft attempting the record will make all the contacts instead of the refueling ship making them as in all previous attempts.

Plain Coast-to-Coast Round Trips in Endurance Flight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The longest endurance and refueling flight in history is projected for the third week in August, when two army pilots, Capt. Ira Eaker, co-pilot of the famous army endurance Fokker, Question Mark, and Lieut. Bernard Thompson, start from San Francisco in an attempt to make two round trips between San Francisco and New York, and then to fly over the Cleveland (O.) airport until forced to descend.

It is planned to use a standard Boeing high speed, large capacity transcontinental mail plane. This plane will be powered with a Pratt and Whitney 525-horsepower Hornet engine and will bear the name The Shuttle. It is of the type which now flies 50 per cent of the nation's air mail.

The purpose of the flight, the first in which a regular commercial plane weighing three and one-half tons has been used in refueling endurance test in regular flight over an established airway on regular schedule, is two-fold—to determine the feasibility of refueling transcontinental air mail planes and to collect experimental data for the army on cross-country endurance flying.

The plane will operate on the regular transcontinental mail schedule and will carry a limited amount of mail, which will be dropped at various cities on the 2700-mile span between the Golden Gate and the Statue of Liberty. The army pilots hope to remain in the air longer than the recent record made at St. Louis by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine.

FEDERAL DRY OFFICER HELD FOR KILLING FARMER IN RAID

Texan Testifies Cartridge Was Discharged Accidentally When He Stumbled; Had no Search Warrant.

By the Associated Press.

POTEET, Tex., Aug. 3.—Capt. Charles Stevens, Federal prohibition enforcement agent, charged with the murder of Tom Chandler, 43 years old, today testified that a cartridge fired accidentally as he stumbled during a liquor raid on the Chandler farm caused the death of the farmer.

Testimony at the officer's examining trial indicated that the raid yesterday by Stevens, F. H. Hertzel, another Federal prohibition agent, City Marshall Andy Aneson and Robert Lott, Deputy Marshall, was made without a search warrant after the officers had located a still in operation. Lott testified that a weapon supposed to have been in Chandler's hands, was found nearby. He said there was a mark on one of the cartridges indicating that the trigger had been pulled, and that the cartridge failed to discharge.

At the conclusion of the hearing Justice of the Peace N. J. Johnston set Stevens' bond at $2000 and ordered him to appear before the grand jury Oct. 7.

HEAD OF SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION OF EAST ST. LOUIS RESIGNS

Andrew J. Keeley Has Been Publicly Criticised for Practices in Letting Contracts.

Andrew J. Keeley, superintendent of construction for the East St. Louis School Board, has submitted his resignation, effective Sept. 1. His appointed term, which was for one year, expires at that time.

Keeley's administration has been publicly criticised by board members, who charged that contracts were let without competitive bidding and that contractors were employed without proper authorization. Shortly after Keeley went into office he obtained the payment of duplicate vouchers for $445 to a contracting firm of which he had been a member, converting one of them to his own use and later making restitution.

ILLINOIS CALLED CARNIVAL GROUND FOR FAKE DOCTORS

Charges Made at Conference of Medical Association Leaders and State Officials.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Charges that Illinois has become a veritable ground" for unlicensed "healers" and fake physicians were made today at a conference of state officials and police and medical authorities at the headquarters of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association; Dr. Arthur L. Cramp, director of the association's bureau of investigation; Dr. Nathan P. Colwell, director of the association's bureau of medical education and hospitals; Police Commissioner William F. Russell, Clyde I. Backus, assistant director of hte state department of registration and education, and Charles A. Bellows, Assistant State's Attorney in charge of investigating the issuance of fake medical diplomas, were among those attending.

Dr. Fishbein said that all present agreed that during the last few years conditions in Illinois had become as bad as or worse than those in any other state in the matter of unlicensed doctors. A complete survey is to be made as a preliminary to taking steps to revoke the licenses of all unqualified practitioners.

The conference was a result of the disclosure of an alleged ring dealing in fake medical licenses and of the indictment of nine suspected members.

DIVERSITY OF AMERICANS' DRESS PUZZLE TO RUSSIANS

Many of Party Traveling Through Country Reduce Attire to Pajamas.

By the Associated Press.

GROZNY, Aug. 3.—Traveling in 10 big International sleeping cars assigned them by the Soviet Government, the American delegation arrived here today and inspected the extensive oil fields and model hotels for workmen in the center of this autonomous area of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic.

In their diversity of dress the Americans appear to be somewhat of a puzzle to the natives.

One little Russian girl handed a note to Mrs. John L. Senior of Chicago pressing her to take her to America where people dress so well and live so comfortably.

Because of the heat, many of the party, both men and women dressed in pajamas, apparently undisturbed by the amazement of the Russians.

Joseph S. Thompson, president of the Pacific Electric Manufacturing Co., was overcome by the heat at Kislovodsk.

Beat Patients to "Drive Out Devil of Disease"; Ten Others Sent To Prison in Russia.

SAMARA, U. S. S. R., Aug. 3.—Six monks have been sentenced to death for practicing mystic rites in which a poor girl was killed and for maintaining at Vavilova Dola an anti-soviet commune. Ten others were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

In 1909 several monks went into the Samara steppe and far from other human habitations dug several cells. The fame of alleged cures spread rapidly and many peasants walked to the monastery from distant villages to hear the peal of mysterious bells and to see "flaming tongues of heaven," which were simply rockets.

Witnesses testified that the monks often stretched a patient across the threshold and lashed him with rods to "drive out the devil of disease." They also were accused of practicing vice under the guise of confession and counsel to young women.

FIVE JERICO SPRINGS BANK OFFICERS MAKE $15,000 BOND

They Are Charged with Accepting Deposits When Depository Was Insolvent.

By the Associated Press.

JERICO SPRINGS, Mo., Aug. 3.—Charged with accepting deposits while they had knowledge that the bank of Jerico Springs was in a failing conditiono, five of its officers today were at liberty under bond totaling $15,000. R. B. Creager of Texas Sues on Basis of Articles Linking His Name With Graft.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Aug. 3.—Damages totaling $1,000,000 are asked for by R. B. Creager, Republican National Committeeman from Texas, in two libel suits filed in Federal Court here today against P. F. Collier & Son Co., publishers of Collier's Weekly.

The suits are based on alleged libelous attacks contained in two articles published in the weekly in which Creager's name was linked with graft and patronage irregularities in Texas.

The articles were "Jobs for Jack," written by William G. Sheppard and published in the June 15 issue, and "High-Handed and Hell-Bent," by Owen P. White, published in the June 22 issue.

FIRST BOOTLEG KING FREED OF INDICTMENT

Walkerville Liquor Merchant Now in Italy, So U. S. Drops Charge.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 3.—James Cooper, $10,000,000 liquor king, was today freed by Federal Judge Charles C. Simons of a 1925 indictment charging bootlegging.

The Government washed its hands in the case of America's first bootleg king and called the case closed when it requested the indictment be quashed.

Cooper, a Walkerville (Canada) liquor merchant, is reported to have made $10,000,000 in the first seven years of prohibition.

The indictment was dismissed on recommendation of Assistant United States District Attorney Fred R. Walker. He told the Court the Government had spent a large sum of money endeavoring to get Cooper into the United States, where he could have been arrested, but that the effort had been futile.

Cooper is living in Italy and seems to be planning to stay there, Walker said.

Roy Grant Waters and William Medford, former employes of Cooper, also were named in the indictment. They are said to have played so unimportant a part in the conspiracy that it is not worth while to bring them to trial.

In the Canadian liquor investigation in Ottawa, it was disclosed that Cooper would receive carload lots of liquor in Walkerville which were consigned to G. Shearer. Then it would be loaded in other cars and billed as hay, consigned to Mexico. Although the cars would be unloaded in Detroit, they would continue empty to the destination in Mexico, where charges would be paid.

SEDALIA MAN FOUND WITH PISTOL AT HEAD IN CHICAGO

Detectives Follow John Montgomery, Who Admitted He Faked Drowning in St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Chicago detectives persisted today in their story of having burst into a North Side rooming house last night to find, John Montgomery, 32 years old, Assistant County Prosecutor at Sedalia, Mo., pointing a pistol at his head. Montgomery had denied, upon arriving at Sedalia today, that he had tried to take his life.

The Mississippi River at St. Louis had been dragged for Montgomery's body since three weeks ago, when a note was found on the Eads Bridge there indicating his suicide.

Capt. Charles H. Elliott, skipper on a yacht here, said tonight that Montgomery had worked on the ship with him, giving the name of John Mont. When letters came addressed to John Montgomery, Elliott said he questioned the man and that he admitted he had faked a suicide at St. Louis. Elliott asserted that Montgomery had left his ship three days ago.

Chicago detectives said their suspicions were aroused yesterday by Montgomery's actions and that they followed him to his rooming house, suspecting he might be a burglar. They broke into his room, they said, to find him pointing the revolver at himself.

SPECIAL STAMPS PAY EXPENSES OF LEAGUE MEETING IN MADRID

Transferred Entertainment Outlay to Royal Household, Club and Municipality.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MADRID, Aug. 3.—Not only did Primo de Rivera greatly enhance his political prestige by playing host to the Council of the League of Nations in June, but he made the conference pay for itself, according to the final balance sheet of the Spanish government just made public.

The secretariat of the Council accepted Madrid's invitation on the condition that the Spanish government would pay the differences in expenses over what would nominally be incurred in Geneva. This Primo de Rivera consented to do. The astute dictator transferred all the expense of the entertainment to the municipality of Madrid, the Royal Household and the Beaux Arts Club, all of which gave receptions to the visiting foreigners.

Then the government issued a special series of postage stamps to commemorate the visit of the League. From the sale of the special stamps, enough was turned in to the treasury to defray the operating expenses of the council session and have a profit, too.

TWO LOST FROM SCIENTIFIC EXPEDITION IN SOUTH SEAS

Disappeared in Boat Last April; Austral Leader Arrives at Cristobal.

CRISTOBAL, Panama Canal Zone, Aug. 3.—News of the death of two members of the Austral scientific expedition in the South Sea Islands was received here today with the arrival of Gustav Davidson, leader of the expedition, from Tahiti, Oceania.

The victims were William B. Hargrave of Colfax, Wash., and Phineas E. Haskevitch of Paris. They left the island of Raivavae in a native catamaran last April and disappeared. Search for them failed to disclose any trace.

The expedition left New York May 19, 1928, to explore and conduct scientific research in the islands of the South Seas.

Davidson, who is a holder of two degrees from Columbia University, lived at 123 West Ninety-third street, New York City, before he left upon the expedition.

He explained that he and fellow scientists had long been interested in living conditions in the Austral Island group and the natives of that isolated region, which is so rarely visited by white men.

It was the intention of the scientists making up the expedition to study the language of the natives and their biological history to determine their origin and their possible relationship with the primitive people of the oriental mainland.

The Austral Island group lies about 600 miles south of Tahiti. Davidson expected to use material from the trip for a book which will be an addition to a number of other books on travel and adventure he has written.

MISSOURI RIVER, 50 FEET DEEP, CUTS THROUGH CORNING ROAD

Congressman Hopkins to Make Personal Request to War Department for Aid.

CORNING, Mo., Aug. 3.—Still creeping slowly toward this town, the Missouri River tonight was ravaging the highway south of here for a distance of 100 yards and at some points had cut its way across the road. Great chunks of earth could be heard splashing into the stream, which is approximately 50 feet deep near the cuttings.

Soundings made today showed that at some points the water was 52 feet deep, 12 feet from the face of the newly-formed shoreline. It also was found that bar land was forming, thus keeping the stream within a narrow channel.

Representatives of the district War Department Engineers' office in Kansas City, who inspected the damage, will make a report of their findings Monday. Congressman David J. Hopkins, of the Fourth Missouri District, said he would go to Washington soon to make a request for aid from the Department.

A. M. Rundle, spokesman for residents, said tonight the plight of farmers owning land near the river and the Big Tarkio drainage ditch is becoming desperate. They are unable to obtain real estate loans as bankers do not consider their land a proper risk, he said.

BIG BUSINESS CLOSED BOOK TO FRANCE, SAYS SIEGFRIED

Author of "America Comes of Age" Discusses His Country's Characteristics.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 3.—"France has ceased to be interested in world affairs and 'the export complex' scarcely exists in that country," Andre Siegfried of Paris, author of "America Comes of Age" and economic expert of the French foreign office, said in an address before the institute of politics tonight.

"Big business is a closed book to the Frenchman, who is still as eager as he was in the middle ages to create a masterpiece, and still old fashioned enough to linger over a fine bit of work," Siegfried said.

"What is to become of France? Economically she ought to continue along the road of individuality and quality, but she is disposed if necessary, and is certainly capable of, evolution towards mass production.

"Politically, however, she will remain a community of small people, consecrated to a narrow individualism, jealously guarding their own economic traditions, and totally indifferent to the mystical passion for production that is intoxicating and transfiguring the world of our time."

BRITISH VISIT VALLEY FORGE

Spot Belongs to World, Says U. S. Senator Thomas.

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Aug. 3.—With the British flag displayed for the first time in history at Valley Forge chapel today, United States Senator Thomas of Oklahoma said before several hundred representatives of the British War Veterans of America and other patriotic societies that "the acres where Washington's army suffered in the winter of 1777 belong not to the people of one state alone, but to those of the entire nation and of the world."

"This spot which the British evacuated 152 years ago, and to which they are returning today, should be made a monument that will bring the entire nation closer together," Thomas said. "The property should be the possession of the United States Government." The visit of the British veterans was a part of the week's program commemorating the beginning of the World War 15 years ago.

WOMAN SAYS SHE LIED TO SEND MAN TO PRISON

Retracts Story That Convicted Albert Eichorn of Michigan Murder in 1917.

By the Associated Press.

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 3.—A Michigan murder case of more than a decade ago again was the center of official interest today following the repudiation yesterday by Mrs. Ann Gilson Mimnaugh of Kenosha, Wis., of testimony which was instrumental in sending Albert Eichorn of Alma, Mich., to prison for life.

Eichorn was convicted of killing Beatrice Epler, 18-year-old Alma girl, who was found strangled near her home in September, 1917.

Mrs. Mimnaugh testified that Eichorn and the girl had left her home together after a party the night of the murder. In her retraction yesterday the woman declared they had never been at her her home.

Mrs. Mimnaugh says she gave her testimony under threats made by a man named Beaudry. Officials today said they did not know the whereabouts of Beaudry, whose statement would be essential in the reopened case.

Burial will be in Mt. Sinai Cemetery. Mrs. Loeb, who was 74 years old, was the widow of Leon Loeb and a daughter of David Cole, pioneer St. Louisan. She resided at Salisbury during the latter years of her life. She is survived by two sons, Ben Loeb, of Ottawa, Kan., and Sidney, of Bethany, Mo., and one brother, Moses Cole, pioneer merchant of Harper, Kan.

WHEAT DECLINE CREDITED TO PRIMARY MOVEMENT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—With immense primary receipts reported, 50 per cent more for the week than last year, wheat today dropped to 10c a bushel under Monday's figures. There was a report received that on account of the extraordinary big movement of winter wheat from rural sources, Kansas City was sending 1,000,000 bushels to Duluth at 13c under the current price of Chicago December delivery. On the other hand, exporters appeared to be doing a liberal business in domestic wheat today, but this circumstance was without much evident effect as a counterbalance.

Primary receipts of domestic wheat reached the huge total of 37,012,000 bushels for the week, compared with 24,497,000 bushels a year ago.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy at 1¾c to 2⅜c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1⅛c to 2½c off, oats ⅛c to 1¾c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c.

Good additional rains in corn territory, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, contributed to wheat weakness by pulling corn prices down. The corn market was apparently unaffected by reports of four successive days of temperatures above 100 in Kansas. Oats gave way with corn.

Provisions were easier owing to downturns in the value of hogs.

Lower prices for wheat early today resulted from selling associated with big receipts here 7,105,000 bu. for the week against 2,825,000 bu. last week.

Advices of liberal export business overnight failed to act as an offset. Opening ¼c to 1⅜c off, wheat afterward underwent a decided additional setback. Corn and oats turned weaker also, with corn starting ¼c to 1¼c lower, and subsequently continuing downgrade. Provisions were easy.

General letting go of insecure margined holdings of wheat future deliveries developed as prices declined under pressure of continued large arrivals of wheat at domestic terminals markets. Many standing orders to sell out at various set limits so as to put a stop to losses were automatically forced into operation as prices gave way. Commission buying enlarged somewhat after the price breaks, but the demand lacked vigor compared to what has often been seen of late.

Further good rains in parts of the corn belt helping to relieve anxiety as to the progress of the corn crop were a factor contributing not only to downward trends in corn values but also accelerating the fall of prices for wheat. Unfavorable corn crop conditions, however, were again reported noted in the Southwest, where someof the complaints of late have originated.

GRAINS DOWN AT FINAL SESSION OF THE WEEK

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 3.—Wheat and corn closed lower at the weekend session though up from the low for day. Rain in corn territory was credited with buying, selling into that market while primary receipts of wheat and reported prospective moveemnt were called factors in price trend in that market.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was mostly 1 and 2 cents lower, with best No. 2 and No. 3 at the full downturn. Cheaper grades were better sustained. Light test No. 3s were unchanged to ½c off, and some of the garlicky grades sold at Friday's levels. There was a fair demand furnished by local elevator interests and mill order buyers. Late in the session, selected starch types No. 2 red were selling at $1.36; 58-lb dark wheat at $1.34; good to choice No. 3s at $1.32 to $1.33; average run 56@56½-lb wheat at $1.31, dark or high moisture wheat at $1.30½. Light garlicky was taken at 4c discount medium at 9@10c and heavy at 11@14c under straight grades. Hard wheat sold at ½c to 2c lower prices. There was a fair elevator demand, but limited mill purchasing. Late sales ordinary No. 2 were at $1.31½ No. 3s, $1.30½. Basis 8@9¼c under Chicago September figure for No. 1 hard, 9½@10c under for No. 2 hard. No. 2 hard 12.37 per cent and No. 2 dark hard 12.76 per cent protein sold at $1.36 and $1.39. No. 3s 12 per cent to 12.37 per cent protein at $1.31.

White corn was 3½c to 4c lower, with premiums down sharply, while other kinds showed declines of ½c to 1½c and a slight gain on options. The demand was fair. Industries and order buyers took the offerings. Oats were off 1c to 1½c, with No. 3 white moving fairly evenly at prices 3c and 3½c below the Chicago September figure. Offerings cleared well, with shippers the chief buyers.

Opening fractionally lower, wheat futures ranged down more than 2c early, following a downturn at Chicago where the week's receipts were 7,105,000 bushels, compared with 2,825,000 a year ago. There was a report of liberal overnight export business. Liverpool wheat closed ⅝d to ¾d lower. Winnipeg ranged down 3c early. Corn here ranged down more than a cent early.

September wheat opened at $1.41: December wheat $1.49⅛: September corn $1.05 and December corn 99¾c.

Wheat receipts which were 449,400 bu. compared with 621,600 bu. last week and 516,000 bu. last year include 240 cars local and 81 cars through. Corn receipts which were 58,800 bu. compared with 106,400 bu. last week and 43,400 bu. last year included 31 cars local and 11 cars through. Oats receipts which were 127,600 bu. compared with 79,200 bu. last week and 50,000 bu. last year included 55 cars local and 3 cars through. Hay receipts were 17 cars local and 5 cars through.

SELECTED ISSUES IN UTILITY GROUP MOVE UP SHARPLY

Laclede Gas With 18-Point Advance Leads Day's Advance on New York Exchange.

LACLEDE GAS CO. STOCK ADVANCES 68 POINTS TO RECORD PRICE, 323

LACLEDE GAS STOCK was a high flier of the utility shares on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, mounting 18 points after soaring 50 points the previous day. The advance of 68 points carried the stock to a record price of 323. Trade was not large and the full upturn was not held. The low point for 1929 was 231½.

Many utility shares recorded new high during the bull movement in this group of securities.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Aggressive bullish operations in selected issues in today's stock market sent shorts to cover who had been expecting a week-end reaction, and sustained the general upward trend of prices. Trading was moderately active, 1,842,080 shares changing hands in the two hours of trading.

Operations for the advance again centered in the utilities, but a notable assortment of rail, metal, motor and miscellaneous shares joined in the forward movement. Week-end liquidations was for the most part quickly absorbed, although gains were reduced somewhat during the last half hour. The market took but passing notice of the overnight announcement of a gain of approximately $400,000,000 in stock exchange member borrowings during July, making a gain of more than $800,000,000 in the past two months.

Inured to Larger Loans.

Wall street is becoming inured to sharp gains in brokers' loans. As long as there seems to be no general agreement among bankers as to whether the absorption of funds by the stock market reduces or liberates funds for the use of business, Wall street looks for no more restrictive measures on the part of the Federal Reserve system.

Although call money was a little easier yesterday, holding 10 per cent all day, which rate carried over the week-end, comparatively tight money is expected next week, as Aug. 1 dividend and interest checks return to the banks for collection. Also, New York banks are expected further to reduce their Federal Reserve borrowings. Traders, however, are not inclined to worry about high money rates as long price trends continue upward.

There was nothing in the day's meager industrial news to influence the market. Week-end reviews reported little change in the generally pleasing conditions. Commission house advices to customers were varied, many increasing their buying recommendations, while some pointed to possibility of extensive distribution being part of current trade and continued to advocate extreme caution.

Laclede Gas Leads.

The further bidding up of the utilities carried the index of 20 leading utility stocks up 5 points to another record level. Laclede Gas, which soared 50 points yesterday, mounted 18 points more today, but lost much of its gain in realizing. Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas & Electric, General Public Service, Pacific Lighting, Southern California Edison and People's Gas sold up 2 to 7 points to new peaks. Stone & Webster sold close to its record price.

Westinghouse Electric displaced General Electric as a market leader, while the latter was depressed by profit taking. Westinghouse was bid up 16 points to a record price at 231. There were rumors of a splitup, an excellent first half earnings report, and plant expansion plans. American Telephone mounted a point to 292, a new top, then encountered realizing, closing with a small net loss. American Can, International Telephone, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Hollander & Son, and Phillips Jones reached record high territory in moderate gains, and crown cork and seal was sent up 8 points to a new top.

Revived interest in the metals and motors was again apparent. International Silver and International Nickel rose 3 and 4 points, respectively, while American Smelting, Greene Cananea and Kennecott were well bought. Nash was a leader of the motors, rising 4 points. Auburn shot up 10 points, regaining most of yesterday's loss, then fell back 6 from the top. Some of the rails made good headway, including Delaware and Hudson, New York Central and Union Pacific. Pennsylvania, however, sagged more than a point.

Radio Soft Spot.

Radio was a soft spot, slipping back about 2 points. Maytag, a recent favorite in the low priced [illegible] suffered a similar loss. Case Threshing, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Sears Roebuck [illegible]

Commodities were irregular. [illegible] lost about a cent a bushel.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly foreign exchange market review says:

"Continued heavy loss of gold by the Bank of England and the failure of that bank to raise its discount rate as a protective measure were outstanding features of the market for foreign exchange during the past week. Gold holdings of the bank decreased approximately $40,000,000 according to the weekly statement, and the reserve ratio to liabilities dropped to 28.23 per cent from 38.7 per cent in the previous week. This represented the sharpest drop recorded in some time for any one week. In the early part of the dealings sterling was buoyed by reports that the bank rate would be increased in an effort to offset the continuous drain on gold. Sterling reflecting these rumors advanced sharply to $4.85 9-16 for cables, but when it became apparent that there would be no advance this week sterling declined. It is, however, the opinion here that in view of the continued loss of gold some such action eventually would have to occur. The season of the year is rapidly approaching when Great Britain will be called upon to finance her purchases of grain and other commodities, which ordinarily has an adverse effect on sterling. London bills finished at $4.85 3-16 for cables. In the French bank statement there was shown an increase of 514,000,000 francs in gold holdings or about $20,000,000. Francs sold as high as 3.92½ for cables. Other Europeans moved narrowly in quiet dealings. Far Easterns were mixed. Canadian funds in New York were firmer toward the close ending at 99.71 compared with 99.68 earlier in the week.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Foreign exchange quotations were as follows:

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Cotton goods prices were firmly maintained and some business was done in print cloths. A number of specialties of print cloth yarns were of interest. Fine goods merchants reported a fair week for the time of year. Little new business was reported in burlaps and no material change in the Calcutta market was apparent. Coverts and broadcloths were in demand in wool goods markets with no spots available. Deliveries of silk to American mills during month estimated at 53,852 bales against 46,504 bales in June. Raw spot silk market prices up in New York.

ALUMINUM CO. STOCK LEADS RANGE ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Curb exchange stocks moved irregularly higher in the face of active profit taking in today's hort session under the leadership of the investment trusts and the utilities. Several issues made wide gains, with an extreme of 49½ points netted by Aluminum Company.

There was little in the day's news to influence the market, and traders seemed to ignore the increase in member loans reported by the New York Stock Exchange. Some quarters are looking for easier money next week.

Electric Bond & Share resumed its leadership of the utilities, as the Insull group of stocks encountered heavy realizing. Bond & Share, Electric Investors, and Northern States Power "A" rose more than 1 to 3¼, the last touching a new high. Central States Electric preferred shot up 28 points to a new high at 179. Insull Utility Investment shot up to 160, a new top, and then reacted to 142 and closed at 143 for a net loss of 3⅛. Middle West Utilities lost 7. The report of electrical output in the United States in June, showed 7,768,790,000 kilowatt hours used.

In the investment trust group new highs were reached by Capital Administration "A," Guardian Investors, Southern Corporation and Utility Equities, with the exception of the first named, which finished with a 1⅛ point loss, all closed with gains ranging from 2 to more than 3 points. National Investors yielded 8 points, while Shenandoah and Interstate Equities made small gains.

Dayton Airplane again broke through to a new high, and Standard Steel Propellor rose more than 2 points to a new top.

Newmont Mining lost 3 points of its sharp gain made earlier in the week on reports of increased European demand for copper.

23 PER CENT GAIN BY 600 CONCERNS

First Six Months' Returns by Leading Corporations Show Above Increase in Profits Over Corresponding 1928 Reports.

By Leased Wire from the New York Branch of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"The market's recovery from Monday's setback gave demonstration that stocks had not become dangerously top heavy. A strong undertone in prices this week adds to the evidence. Even the appearance of 12 per cent call money with the approach of the month-end settlements failed to shake confidence in the position of the market. While conditions in industry remain essentially sound the financial district is perplexed at times to witness so pronounced an advance in stocks as the summer has brought without the usual corrective downward adjustments. The sharp rise in the stock averages this summer in certain respects has been deceiving to those who have endeavored to compare the present with the past. First of all the rise has been primarily in the quality stocks popular with discriminating investors, and not so much in stocks of poorer rank. This would indicate that the buying has been stronger than that usually accompanying an upswing. The absence of a big trading volume bears out the conclusion that the 1929 summer bull market has not been a result wholly of a feverish public enthusiasm.

Loans Rise $800,000,000.

"An increase of over $800,000,000 in stock exchange loans within the last two months reveals an expansion in borrowed funds that would have frightened the financial community earlier this year. Yet the loan increases now seem to be accepted without serious thought. Not a few persons are beginning to revise radically their conception of a normal size for brokers' loans in this country. The complacent attitude taken toward loans results partly from a growing belief that previous estimates failed to allow sufficiently for the funds that find their way into industry through the loan portfolio. In addition of course the advent of August brings us to the time of year when normally the reserve authorities purchase bills to ease money in connection with the seasonal crop requirements. In July the bill portfolios of the Reserve banks reached their lowest level in years. Probably the low for 1929 has been passed. This week $5,725,000 in bills were bought.

Had to Borrow More.

"While the reserve presumably will not reverse its money policy to the extent of easing money for market uses its effort to stabilize rates in the interest of business will indirectly help the market. Then, aside from the easing influence of these seasonal bill purchases, the curiosity demand for the new currency will gradually disappear. The influence of this factor in the July money situation has been too much minimized by persons not familiar with the facts. Actually the normal return flow of currency was checked on the very day that the new bills went out. In consequence member banks were obliged to borrow in excess of $100,000,000 more at the regional institutions than would have been necessary had the currency been returned around mid-July as usual. Some apprehension is felt over the possibility of an increase in the British bank rate. The action has been widely discussed in the financial district, and its effect at least partially discounted.

Corporate Earnings Factor.

"Bullish sentiment in the market is based not wholly on a conviction that money conditions will remain reasonably comfortable, or at least that rates will be stabilized near prevailing levels. Quite as much as from its confidence in the stability of money the market takes its inspiration from prospects for record corporate earnings. Returns for the first six months by 600 leading corporations report a 23 per cent gain in net profits over the corresponding 1928 months. Even more important is it that the gains were shared by virtually every major group. Improvement in the steel industry was conspicuous. Profits for this industry ran in excess of 100 per cent more than a year ago. But increased prosperity came in the first six months to a long list of related and unrelated industries until it now seems all but a certainty that 1929 will go down into history as a new record year.

BONDS SHADE HIGHER IN A QUIET SESSION

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The bond market moved a shade higher in today's quiet short session. Convertibles, taken in large blocks, developed pronounced strength, and the telephone twins, American and International 4½s, got to new highs.

Some fair trading appeared among the standard rails, which were irregular. Steel company issues advanced in the industrial group and the trend of the utilities was upward, although transactions ruled small. United States Government securities held firm on exceptionally small turnovers.

The share privilege bonds absorbed approximately 50 per cent of the day's business, the two telephone debentures alone accounting for $1,750,000 of the $5,300,000 total. The American company's convertible touched the new peak of 208¾ and closed at 207½ for a net gain of 1 point. International Telephone's 4½s got to 177 and closed 3 points below that figure, making a net advance of 1½.

A new favorite was the General Public Service Corporation 5½s, admitted to trading last Wednesday, which rose 3 points to 118. The issue was offered publicly about three weeks ago at 102. Its low since listing is 108.

Other strong convertibles were Alleghany Corporation 5s, 1949, up 1, Atchison 4½s, up 1, and American International Corporation 5½s, up fractionally. Reading Coal and Iron 6s, which have been steadily declining from their recent peak, made a further recession of a point.

Changes in the investment rail list included fractional losses by Baltimore & Ohio first 5s, Central Pacific 5s, St. Louis & San Francisco 4s and Missouri Pacific general 4s. The most important gains were shown in Baltimore & Ohio 4s, Toledo and Cincinnati Division, Rock Island refunding 4s and Erie 4s.

EMILE BERLINER, DISC RECORD INVENTOR, DIES

Made First Gramophone in 1887—Left Work in Aeronautics to His Son.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Emile Berliner, 79 years old, inventor of the disc record talking machine and the telephone transmitter, died today at home.

He had suffered a stroke of apoplexy a week ago but apparently was improving until yesterday. Members of his family were called to his bedside after his condition became critical.

His death ended a notable career. Berliner was born in Hanover, Germany, and emigrated to the United States in 1866. He sold glue for a time. He then painted backgrounds on enlarged photographs and traveled as a salesman for a Milwaukee wholesale house. Later he was a clerk in a Washington store.

Experiments Began in His Room.

It was in Washington that his inquisitive, alert mind began the studies which led to his inventions. He became interested in electricity and acoustics and experimented in his room after hours. Some three years before Bell and Watson invented the telephone, Berliner had evolved the idea of the loose contact transmitter which placed the telephone on an advanced commercial basis, and which was also to become important in radio broadcasting.

He invented the gramophone in 1887, and this discovery placed his name in the forefront of inventors. His talking machine used the disc record, and the present method of duplicating disc records was evolved by him also.

Late in life he turred attention to aeronautics and had begun experimenting with a helicopter before the Wrights made the first successful flight on the sands of North Carolina. In 1919, when his son, Henry, designed and successfully flew a helicopter, the inventor decided that aeronautical experimenting in the family might be left to the younger man.

Was Agnostic, Not Atheist.

His attitude toward the world and knowledge was exemplified in agnosticism. He attributed his success to this but was careful to differentiate between it and atheism. His definition of agnosticism was: "I do not know."

He believed that intellectual humility aided one to learn and advocated the study of astronomy as a cure for egotism.

In his later years he began the study of social and health problems and was president of the Washington Tuberculosis Association for several years. He also studied the death rate among babies, attributing many of the fatalities to the use of raw milk.

CHINA'S EXPORTS TO U. S. SHOW GAIN FIRST HALF OF '29

Indications of Stabilizing of Trade Disrupted by Civil War are Seen.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 3.— Chinese exports to the United States passing through Shanghai for the first half of 1929 totaled $29,000,000 gold, an increase of $3,500,000 as compared with the corresponding period in 1928.

The figures, made public in the American Consular report, are interpreted in local commercial circles as indicative of China's increasingly stabilized condition in the interior of the country permitting increased commercial activity which had been sharply curtailed during the last few years because of civil war.

American automobile imports were an outstanding example, many agencies exceeding their entire year's business for 1928 during the half year of 1929.

Lloyd George Asserts Russians Have Valid Claim; Thinks China Will Find "Joke" Went Too Far

War Might Shatter Last Chances, He Says, of Establishing Strong Central Government at Nanking—Both Armies Unfit for Combat.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War-Time Premier of England.
(Copyright, 1929.)

LONDON, Aug. 3.

THIS is a good time for those who wish and pray for the cause of peace. The declarations of President Hoover and of the British Prime Minister make it clear that the coming naval conference will not end in a disappointing fiasco like the ill-fated Geneva proceedings of two years ago. A real cut in navies is already assured. Even if nothing further eventuates from the approaching discussions, a substantial reduction in armaments has already been achieved as a result of the preliminary exchange of views. The French papers manifest a certain uneasiness at these pour-parlers. I hope therefore that every effort will be made to carry France, Italy and Japan along with Great Britain and America in these negotiations.

There must be no appearance of confronting these great powers with a fait accompli at the conference. To effect any notable advance in disarmament they must also be induced to cut down their cruiser and submarine program. Any offense to their amour propre would provoke resistance on their part—none the less refractory because it was unconscious. Anything which looks like dictation from the English-speaking commonwealths will be resented. Apart from that the conditions for an agreement are highly propitious. The change of ministries in both Britain and France is all to the good.

The outlook in China is improving. The clouds have not been altogether dispelled but they are not as lowering and menacing as they were, and there is a clear blue sky ahead. Mr. Stimson's intervention was timely and effective. It has rendered a great service to the world. A war between Russia and China would have been a very serious business. It might easily have led to inconceivable catastrophe.

Uneasiness in Japan.

If Russia won it would have been difficult to have set any safe bound to the march of her victorious armies. Moreover, she would have deemed it necessary to remain in possession of the territory through which the contested railway runs from the frontier to the sea. Such an occupation would cause uneasiness in Japan. Opinion is easily excited there over foreign intervention in the affairs of Manchuria. That rich province with its unlimited possibilities has already provoked two wars within the lifetime of this generation. Although every country in the world now shrinks from the prospect of armed conflict, one must not trust too much to that reluctance. Nations do not make war because they want to fight, but because they have been landed, either by stupidity or malignity of their agents, in positions from which they cannot recede without loss of honor.

The immediate danger which was greatest has passed away. The real apprehension that was felt throughout the world was that the hotheaded and irresponsible officials on the spot might precipitate a struggle. Once blood was shed, passions would be let loose which it would be difficult for diplomacy to restrain. Now that the dispute has passed from these impulsive hands into those of competent diplomatists representing the two central governments, the prospect of accommodation is assured. I believe that both the Russian and the Chinese Governments are honestly pacific in their ideals and intentions. But quite apart from that, considerations of national self-interest must drive them in that direction.

Neither Russia nor China is in a position to wage war. I am certain that the rulers of both these great countries will strive hard to avoid it Russia, in spite of her gigantic national resources, is economically in a very precarious position. Three years of disastrous war on a colossal scale, and after that three years of devastating civil war spread over the whole of its vast territories, has left Russia exhausted and bankrupt. Last year's harvest was a failure and the Russian people have barely escaped famine. This year's harvest is reported to be good. But it will leave no margin for war.

Restoration of Russia.

Every penny of Russia's surplus produce will be needed to help in the restoring of its economic organization to a position where the country can depend on being self-supporting. That will take years of tranquillity to achieve. If the Russian armies were defeated the existing government at Moscow would be so discredited that it would necessarily fall. But even a successful war would end in ultimate disaster for it would more than disappoint every hope of economic reconstruction. At least it would land Russia in grave difficulties with the powerful nations who would view with suspicion any invasion of China by the Red Army. The Soviet Republic has no friends. Its obvious policy is to avoid converting suspicion into active hostility.

The Russian army itself, although formidable in a war of defense, is quite unfitted for carrying its operations beyond its own frontiers. It put up a wonderful fight during the civil wars of 1918 to 1919 and 1920. But the remarkable book written by a young Russian who served in Budenny's famous cavalry will give an idea of the deficiencies of transport and equipment with which that brilliant General had to cope. That accounted for the failure of the Polish campaign of 1920. Trotzky, who is probably the greatest organizer of revolutionary armies since Carnot, was alive to this deficiency and for that reason was opposed to the invasion of Poland. Since then some improvement has been effected in the organization of the Red Army. But I doubt whether even now it is capable of waging war at a distance of thousands of miles from its headquarters.

A civil war could be conducted by a brilliant General in command of a mobile force of cavalry and machine gunners and of infantry moving about on ramshackle country gigs. They cut off communications and darted here and there, taking by surprise the illled armies of the incompetent White Generals. That kind of war fare would not avail against the modernly well-organized and well-equipped armies founded by Changtso Lin and the Christian General.

Officers of Czarist Army.

The Manchurian army is largely reinforced and officered by old soldiers from the Czarist army. Taking everything into account the probabilities are that if war were unfortunately to ensue the hordes of the Red Army inured as most of them are to real fighting in the Great War, would ultimately overwhelm the forces which have no experience of actualities of war under modern conditions. But for the reasons I have indicated, there is an element of doubt and I am sure that the shrewd fanatics who direct Russian affairs are quite conscious of that fact. War would not suit them and Prisons Good Schools for Him, He Says — Life So Quiet and Calm at Peter and Paul Fortress He Leaves With Regret.

Wife and Friends Dumfounded When He Reappears in St. Petersburg After Having Been "Banished for Life." — Goes to Finland.

By LEON TROTZKY
CHAPTER VI.
(Copyright, 1929.)

MY second prison cycle began. I stood it much easier than the first; the conditions were, beyond comparison, more favorable than those eight years before. I was kept for some time at the "Cross" prison, then in the Peter and Paul Fortress, and finally in the "House of Preliminary Detention." Shortly before we were sent into exile to Siberia we were placed in the "Transit Prison." Altogether it lasted fifteen months.

Each of the prisons had its peculiar features to which one had to adapt oneself. But in spite of the great variety of their arrangement, all prisons very much resemble one another. I was again able to devote myself to systematic, scientific and literary work.

My critics who are now so numerous in all parts of the world and who are followers of Stalin, the majority of whom became aware of the existence of debatable questions on the revolution not earlier than the end of the year 1923, might in truth do worse than sit down to a thorough study of my "Totals and Prospects" which was written then in prison in 1905—twelve years before the 1917 revolution. This applies in full to Stalin also.

After our transfer to the House of Preliminary Detention we were allowed to receive the visits of our counsel. The First Duma brought new life into matters political. Newspapers began to speak more audaciously. The publishers of Marx's works were busier.

I wrote a good deal in prison, and the lawyers took away my copy in their briefcases. For recreation I read the classical authors of European literature. It was then that I made my first acquaintance with the great masters of the French novel, and my love of the French novel has remained with me even today.

Leaves His Isolated Cell With Tinge of Regret.

All in all I have no reason to complain of my life in confinement. My prisons were good schools for me. I left my isolated cell in the Peter and Paul fortress with a tinge of regret. It was so quiet and calm there, life flowed so smoothly, and an ideal surrounding for intellectual work.

The House of Preliminary Detention on the contrary was full of people and bustle. There were many men there under sentence of death: acts of terrorism and armed expropriation occurred in large numbers all over the country.

The regime in that prison, by reason of the existence of the first Duma, was liberal. The cells were not locked up, exercise walks were taken in common.

Parvus would walk about the yard with Deutsch. Often I joined the pair. Deutsch, although an old man, was full of energy, was planning the escape of a whole group, and had easily persuaded Parvus to join. With much insistence he tried to persuade me also.

I resisted because I was attracted by the political significance of the public trial we were due to have. But the plan became known to too many people. Deutsch had to make his fourth escape all the same, not from prison, but from Siberia.

Petersburg Police Mobilized for Trial.

The public trial of the Soviet of the Deputies opened on Sept. 19 during the honeymoon of Stolypin's drum head court-martials. The courtyard of the Law Courts Building and the adjoining streets were a military camp. The entire police force of Petersburg was mobilized.

But the trial itself was conducted with a considerable degree of freedom. The reaction was anxious once for all to discredit Count Witte by exposing his liberalism, his weakness toward the revolution. Some 400 witnesses in all were called and more than half appeared and gave evidence.

During the month the trial lasted, they had to undergo the fire of cross-examination by the judges, public prosecutors, counsel for the defense and the accused prisoners themselves.

The accused prisoners were anxious to reproduce and did succeed in reproducing trait for trait, and detail by detail the whole tale of the work of the Council of Workmen and Peasants. Thus our great aim was achieved.

The Court refused to allow Senator Lopukhin to be called to give evidence. It was he who, as Director of the Police Department, established great printing works which produced appeals to perpetrate pogroms. We then deliberately made all further orderly proceedings impossible, the Court ordering us to be taken back to prison and the trial to proceed in our absence.

Counsel and Witnesses Walk Out of Trial.

After our removal our counsel threw up their briefs, and the witnesses as well as the public left. The judges remained in the sole company of the Public Prosecutors. The sentence was read in our absence.

Both my parents attended the trial. They had rather mixed thoughts and feelings. They could no longer explain my conduct by boyish exuberance, as they tried to do in my Nikolayev days. I was editor of newspapers, Chairman of the Soviet, I had a name as an author.

During my speech to the Court, of whose meaning she could understand very little, my mother cried quietly. She wept more violently when a score of Counsel came up to shake hands with me. Father was pale and silent, happy and downcast at the same time.

We were sentenced to deprivation of all civil rights and to exile by deportation. This was a comparatively mild sentence. We expected penal servitude. But exile by deportation by sentence of a Court of Law was a very different thing from my first exile by administrative order. Exile by deportation was for life, and any attempt to escape was punished in addition by three years penal servitude.

We were served out convicts' clothes, without the "ace of diamonds" on the back, it is true. I managed to keep my own shoes. That was of great importance for me. Under the sole I had concealed a thin passport, and inside the heels I had several gold coins.

Trip Down River Ob Takes More Than Month.

We were all sent to the village of Obdorsk, far beyond the Arctic circle. Unusual measures of precaution in guarding us were taken. At the same time the prison authorities treated us with every consideration. The chances of revolution and counter-revolution were just then fairly equally balanced. It was uncertain who would be top dog.

As far as Tumen we traveled by railway, but further on as far as Tobolsk we were taken in sledges, down, down the river Ob. It took us more than a month, passing through regions where a typhus epidemic was raging, to reach Berezov, the place whither once Peter the Great's principal collaborator, Prince Menchikov, was sent when he fell in disgrace. It was there that I decided to try my luck in escaping.

At Berezov we were given a rest of two days. We still had to go some 360 miles more to Obdorsk. We were allowed to walk about freely. The authorities did not apprehend any attempt at a flight from here. To go back there was only the high road over the frozen Ob along the line of telegraph poles. Any fugitive would necessarily be caught.

At Berezov there lived in exile the land surveyor, Roshkovsky. I consulted him as to any possible way of escape. He told me:

"You might take the chance of escaping directly due west on the River Sosva toward the Ural Mountains. There are no roads there, unless perhaps the nomadic Ostiaks may have left the tracks of reindeer sledges. The police could not overtake you there. But, of course, you may perish in the snow. It is now February, the month of the snowstorms."

Doctor Feit, a fellow-exile, taught me how to simulate sciatica so as to be able to remain a few days longer at Berezov, and I was placed in hospital.

Roshkovsky called in consultation a local peasant whose name was "Goat's Foot." That little man, dry as a bone, cool and resourceful, became the organizer of my escape. He acted perfectly disinterestedly. When his participation finally became known he was cruelly punished.

(Author's Note: In my book "1905" I deliberately gave an untrue account of this part of my escape. In those days it was, of course, impossible for me to put the Czar's police on the track of my helpers. All the same I trust now that Stalin will not persecute them, especially as so many years have elapsed since their crime. Moreover, on the last stage, as will be seen, I was also helped by Lenin.)

After the 1917 revolution "Goat's Foot" heard who it was that he had helped to escape ten years before. It was not till 1923 that he came to me in Moscow and our meeting was cordial. He was given the full dress uniform of a Red Army soldier, was taken to theaters and given a gramophone and other presents. Soon after that the old man died in his far northern home.

Lies Flat in Sled Covered With Straw.

From Berezov it was necessary to travel with reindeer. The whole problem was to find a guide who would risk starting at this time of year on such a doubtful journey. "Goat's Foot" found a Zyrian native, a heavy, experienced man, but, like most Zyrians, a drunkard. It was this man who later betrayed "Goat's Foot." But he got me away successfully.

My departure had been arranged to take place at midnight on Sunday. When the church tower struck twelve I went to "Goat's Foot's" yard. The sled was ready. I laid myself flat in the bottom of it. "Goat's Foot" covered me up with frozen straw, trussed it up properly and off we went. The straw began to thaw out and cold streamlets went over my face.

After going a few miles we stopped. "Goat's Foot" untied the straw and I crept out from my hiding place. My driver whistled. Voices answered which evidently were those of drunken men. The Zyrian native was tipsy and, moreover, he had friends with him. This was a bad start. But there was no choice.

I stepped onto their light reindeer sled with my scanty luggage. I had two fur coats on, fur inside and fur out; on my feet I also wore fur socks and fur boots, and I had a double fur hat and double fur mittens—the full kit of an Ostiak winter traveler. In my luggage were several bottles of spirits, the safest and most widely accepted equivalent for "currency" in that snow desert.

Keeps Pulling Hat Off Driver to Keep Him Awake.

We drove along the River Sosva, aiming to reach the narrow gauge Ural Railway, opposite the Bogoslavsk Foundries. We advanced at the rate of six or seven miles an hour. The drunken driver continually fell asleep. Dire calamity threatened both of us. He would make no response whatever to my prodding or pushing. Then I would pull his hat off his head; in a few moments his hair would be covered with hoar frost, and that sobered him.

We crossed forests, snow-covered marshes and enormous patches of ground from which the trees had been burnt. Amid the drifts we would boil snow water to make tea. My guide preferred spirits, but I saw to it that he did not drink to excess.

The trip lasted a week. We had traveled over 425 miles and were approaching the Ural Mountains. We met traveling convoys at increasingly frequent intervals. I declared myself to be one of the engineers who went with Baron Toll on his Polar expedition.

From the Urals onward, it was possible to

Duchess of Atholl Tells How Women May Promote Anglo-American Friendship

Schools, Books, the Training of Children, Social Contacts, All Mean for Making Treaties Truly Binding.

By THE DUCHESS OF ATHOLL, M. P.
Parliamentary Secretary for Education in the recent Conservative Government; Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire; Member of Parliament since 1923.

GREAT BRITAIN has just emerged from a general election in which, while the problem of unemployment was undoubtedly the main issue, questions of international peace and reduction of armaments played a prominent part. To work for enduring peace in Europe and the world at large is more than ever a cardinal principle with all political parties, and the twin pillars on which such a peace must rest are generally recognized to be support of the League of Nations, and Anglo-American friendship.

Time was when we prided ourselves on a traditional British isolation from European affairs, but in the late war our whole weight had to be thrown into the scale. The loss of nearly a million lives and the disablement of another million insure our wholehearted support of the League. Nay, further, under the Locarno treaties we have guaranteed the integrity of the new frontier between Germany and France, for long the most sinister danger zone in Europe.

For Friendship With U. S.

Our vision, however, covers a much wider field. It must first include in its sweep the dominions and dependencies of the British commonwealth. But always it reaches out to the other great English-speaking state—to the nation which, while deriving its strength today from many racial strains, through its earliest founders claims a common heritage with us in the England of Chaucer, of Spencer and of Shakspeare — a nation in which we recognize community of outlook and aim, a common love of liberty, of peace, a common concern for the welfare of mankind. Friendship with the United States of America must therefore be a keystone of British foreign policy.

In spite of what has sometimes been said to the contrary, I am convinced that this great fact has been recognized by an ever-increasing number of British citizens since that memorable day in 1917 when the United States entered the World War. The stream of friendship may, from time to time, be checked here and there by stones or weeds; there may be ripples at times on its surface, but on it flows, gathering volume and momentum on its course.

American officers and men quartered in this country during the war left many friends behind them, and few men or women of Scots descent can have seen without a thrill an American squadron in the Firth of Forth in May, 1918, helping to guard one of our principal naval bases. It was a wonderful experience under such circumstances to visit the Admiral of his flagship and to be invited, as were my husband and I, to address his officers and crew—the meeting hall the quarter-deck, and our platform a coil of rope; links were forged in those days which are not easily bent or broken.

While therefore we work incessantly for closer understanding and friendship with all countries, and find in the League of Nations a machinery admirably adapted to this purpose, the desire for friendship with the people of the United States strikes a unique chord in the minds of all thinking British citizens. Those two policies of support of the League of Nations and the promotion of Anglo-American friendship are indeed the twin pillars, the Jachin and Boaz, of our temple.

Material vs. Spiritual Values.

Though all this may seem a truism, it is I think worth while just now to emphasize it, because the relations between the two countries have of late so largely centered around the question of the limitation or reduction of armaments. Every political party here desires not only limitation but reduction. It is only the increases in the pay and pensions of the army and navy — increases even greater than those which have taken place in the cost of living since 1914 — which obscure the fact that in spite of a newcomer in the shape of an air force, the personnel of our armed forces today is much below their pre-war strength. Yet all parties, recognizing the implications of the Kellogg pact, are anxious to go further. The history of the last year or two, however, has shown us how much time, study and patience may be necessary before the much desired further steps can be taken. And all the study and discussion may perhaps tempt us to measure our relationship too much in terms of success or failure in these negotiations. It seems worth while, therefore, to remind ourselves that the question of Anglo-American friendship is something very much larger than mere tonnage or gun-caliber. Naval strength may be measured by "yard-sticks," but not friendship and understanding. It would be disastrous indeed if spiritual values such as these came to be identified with what are after all in the main material ones.

Where Women Can Help.

Here surely is work for the women of both countries. In the first place, to realize the tremendous meaning of that great pact for the renunciation of war to which the leading nations of the world have set their hand on the initiative of an American Secretary of State, to help others to realize it; and in doing so to create the atmosphere which shall assist both countries and the other powers concerned in carrying negotiations for a reduction of armaments to a happy conclusion.

Let us, however, beware of confusing the means with the end. The end is enduring peace — a peace the breaking of which shall be as unthinkable between civilized naitons as a breach of the peace would be in a gathering of individual friends — a peace the inspiration of which shall more and more communicate itself to the nations which stand on the borders of civilization. A potent means to that great end is to diminish the opportunity for competitive building of armaments; but however desirable in itself disarmament may be in the interests of national economy, the end is something greater still — the promotion of lasting peace and good-will among the nations.

Here then is a second task for women, to keep that great end ever in view, whatever may be the outcome of discussions on armaments. Our detachment from any share in national defense should free us from the risk of becoming immersed in calculations of tonnage and gun-caliber to the exclusion of all else. It need not, indeed should not, lead us to ignore or despise these things. They are needed in a world accustomed to regard war as a normal instrument of policy. If, however, the modern world, at the call of the United States, is entering on a new path, armies and navies gradually assume a different perspective.

Woman's Widening Sphere.

But our equipment as women for the task of cementing international friendship is more than a merely negative one. Surely there are few mothers who are not frequently called upon to heal disputes between their children—few women, whether mothers or not, in whose lives the art of Naming Our Public Schools.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SOME time ago it was suggested that two new public schools be named "Adolphus Busch" and "Festus J. Wade." A storm of protest was raised against honoring the memory of these two gentlemen who had done so much to put St. Louis on the map. The protestants, however, were of the same stripe as those who howled down Alfred E. Smith, and their reasons for opposing the naming of schools after these two honorable gentlemen are of course well known.

I was amazed, however, to read in the Post-Dispatch a short time ago that the board proposed to name these new schools the Robert E. Moore School and the Peter Herzog School. I am 45 years of age, have lived in St. Louis all my life, am fairly well known and consider myself fairly well posted, but I would certainly thank any of your readers who could tell me who were Robert E. Moore and Peter Herzog, and what either of them ever did for St. Louis to warrant honoring their memories by naming public schools after them.

We have at present schools named after R. M. Scruggs, William Stix, Elias Michael. All of these gentlemen were successful business men, good citizens and perhaps good husbands and fathers, they were likewise good to themselves. But at the same time if anyone can put forth one good reason as to why their memories should be honored by carving their names in stone over the entrances of our beautiful public school buildings, I would be glad to hear it.

There is something evidently wrong when the members of the school board pick out names of obscure persons to identify our school buildings when it would be an easy matter to select the names of famous St. Louisans, Missourians or Americans. P. A. McC.

Usona.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR editorial, "A Country Without a Name of Its Own," meaning our America and United States, which are not our exclusive property as names, recalls a suggested name which is accurate, euphonious and exclusive. It is "USONA," meaning United States of North America. If Congress legalizes it, all nations would greet our citizens as "Usonans."

JEFFERSONIAN.

A Prophecy of 1884.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE a copy of the "Phrenological Journal," dated February, 1884, in which the following little story was published. In view of the many wonderful inventions that have been made since that time, it may be of some interest to the people of the present day. The piece is entitled, "Two Centuries Hence."

Scene—Library in the house of an elderly gent somewhere in Australia. Old gent telegraphs to the kitchen and waiter ascends in a balloon. Old Gent: John, fly over to Calcutta, and tell Mr. Johnson that I shall be happy to have him sup with me. Never mind your coat now. Go! (John leaves, and at the end of five minutes returns.) John: Mr. Johnson says he will come; he has got to go to St. Petersburg for a moment and then he will be here. Old Gent: Well, John. Now start the machine for setting the table, and telegraph to my wife's room, and tell her that Mr. Johnson is coming; then brush up my balloon, for I have an engagement in London at 12 o'clock. John flies, and the old gentleman runs over to the West Indies to buy a fresh orange.

The writer was some prophet, don't you think? T. T. PAGE.

Scotland County and Road Construction.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE been reading the contention over the amounts spent by the Highway Department in their so-called zones on State highways. I realize Kansas City and St. Louis pay a large proportion of the total amount of gasoline and auto taxes and are entitled to receive their full share of road construction in their zones, which comprise one-third of the total area of the State, and not a cent more than their just share. If you will eliminate the roads built by special county bond issues, I am satisfied from one-half to two-thirds of all the money expended thus far has been spent in their respective zones and still they are screaming and lobbying for more. Personally, I do not believe in lobbying, but those who resort to it seem to be getting what they want.

There has been paid in gas and auto licenses about $86,000,000 and the bond issue of $60,000,000, a total of $146,000,000. Out of this vast sum Scotland County got 14 miles of gravel and we are now having 15 miles of dirt road under construction (the first work done in this county for over three years, and we had to send our County Judges to Jefferson City to get it.)

I think the Highway Commission should be composed of men who are competent to give every part of the State their just dues, and courageous enough to stop those who try to influence them otherwise. A. E. McQUOID.

THE POWER TRUST AGAIN.

More light is thrown on the secret workings of the Power Trust by the remarkable document published in the Post-Dispatch, as part of an article from its Washington bureau. Bearing strong interior evidence of having been prepared for the inner councils of the power industry by a representative of the National Electric Light Association, the document reveals an audacious attempt by the industry to break down the Federal Water Power Act.

Not satisfied with the recent resignation from the Federal Power Commission of Secretary O. C. Merrill, the Power Trust now, as the "confidential" report of its correspondent shows, is engaged in an effort to take the accounting division of the Power Commission out from under the energetic direction of William V. King. The report says that the industry is faced with a "critical" situation as the result of "an increased appropriation from Congress, which is to provide for an increase in personnel, and consequent activity, of the accounting staff of the commission." Continuing, the report says:

> We have made representations to the Water Power Development Committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce that this accounting work could be better done by the Departments of War, Interior and Agriculture than by the commission's staff directly. If this committee is successful in presenting this argument to the Secretaries who form the commission and further direct enlargement of the accounting staff is prevented, it is believed that these departments will not have men specially trained for this work; at least they will be removed from the direct supervision of Mr. King.

The special interest of the Power Trust in the accounting department of the Federal Power Commission grows out of the fact that it is this department which fixes the price at which power rights which have been leased to private interests may be recaptured by the public. The power act provides for a leasing period of not more than 50 years, at the end of which the Government may take over the project at the "actual legitimate cost thereof" minus depreciation.

King appears to have carried out the purpose of the act by adopting "prudent investment" as the yardstick of value and making an annual fixed charge for depreciation. His methods have incurred the displeasure of the utilities, which believe that "the allowance for depreciation should be a matter under the control of the Board of Directors, and to be considered only after provision has been made for bond interest and stock dividends." It behooves the utilities, therefore, to see that the work which Mr. King is doing is transferred to other hands. "Solidarity of action" by all the electric power companies, says the report, is required.

The brazen effort described in the memorandum—an effort that recalls the previous disclosures of secret burrowings by the Power Trust—opens up a new and fertile field to the investigation now being capably conducted by the Federal Trade Commission.

THE MENAGERIE AT WASHINGTON.

Having expressed the belief some weeks ago that a showdown is in order with regard to the animals that have been installed by the present Administration in Washington, we are even more strongly of that opinion in the light of recent developments. For to the Old Soak, the parrot brought by Mr. Stimson from Manila, there have been added William Hamilton Bones, a goat, also brought by Mr. Stimson from Manila; Billy, an opossum, lent by Mr. Hoover to serve as mascot to the baseball team of Hyattsville High School, but lately returned to the cage recently occupied by Rebecca, Mr. Coolidge's raccoon; and David Sellers Jr., a macaw which has been installed in the Pan-American Building and which greets all visitors by yelling "Hello, hello, hello!"

It is the macaw which leads us to think the situation is critical. A macaw is a dangerous bird. One of its kind once routed Ruby Robert Fitzsimmons in an early morning combat that lasted an hour and that ended with the then champion of the world under the bed, his head wrapped in a quilt. If a macaw can defeat the hardest hitter in the history of the prize ring, what can he do to a Peruvian diplomat? The time has come, we insist once more, for a plain statement of policy. The country should know where these animals are leading it.

FRANCO'S DISMISSAL.

For failure to patronize home industry, Maj. Ramon Franco, Spain's premier aviator, has been dismissed from his country's air service. On his recent attempt to fly to New York, Franco used an Italian plane instead of one especially built for him in Spain. In taking off, he permitted himself to be guided by French weather reports instead of accepting the word of Spanish meteorologists.

Dictator de Rivera is stern about such things. The fact that the Spanish airplane was tested by Franco and found wanting, and that the Spanish Weather Bureau declared the weather just dandy in the Azores region, while the French experts reported storms—these circumstances do not excuse Franco for introducing alien elements in what was billed as an all-Spanish flight.

All of which helps to explain why Spain is one of those dime-a-dozen countries.

BOOSTERISM.

Town boosterism has become so pronounced an American characteristic that critical articles appearing even in foreign publications do not go unanswered. We have in mind a letter to the Manchester (England) Guardian from Thomas B. Stoney, Mayor of Charleston, S. C., protesting against criticism of his town by one Harold Brighouse. Mr. Brighouse was not favorably impressed with what Mr. Stoney flamboyantly terms "America's most historic city," and therefore, according to Mr. Stoney, Mr. Brighouse showed deplorable lack of taste.

It is becoming dangerous to say anything about American communities unless it is couched in terms of fulsome praise; it brings down upon one tirades usually written by secretaries of chambers of commerce, though, as in this case, sometimes the Mayor of the criticised city conceives it to be his duty to enter the lists. As we analyze this sensitiveness, it arises from the fear that any derogatory statement about a town will redound to the town's commercial disadvantage.

We wonder how much foundation there is for such an assumption. Could the chance remarks of a visiting Britisher, for example, affect Charleston's destiny one way or the other? When a man seeks a factory site, or considers the establishment of a new agency, or looks for an advantageous market for buying and selling, is he concerned with controversies of this sort? Or is he merely interested in hard business facts?

We doubt very much whether the booster letters which chamber of commerce secretaries are so busy broadcasting fool anyone, including themselves. And what's worse, they exhibit a horrible lack of humor.

SPONGES.

Apropos the proposed tariff increases on Cuban sugar, we are reminded by a St. Louis importing firm that another Cuban industry is threatened in the pending tariff legislation—the sponge industry. It seems there are two principal sources of sponges—Florida and Cuba. Florida sponges are of the highest grade, and, since they are found only in deep water, cost is high and production is limited. Cuban sponges, of medium grade, are gathered from shallower waters and may be marketed more cheaply.

Prior to 1922 the duty on crude sponges was 10 per cent. The rate was increased by the Fordney-McCumber act to 15 per cent. In the pending tariff bill, as passed by the House of Representatives, the ante has been raised to 25 per cent, while a special bill presented to the Senate subcommittee asks for a 40-per-cent duty on wool sponges. The obvious purpose is to exclude Cuban sponges to the advantage of the Florida sponge industry, and at the expense of the American consumer.

We made the point, in the case of sugar, that nature designed the Island of Cuba for the production of it. The same point is made with regard to sponges, which grow so luxuriantly in Cuban waters. What is to be thought of an economic philosophy which would cut off the American consumer from natural sources of supply of necessary household articles? If the Florida sponge industry cannot survive without a powerful hypodermic in the form of a 25 to 40 per cent duty, perhaps it would be better to let the patient languish.

CANADA AND PROHIBITION.

Canada makes out a good case for herself in declining to grant the request of the United States for a treaty under which clearance would be refused to liquor-laden vessels bound for this country. There is no bumptiousness in the latest Canadian statement on the subject, but a friendly recital of plain facts.

Canada very properly points out that the great bulk of the smuggling is by American citizens in American boats; that the effect of the action desired by the United States would be to diffuse the illegal traffic over a wider area and perhaps corrupt hundreds of Canadian citizens; that as a matter of fact, as shown by our own figures, only 2 to 5 per cent of the illicit liquor in the United States comes from the Dominion. Canada adds that she has her own smuggling problem, which is costing her $1,000,000 a year.

If Canada were dry and the United States wet, would the United States add to her own law enforcement burdens by undertaking to keep liquor out of Canada? We think not.

What a spectacle we make of ourselves, standing hat in hand asking a foreign nation to help us enforce one of our laws! Has there ever been any more illuminating commentary on prohibition?

NO RADIUM PAINT FOR PEACE TIMES.

When Henry Sleepless tosses in bed on a hot night, wonders what time it is, and looks at his watch or clock illuminated by radium paint, does he realize that he has committed an act which, indirectly and through no fault of his, is unnecessary in time of peace? It is a pity to add to the worries of Henry Sleepless, but the danger to those engaged in the manufacture of radium paint is a horror and a public nuisance.

The U. S. Department of Labor has just made public an exhaustive survey of the radium paint industry. It finds that 15 workers have died of radium poisoning since 1922, and that there are 18 known living cases of the poisoning. It estimates that 2000 men and women are now employed in radium paint factories and, since one of the horrors of the work is that symptoms of poisoning may not appear until after many years have elapsed, there may be dozens of cases yet to be heard from. As a result of the survey, the Department of Labor urges the complete abolition of the manufacture of radium paint because it is an unnecessary evil in peace times. During a war, when certain luminous instruments are needed, the manufacture should be controlled by stringent safety measures to protect the workers. It is reported that the American companies are willing to stop making radium paint, if the Government will forbid the importation of luminous articles from foreign countries.

The survey of the Department of Labor follows and commends the vigorous campaign of the New York World in behalf of the five women who were stricken with radium poisoning as a result of their work in a New Jersey factory. The women sued for damages. The defendant company refused to assume responsibility for the illness and threatening death of the five women, denying that occupational poisoning existed or had been proved. The World continued its publicity and finally the company settled out of court, paying the women $10,000 each and a yearly allowance of $600 each for the remainder of their lives.

Thanks to the World and the Department of Labor, this deadly industrial tax is to be repealed.

POLITICS REACHES FOR BOBBY.

Georgia friends of Bobby Jones have presented him as a candidate for Congress in the special election to be held in October to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Representative Steele. They assert that his ability as a lawyer and fame as a golfer would make him a formidable candidate.

As to Mr. Jones' legal ability, we are unprepared to say, but his prowess on the fairways is a theme for "the tongues of angels." No mere mortal pen can cover the assignment. And it is to Golferissimo Bobby the world pays a homage which no lawyer and no Congressman can command.

We do not disparage lawyers or legislators. They have their part in the scheme of things, and many of them play it well. But never has one of them attained such proficiency in his metier as Bobby Jones has in his. He is a maestro, virtuoso, nonpareil. He is our national avocation's sine qua non. His tee shots are epics, his mashie trajectories pure lyrics. Under his spell the guttural niblick sings like a nightingale and on the putting green, in his best mood, he is Impeccability's twin brother.

We should hate to see Golfer Bobby disappear in the forensics of official Washington.

New Dangers to Europe's Peace

Ten years after the end of the World War, an entirely new status has arisen in Europe, with the strivings of subject peoples for freedom as the greatest source of danger; millions freed, but other millions enslaved; nations long for peace, but minorities will fight to the death for liberty.

Frank H. Simonds in Review of Reviews.

THE present August sees the fifteenth anniversary of the outbreak of the World War, while the recent June marked the tenth milestone since the Treaty of Versailles officially closed the great conflict. This current anniversary is of more than passing importance, because in all human probability it will also indicate the real liquidation of the consequences of the supreme catastrophe.

We are on the point of seeing the war debts liquidated, both those of Germany and those of her opponents. Nor can there be long delay in recalling Allied troops from German soil. After 15 years the war has in a certain measure settled itself. The material and psychological readjustment has taken place. The politicians, as usual, are simply lagging behind the facts, still fearful of the present influence of sentiments which in the recent past have controlled the minds of their constituents.

One must note that in this new Europe, which is now escaping restraints and leading-strings, nothing is as any belligerent in the World War hoped or expected. Fifteen years have served to give the lie to every forecast, just as 10 years have similarly disproved most of the prophecies which preceded and followed the making of peace treaties. Look at the list of war aims, and the lesson is unmistakable.

Great Britain triumphed over her latest rival more completely than over any in past time; yet the complete overthrow of Germany has not insured British supremacy. Measured by economic and industrial circumstances, defeated Germany is hardly worse off than victorious Britain. France has Alsace-Lorraine, and Alsace has already become as a new Ireland. Italy has assisted at the final extinction of the decaying Hapsburg Empire, only to see a young and vigorous Slav state rising on the eastern shore of the Adriatic. Self-determination has liberated millions of Poles, Czechs, Rumanians, Croats and Baltic tribes, but only at the cost of enslaving other millions of Germans, Magyars, Bulgarians and others.

In 1914 Europe was divided into two groups of alliances, which were the result of the associate rivalries of great peoples. Today a new division has resulted in new alliances. In point of fact, however, Europe is still separated into two groups—one made up of the powers satisfied with the existing order and prepared to defend it by arms, the other determined not to rest until 1914 conditions are restored, but not yet able to employ force to regain lost provinces.

On the one side France—backed by Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania—stands forth as the champion of the status quo, having replaced Germany as the supreme power of the Continent. Against this status quo Germany, Italy, Hungary, Bulgaria and Lithuania are frankly aligned. As for Russia, it remains, escaped from western association and ideas, if no longer the peril of 1918-1919, nevertheless an inexplicable element moving toward incalculable destinies which must affect the whole Continent.

Peace or war in the new Europe turns upon the simple question as to whether, looking to the long future, peoples will choose to fight or to suffer the existing order to last. The old hope of a revision of the treaties has been disclosed as of little real promise. To remake the frontiers by consent of nations concerned is out of the question, because no nation will voluntarily give up territory and no pressure save war is discoverable.

However the map of Europe were made, there would be millions of subject minorities, and those who constitute the enslaved of today were the masters of yesterday. Between these races survives the bitter memory of numberless centuries of injury and persecution. Each minority today is the center of disloyalty against the existing government, the basis of intrigue for separation.

Today the real question of peace or war in Europe has nothing to do with imperialism, militarism, or chauvinism. The supreme agony of the war has effectively smashed all these incentives to conflict. Everywhere it is perceived that a new war would mean ruin, even if it ended in victory.

Yet it remains everlastingly true that for certain things man has always been prepared to die and short of death to endure every sort of agony. The liberty and unity of peoples is one of these essential circumstances People will fight to be free. And today there are in Europe millions of people belonging to subject races, firmly resolved to be free and unable to obtain freedom save as they fight and—if they are victorious—enslave other millions.

The situation in Europe today is no more nor less than a status quo maintained by the bayonets of the satisfied powers and unchallenged because of the exhaustion, temporary and passing, of the dissatisfied peoples. The program of the dissatisfied peoples is no more than a change, which would substitute new dissatisfied millions for the old but would leave the problem otherwise unaffected.

Peace or war in Europe turns upon an adjustment of this problem of the minorities. Obviously it is possible for the satisfied states, since they are strong, to maintain the existing conditions and continue the miseries of the subject millions. But this policy of peace founded on injustice could hardly last beyond the strength of the satisfied powers, and the present minorities would continue to strive for liberation and might in the end produce a new Serajevo. . . .

The League of Nations can do nothing about it, because it has no power to compel and no persuasion to reconcile millions of Germans or Magyars to foreign and oppressive rule, or to condemn more millions of Poles and Rumanians to a similar rule in order to reconcile the German and Magyars.

Nor is there the smallest chance of effective disarmament while the satisfied nations feel the unmistakable hardening of the purpose of their minorities to obtain liberation and of their neighbors to for-

LAW ENFORCEMENT FIRST, SHARTEL SAYS

Attorney - General Addresses Old Settlers' Reunion at New Florence, Mo.

By the Associated Press.

NEW FLORENCE, Mo., Aug. 3.—Law enforcement should come first in our system of government and should be maintained at its highest peak at all times, Attorney-General Stratton Shartel declared here today in an address at the Old Settlers' Reunion.

The State's chief legal official said that "law enforcement of a sane, conservative type is more important than politics, and it is the duty of every citizen of Missouri to support the right kind of men for all law enforcing positions, from President of the United States and Governor of Missouri down to the County Sheriff."

"The most important function of the national, State, county and city governments is to preserve the peace and protect life and property of the citizens," he continued. "This is one of the original purposes of government. The other purposes are of much less importance. People pay taxes for this purpose and they are entitled to protection in return.

"If a county or city is having serious trouble in enforcing the laws, it is the duty of such county, or city, to increase the efficiency of its law enforcing agencies, even though the other purposes of government may suffer. Law enforcement comes first. There should be a first lien upon all the resources o. the political subdivisions for this purpose.

"If the Police Department or Sheriff's office is not properly supported financially, then it is the duty of the city, or county to increase its appropriations for those departments. Law enforcing officers should receive good pay and should be granted compensation if injured in line of duty. Their families should be provided insurance. These positions should be made more attractive in order to retain and attract the best men.

"Everything should be done to raise the standard of the police profession. It is indeed an honored profession and should be so recognized by the counties and cities as well as by the citizens. Put the proper morale, incentive and pride into a police officer and nothing will stop him. To prove this point, I cite the examples of Scotland Yard in England, the State Police in some of out Eastern states, and the Canadian Mounted Police. They always "get their man.'

"With modern and efficient police organizations in Missouri, our courts and prosecutors would have much less to do, because such organizations would act as a deterrent to crime."

ART GOEBEL, WINNER OF DOLE FLIGHT, TO FLY PLANE HERE

Will Be On Exhibit Friday at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Arthur C. Goebel, inner of the Dole Honolulu flight from San Francisco, will bring his airplane Woolaroc to St. Louis on a farewell tour of the country before it is handed down to posterity in the private exhibit of Frank Phillips of the Phillips Petroleum Corp.

Goebel is scheduled to arrive in St. Louis next Friday, at which time a dinner will be given in his honor by the Air Board of the Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Chase to which members of the Air Board and the Chamber have been invited. It is anticipated that Goebel will make a brief talk on his record-breaking flight out across the Pacific over Radio Station KMOX.

The ship is being flown to various cities in the country ranging from Minneapolis on the North to Lubbock, Tex., on the South. While in St. Louis the Woolaroc will be on exhibition at Lambert-St.Louis Flying Field. The ship will be placed in the Phillips Lodge at Bartlesville, Ok., when the tour is finished Aug. 12.

Russians Have Valid Claim, Says Lloyd George

they may be relied upon to do their best to avoid it.

What about China? She has barely emerged from a civil war which raged for years from the Great Wall to Canton. It will take many years of good government by her rulers and hard work by her industrious people to repair the devastation effected by armies one-third patriot and two-thirds bandit. The Federal Republic evolved by the war has not yet been firmly established. The leading Ministers have won a good reputation for wisdom. War with a great European Power might shatter their last chances of establishing a strong central government at Nanking. They may therefore be relied upon to strive for a reasonable peace.

The Russians seem to have a substantial grievance. They constructed a railway and they have $200,000,000 invested in it. Even Communists cannot possibly regard with equanimity the ruthless application of their principles to their own possessions. The Chinese, who are not devoid of a sardonic sense of humor, will probably recognize that they have carried the joke far enough. Peace will be restored.

How Women May Promote National Amity

smoothing away domestic difficulties of one kind or another has not got to be practiced if the house for which each is responsible is to be in any real sense a home. And the woman who can insure peace in her household and family can insure it not only among her neighbors, but, through her new-found citizenship, in an ever-widening sphere.

Then it is unnecessary to emphasize how we may influence the rising generation in this matter. Young people in adolescence may be hard to guide in some directions, but prejudices or hero-worship instilled in earlier days die hard. Much I am convinced can be done through a careful choice of children's books. How many of us try in vain to ". . . recapture the first fine careless rapture" with which we devoured the stories given to us in childhood! How all-important that books for English-speaking children should include wholesome and attractive pictures of life in all the great English-speaking countries. There must be many English and Scots women today who feel as if part of their childhood had been spent in New England with Miss Alcott's entrancing group of "Little Women"; while British boys still share in spirit in the glorious adventures of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. Could understanding and friendship grow from healthier soil? And if to books such as these be added stories from the lives of the great men of the other country, lasting hero-worship may be the result.

Books and Schools an Aid.

Other important influences are the historical text-books in use in schools. How much life-long, nation-wide understanding may be caused here by omission or over-emphasis! Many of the text-books in both countries I believe have been overhauled in recent years. Women teachers and school governors should be able to help to ensure that the books used give an accurate, and as far as is humanly possible an unbiased account of past events.

Nor of course does the influence for good or ill of Anglo-American literature and with childhood. National barriers mean little to the poets and philosophers, and the United States have produced many whose names have been a household word in this country, but the novel—and even more, the film—are the chief means by which the mass of the people of both countries will come to know something of each others lives. What an argument for the production of books and films which will show life in both England and America at its best, not its worst; And though the sexes may be equally represented in cinema audiences in either country, I suspect that in the United States as here, there are more women than men who have both leisure and the taste for reading fiction. Here then is our chance of forging another link in the great chain of understanding and friendship.

Again, more leisure for reading probably spells more leisure for travel though the traveling of English women may often necessarily be limited by financial considerations. The American woman, therefore, is probably better known in England than the English woman in America, and the apparently inexhaustible interest shown by women visitors from the New World in all that an old country has to offer of historic value insures such visitors a hearty welcome.

The Personal Touch.

Finally, we women in both countries hold in our hand the main fabric of social life. How, when and where, man and woman shall meet in their leisure hours largely rests with us. To us, therefore, it must mainly fall to create opportunities for the formation of individual contacts, and of the atmosphere in which such contacts may ripen into friendship. If we have once caught the vision of what an informed, frank, understanding friendship between Britain and America should mean for the consolidation of world peace, then we shall realize that, while pacts and agreements may be the foundation on which such a structure may be erected, individual bonds of friendship must be the cement which will make it possible for the edifice to be built and to endure, and we shall feel that of the many causes which claim us in this busy, hustling world, one of the noblest to which any life may be dedicated is that of the promotion of friendship between the nations to whom the English language is their mother tongue.

MY LIFE

travel in a horse-drawn carriage. Here I became a minor government clerk. Vikentyev, and together with an excise inspector, who was visiting his vast district, I journeyed as far as the narrow gauge railway. The station gendarme apathetically watched me emerge from my Ostiak fur coats.

Having got on to the Perm railway I sent a wire to my wife to meet me at a station where the two trains crossed. She did not expect that telegram, at all events not so soon. Nor was it a wonder.

Wife and Friends Dumfounded.

Our journey to Berezov lasted more than a month. The St. Petersburg newspapers were full of descriptions of our progress to the north. Correspondence was still coming in and everybody thought me to be on my way toward Obdorsk. My whole return journey took but 11 days. Meeting me not far from St. Petersburg naturally seemed unbelievable to my wife.

From the St. Petersburg railway station we went straight to the house of good friends who were dumbfounded to see me.

But the danger was not by any means over. Telegrams from Berezov about my disappearance had by now, of course, arrived. In St. Petersburg, too, many persons knew me by sight. Escape from exile was punishable by penal servitude.

We decided to go to Finland.

Both Lenin and Martov, who had been away from St. Petersburg for some time, were living in Finland. away from St. Petersburg for some time, were living in Finland.

I called on Lenin and on Martov who lived in nearby villages. Lenin's room was in perfect order. He did not smoke. The necessary copies of newspapers, with notes on them lay where they were required. But above all, there was an unconquerable, if expectant certainty on this gray, dull and prosaic, but very uncommon face.

In conversation Lenin approved of the work I had written in prison, but reproached me for not drawing the necessary conclusions regarding organization. He was right. In parting he gave me addresses at Helsingfors which proved to be of the utmost value. These friends of Lenin helped me to put up in a modest way at Oglbu, near Helsingfors, where later Lenin also lived.

At Oglbu I spent several weeks with my wife and our baby son, who was born when I was in prison. It was in this solitary retreat that I wrote the description of my journey "There and Back" and the money I received for it enabled me to go abroad via Stockholm.

Until I crossed the frontier I was accompanied by a young Finnish girl "activist." At that period the Finnish activities were friends. In 1917 they became Fascists and sworn enemies of the 1917 revolution.

The Scandinavian steamer carried me away on a new emigration which was to last 10 years.

ALABAMA AVENUE BRIDGE TO BE OPENED WEDNESDAY

Dedication Exercises for River des Peres Structure Will Include Music and Fireworks.

The new bridge carrying Alabama avenue over River des Peres at the southern city limits will be dedicated by the Ivory Avenue and Lemay Ferry Business Men's Association at 8 p. m. Wednesday, and will be opened to traffic for the first time at 10 p. m.

The bridge was built as part of the River des Peres improvement project at a cost of $88,000 out of city bond issue funds. Work began a year ago. U. S. Highway No. 61 crosses this structure, entering Lemay Ferry road on the county side. The bridge is 60 feet wide and 450 feet long, replacing an inadequate old crossing.

A band concert and fireworks will be part of the dedication program. Among speakers, it is announced, will be Acting Mayor Neun, Alderman Neumann and other city officials. County officials are expected to participate.

BASIS OF TREATY BY BRITAIN WITH EGYPT COMPLETED

Sub-Committee of Cabinet Finishes Its Work of Paving the Way for Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—A special subcommittee of the Cabinet, which has been examining proposals for settlement of the Anglo-Egyptian question, has completed its work. It is expected that the text of the proposals will be published Wednesday.

An official statement issued today at the Foreign Office said:

"The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (Arthur Henderson) has had a final interview with the Prime Minister of Egypt (Mahmoud Pasha) and reported to im that the Cabinet subcommittee had completed their examination of proposals for a lasting and honorable settlement of the Anglo-Egyptian question. The text of the proposals will be published in a few days.

It is recalled that in 1927 a treaty approved by the British Government and the Egyptian Premier was rejected by the Egyptian Parliament when it was opposed by the extreme Nationalist party which advocated the withdrawal of all British troops from Egypt.

Great Britain's primary interest in Egypt is in her empire communications through the Suez Canal to India and Australasia.

While Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Henderson in recent debate in the House of Commons over the resignation of Lord Lloyd, High Commissioner of Egypt, declared the British Government would not relax its vigilance over communications of the empire, it is well known that the Labor administration desires to take a liberal attitude in dealing with Egypt.

Earlier today it was reported that Premier Mahmoud Pasha had gone to the Foreign Office to initiate a new Anglo-Egyptian treaty, but in Downing street it was authoritatively stated there had been neither new treaty nor initials. The Cabinet subcommittee's work is the basis for negotiating a new treaty.

Mark Twain Offered To Trade Literary For Surgical Advice

Glimpses of Humorist's Correspondence With His Cousin, "Dr. Jim" of Webster Groves, on Display by Historical Society.

THE perfect excuse for opening someone else's mail may be found—and noted for emergency reference—in a large collection of Mark Twain papers lent to Missouri Historical Society last week by Cyril Clemens of Webster Groves, president of the Mark Twain Society.

It seems that Cyril Clemens' mother, Mrs. James Ross Clemens, 37 Gray avenue, Webster Groves, had addressed a note to Mrs. Samuel Clemens. But Mark Twain "Cousin Sam," opened it. A lesser husband might have been appalled at the prospect of explanations. But Twain noted on the torn envelope, in his bold script and bolder wit:

Opened by mistake to see what was inside. S. L. C.

How he could get away with it likewise may be found in the same collection. His wife gaily and gracefully shatters the conspiracy of silence maintained by and about the happily married. In several letters to "Doctor Jim"—Dr. James Ross Clemens of Webster Groves—and his wife, who was Miss Katherine Boland, she disclosed the affection and loyalty that distinguished Mark Twain's household.

"I cannot tell why but the news which your letter brought was a surprise," she wrote to "Doctor Jim" in the late nineties in London, where Dr. Clemens met Twain when he read an English newspaper report, quite inaccurate, that the humorist was in desperate financial straits and went to him to offer aid.

A Letter of Congratulation.

"Your bachelor quarters looked to me as if you would long occupy them," continued Twain's wife. "I should have known the world better.

"Now I want to send you and Miss Boland my very warm congratulations. I feel entirely with Browning when he says 'Love is best.' Surely it is far and away the best; there is nothing that in the very least approaches it. I rejoice with you and Miss Boland that you have found it.

"But how could you give us so few particulars? You say you are to be married in May; when in May? and where in May? On this or the other side of the Atlantic? In St. Louis, or in London? If a member of the clan wished to send a trifle to 'the only girl in the world' as a token of welcome into the ranks of the Clemens family, where could one find Miss Boland? You will send me a reply to these questions without delay, won't you? It would be cruelty to leave our curiosity unsatisfied.

"Mr. Clemens and our daughters join in sending you their congratulations and wishing you a long and happy life with the girl who has such excellent taste."

Dr. Clemens must have answered all these excited questions which he could get around to, for, in a letter of congratulation to Miss Boland, previously lent to Missouri Historical Society, the wife of Mark Twain avowed, "I have found marrying a Clemens the very best and happiest thing I ever did."

"Give Sam a Book."

"How I wish I were starting West with my good man today," she wrote when Dr. and Mrs. Clemens had established their home in St. Louis and their distinguished relatives were living at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson.

"I do detest letting him go without me, but it seems to be best this time. I was greatly tempted to go and make the visit to you and see the other cousins. You must not let him be the least tax to you. If Dr. Jim is busy you must put Cousin Sam down with a book and he will take care of himself. Don't let him stay long for I find life very lonely when he is away. So after he has had a little time with you send him back to me."

Correspondence of the London days, previously lent to the society, included a string of letters about "the best Indian cigars I ever smoked," as Twain described them, and his difficulty in obtaining more of them and finding out what they cost. The episode of the cigars is extended into this new lead in a letter by Mrs. Samuel Clemens written before Dr. Clemens obtained his degree:

"My Mr. Clemens sent your Mr. Clemens a ridiculous sum of money for the cigars * * * so there is now 6-9 to pay which will be duly handed your husband when you arrive at Dollis Hill. So you see you will have to come in order to secure your rights."

When "your Mr. Clemens" became Dr. Clemens, the physician's usual errands for relatives were not lacking in his case, it appears in a letter which Twain drolly concluded: "Give me your surgical advice now, and in return you shall have all the literary advice you want."

The traditional fact, that there is no Mark Twain letter without grounds for literary permanence besides the autograph, may be understood from a letter to Cyril Clemens from Prof. Henry van Dyke, also lent to the society:

"He did not belong at all to the tribe of "professional humorists," but was a man of serious mind to whom life presented itself with those contrasts and contradictions, those curious and astonishing inconsistencies in which a true spirit of sympathetic humor naturally finds a subject of wonder and not unkindly amusement."

"Mark Twain did more than any other man to make plain people in England understand plain people in America," write G. M. Trevelyan of Cambridge University to Cyril Clemens.

"At a public dinner, I had the misfortune to be put up to respond to a speech of his," wrote Arthur Pinero. "I remember, painfully, how disconcerted I was at having to follow such a brilliant speaker, and what a bungle I made of my job; and how I determined that thenceforward I would never be tempted to air my oratory in replying to a witty American. That resolve I have sedulously adhered to, and so added to the vast debt I owe of the genius of Mark Twain."

Lord Dunsany's Tribute.

"As for the appreciation of Mark Twain," Lord Dunsany wrote last February, "he does not need it, any more than the Sphinx needs to be photographed with a little bunch of tourists on its paws. But, since you ask it, I will record my belief (for it is no presumption to have a creed), that Mark Twain was one of the great literary figures of the world. If anyone doubted that, I would confront him first with Huckleberry Finn. It seems to me that, far from growing wiser and better as we grow older, we are all the while losing something, and the great writers are nearly always found at their best when digging in the gardens of their earliest memories. Thence evidently comes the material from which 'Huckleberry Finn' was made, and much of the light that shone when the famous author was young is still shining in that book. Do you remember that marvelous description of the Mississippi in the cold hours long before dawn? 'It looked late, and it smelt late.' Put that card on the table and ask other writers to beat it."

It has been published that Romain Rolland, French critic and author of the novel, "Jean-Christophe," characteristically declined an honorary vice presidency of the Mark Twain Society because Mussolini is its honorary president. Two additional refusals, both accompanied by expression of appreciation for the honor, are included in this new collection.

"My aim is to preserve as far as possible a complete reticence, the avoidance of all committees, juries, indorsements, offices and even letter-head roles," explained Thornton Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." "My simple business is to be a good schoolteacher in a small community and to write as slowly and as well as I can."

Don Marquis Jabs Mussolini.

"I don't wish to appear unappreciative or ungrateful," declared Don Marquis, "but I notice that Premier Benito Mussolini is honorary president; and if I can't be an honorary president, like he is, I don't think I want to join.

"Is there any office higher than honorary president? I mean, except president—I notice you are the president yourself, and, of course, I don't expect that. But isn't there an office somewhere in between Mussolini's and yours that I could have; higher than honorary president, but not so high as president?

"If there is, put me down for it. But if there isn't, I'm afraid I can't join—it's not jealousy, really, it's a matter of principle not to let a foreigner like Mussolini have a higher office than mine, even if he is funnier than I am."

UNION ELECTRIC CO. BUYS 30,000 ACRES FOR DAM

Acquires Land for Bagnell Project from Receiver of Cravens Interests.

Purchase of 30,000 acres of the land needed for the Union Electric Light & Power Co's $30,000,000 hydro-electric power project at Bagnell, Mo., on the Osage River, was completed yesterday at Kansas City. This is part of the land that will be inundated by the lake formed by the Bagnell dam.

The land was purchased from the receiver of the bankrupt Kansas City Joint Stock Land Bank and was part of the holdings acquired by Walter Cravens, president of the Land Bank, when he was promoting the Missouri Hydro Electric Power Co. for the purpose of building the Bagnell dam. Cravens later was sentenced to the Federal penitentiary for irregularities in connection with the affairs of the bank.

In the purchase made yesterday Union Electric acquired about one-third of the land needed to hold the waters of the 125-mile lake the dam will create. The price paid for this property was not announced.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The stable o My Dandy and Brown Wisdom ran one dicap, feature attraction on the openin Track here this afternoon. Mei Foo

My Dandy, showing high speed from the start, raced into the lead on entering the stretch and under a well-judged and hustling ride by F. Halbert, beat his stablemate by a neck. Brown Wisdom was outrun in the first quarter, but moved up entering the stretch and finished strong, taking second money by two lengths over Mei Foo. The latter was away poorly and was out-run to the stretch turn, when he finished fast and took third by a length and a half. Illegitimate was fourth. He was sent into a brief short lead but could not match strides with the winner.

The Reichert entry paid $7 to win on a $2 ticket, and the horses earned $5200 and $1000.

Clear Sky, from C. L. Whiting's stable, was second, and Riverdale Stable's Attack third. The winner paid $7.80 and was coupled in the betting with Princely Attention.

Mr. Galety, Mrs. E. Glassco's consistent racer, scored his sixth straight purse when he accounted for the Amigari Purse, fourth race on the program. Mr. Galety won as his rider pleased from Channing L. and Table Talk.

My Dandy, under restraint, racing Illegitimate into submission, gained a clear advantage after reaching stretch and continuing fast, outstayed Brown Wisdom. Latter, never far back, closed fast, racing in worst going through final quarter. Mei Foo closed gamely under hardpressure. Illegitimate began tiring after showing good speed to stretch. Cayuga, weakly ridden, swerved badly when tiring in stretch. Eskimo was outrun. Greenock had early speed and suffered from racing in worst going.

$2 mutuels paid: My Dandy, win $7, place $6.22, show $3.38; Brown Wisdom, place $6.22, show $3.38; Meo Foo, show 5.56.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The stable of W. C. and E. W. Reichert's My Dandy and Brown Wisdom ran one, two in the Windy City Handicap, feature attraction on the opening day race card at Hawthorne Track here this afternoon. Mei Foo finished third.

My Dandy, showing high speed from the start, raced into the lead on entering the stretch and under a well-judged and hustling ride by F. Halbert, beat his stablemate by a neck. Brown Wisdom was outrun in the first quarter, but moved up entering the stretch and finished strong, taking second money by two lengths over Mei Foo. The latter was away poorly and was out-run to the stretch turn, when he finished fast and took third by a length and a half. Illegitimate was fourth. He was sent into a brief short lead but could not match strides with the winner.

The Reichert entry paid $7 to win on a $2 ticket, and the horses earned $5200 and $1000.

BEAU OF THE WEST WINS ERIE DOWNS HANDICAP

FORT ERIE, Ont., Aug. 3.—Edward F. Seagram, Canadian sportsman, took down the $2000 Erie Downs Handicap here this afternoon, when his veteran campaigner, Beau of the West, led home a good field of thoroughbreds in the mile and one-sixteenth race. Clear Sky, from C. L. Whiting's stable, was second, and Riverdale Stable's Attack third. The winner paid $7.80 and was coupled in the betting with Princely Attention.

Mr. Gaiety, Mrs. E. Glassco's consistent racer, scored his sixth straight purse when he accounted for the Amigari Purse, fourth race on the program. Mr. Gaiety won as his rider pleased from Channing L. and Table Talk.

The "Next Season" Phase.

THE two major league pennant campaigns have reached the "next season" phase, at least as far as our Browns and Cardinals are concerned. Nothing either club can hope for involves better than a toehold on first division. Nor is there anything either club could do about it for this season.

To make it worse, there seems no certainty that there can be a great deal done about it next year. It is uncertain pitching that cramps the style of both clubs; and to obtain new pitchers of proved merit, in these piping times of rabbit balls and full swinging hitters, is just as easy as to bring in a 5000-barrel gusher in your back yard.

Seemingly, the rising generation is all to the bad in the region of the soupbone. Upcoming young men fling a lot of wise cracks, but very few curve balls over the corner of the plate, with three on.

It is a crisis in baseball that calls for some masterminding by the magnates, and the poor things are not used to it. But sooner or later it will have to be done. It is necessary to trot out a solution to the problem of too much hitting and too little pitching.

When ball clubs of real merit,

GOLDMAN JR 96

Right at top—Bob Lahey, who pitched the first game of the series, Friday, beating Chillicothe both in the box and at bat. He made four hits in four times up and allowed only four hits. He played third base yesterday. Below—Alex Schnurman, who pitched the Goldman's to victory in yesterday's final, and made a couple of hits himself. The action shows Gaston, Chillicothe, being thrown out at first base in the third inning on what should have been a single. Butts is taking the fine throw to first made by Yonkers.

Goldmans Win State Legion Junior Title and Will Play In Regional Meet at Topeka

By Damon Kerby

The Goldman Post junior baseball team won the State American Legion junior baseball championship by defeating the Chillicothe (Mo.) nine yesterday afternoon at Sportsman's Park, 17 to 4, for the St. Louis nine's second consecutive victory in the State Title Series. On Friday they defeated Chillicothe, 11 to 1.

By capturing the State championship the Goldmans won the right to represent Missouri in a regional tournament at Topeka, Kan., Aug. 15 and 16. State championship teams from Illinois, Iowa and Kansas also will participate. The winner of the Topeka tournament will go to Colorado Springs for the Western sectional tournament Aug. 28, 29 and 30.

From the Western sectional tournament the winning team will journey to Louisville, Ky., to meet the Eastern sectional champions in a "junior world series," Sept. 4, 5 and 6.

Goldmans Show Punch.

In yesterday's game, as in the first contest Friday between the Missouri finalists, the Goldmans showed a good punch. Three home run, two by Butts and one by Handley, were among the 14 hits collected off Pitcher Anderson of Chillicothe.

Lahey, who starred in the opening game of the State series, both at bat and on the pitching mound, played third base yesterday. He got a triple in four official times at bat, the blow coming with two runners on bases.

The Goldmans piled up their big margin of victory in the second and ninth innings, seven runs being scored in the second and four in the ninth. They also shoved across two in the third, one in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the eighth. Chillicothe was able to score only in the second and third.

The purpose of the Junior League games is to develop timber for future use in the big leagues, most of the expense of the tournaments being paid by major league owners. And that they are on the job in looking over the field was shown yesterday when Scout Joe Sugden of the Cardinals had Bob Lahey, the Goldmans' star pitcher and third baseman, go through his paces prior to the game. Lahey was asked to hit a few for the benefit of the Cardinal scout.

"He's an exceptional young player," said Sugden, following Lahey's workout. "Of course, he is several years away from the big league playing field, but he is a young man to keep track of. Perhaps he may be up there some day."

And if the major league owners dig up a few Laheys who develop into big League stars, the $50,000 spent in promoting the American Legion junior baseball games throughout the United States will have been well spent. Many times the major league magnets have sunk more than $50,000 for one or two players who have proved complete failures.

McCarthy Unravels Mystery of Vance's Mastery of Cubs

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.

UNLESS Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn's speedball ace, buys a new undershirt, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs either will buy one for him or complain about it to President Heydler of the National League.

Every time Dazzy hurls against the Cubs, he wears a ragged undershirt, and when he winds up to pitch, the ravelings flutter in the breeze like and old-fashioned fly chaser. McCarthy and his Cubs charge the ravelings flutter so much that they can't help but watch them instead of the ball. Hence Dazzy strikes many of them out and consistently defeats them.

Hack Wilson, home run slugger, is one of the complainants. Hack struck out four times the last time Dazzy pitched to him.

Blue Larkspur Injured; Out for Rest of Season

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The brilliant turf career of Blue Larkspur, champion of the 3-year-olds, received a setback today with the announcement that the great son of Black Servant-Blossom Time from the E. R. Bradley stable had pulled a tendon in a workout yesterday at Saratoga.

He was to go after his fifth win of the season today in the Miller Stakes as a warmup for the more important engagement to follow Aug. 17 in the Travers mid-summer derby, when he would have again met the best of his age. After pulling up lame, following a stiff workout, his trainers announced that it was doubtful if the pride of Kentucky would be in shape to race again this year.

CENTURY CREW THIRD IN RACE FOR NATIONAL ROWING TITLE

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 3.—The sturdy oarsmen which Philadelphia sent here to participate in the National Rowing Association's fifty-seventh regatta completed their triumph over the best blades in the United States and Canada by winning six of today's eight championship events. They captured five victories yesterday, giving them 12 of the 15 titles at stake in the two-day competition.

The greatest individual honor went to Kenneth Myers of the Bachelors' Barge Club who became the national single sculls champion by defeating Joe Wright, crack Canadian bladesman and the last year's winner of the famous diamond sculls, by a good length over the curved mile and a quarter course on the Connecticut River. Russell Codman of the Union Boat Club, Boston, was the other starter. This classic was closed to all but winners of the National Rowing Association's single sculls race. Codman trailed Wright by eight lengths, Myers' time was 8 minutes 18-4-5 seconds, an exceptional performance against a stiff head wind.

Penn Eight Wins.

The sweeps from the banks of the Schuylkill were victorious in the other important event, the senior eight oared shells, which was won by the Penn Athletic Club Rowing Association's eight against five rival crews. The Penn oarsmen had a two lengths lead crossing the line.

After the first half-mile marker was reached, the race developed into a three-cornered battle between Penn, Springfield and the Centuries. The Philadelphia crew, the best of the three, asserted itself in the remaining distance and won rather handily. But it was a

By J. Roy Stockton

Harold Haid pitched one of the worst games of his career yesterday afternoon, but the Boston Braves, after pounding the screw ball artist for four runs in the first inning, wasted all but one of their safeties thereafter and the Cardinals, doing a bit of slugging in the first two frames, overcame the four-run lead and won the first contest of the series, 7 to 5, for their third straight victory.

Jimmy Wilson was put out of the game and Manager McKechnie was ordered off the field for disputing a decision at the plate by Umpire Magerkurth. Jim tried to steal home in the second inning, and after he had finished his slide, Spohrer moved back and tagged him. Umpire Magerkurth then called him out, ruling that Jim had missed the plate. McKechnie left Gabby Street in charge when he departed.

Haid Lambasted.

Haid was lambasted to all corners of the lot, the Braves collecting a total of 15 assorted safeties, including five doubles and a home run, but after the first inning attack the only Boston tally was produced by a home run into the pavilion by Lester Bell.

There might have been a different story to tell about the outcome of the contest if Acting Manager Johnnie Evers had started Gorham Leverett instead of Southpaw Ed Brandt. Leverett went to the hill after the Red Birds had shellacked Brandt for eight hits and six runs in two innings, and the right-hander held the Cards to three hits and one unearned run in six innings.

Braves Score Four in First.

Richbourg started the game with a double to left and Rabbit Maranville beat out a bunt down the first base line. Haid knocked down Sisler's line drive and threw him out, holding Richbourg on third, but Les Bell drew a walk and George Harper, another former Cardinal, slammed a double down the right-field line and Richbourg, Maranville and Bell scampered over the plate. Welsh popped out, but Maguire doubled over Douthit's head, scoring Harper.

Fortunately for Haid, Maguire tried for third on his hit and was out because Johnnie Butler was blocking the base and Maguire, sliding for the bag, came to rest against Butler's foot, instead of against the sack.

The Cardinals quickly started a counter attack. Douthit singled to center and High doubled to right. Jimmy Wilson, moved to third place in the batting order because Frisch was out on account of illness, cracked a double to right center and Douthit and High scored. Bottomley popped out and Orsatti fanned, but Roettger doubled down the left field line, scoring Wilson.

Wilson Hits Second Double.

One was out in the second inning when Haid started a second three run rally with a single to right. Douthit singled to left, Haid stopping at second and High then beat out a hit to Sisler, who made a good stop near the foul line. Sisler made a high throw to Brandt, covering first and Haid scored and Douthit reached third on the error. Wilson then delivered his second double, driving Douthit and High over the plate. Jimmy went to third when Spohrer fumbled the throw home, but after Bottomley popped out, Wilson tried to steal home and was put out of the game for protesting Umpire Magerkurth's decision that he was out.

After that the Braves had all the better of the pitching as far as base hits were concerned. The visitors nicked Haid for two safeties in each of the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh innings, but all the base hits merely swelled the left on base total.

Magerkurth Reverses Self.

Bell hit his home run in the fifth inning and the Cardinals scored their unearned run in the eighth, as follows: With one out Orsatti singled to right and continued to third on Richbourg's fumble. On Roettger's bunt, an intended squeeze play, Leverette's throw had Orsatti at the place, but Spohrer dropped the ball as he tagged the rushing Ernesto Rudolpho and Magerkurth, who had called him out,

MANDELL TO GET $47,300 AS HIS SHARE FROM BOUT

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. — Sammy Mandell, world lightweight champion, will receive approximately $47,300 for polishing off Tony Canzoneri in their 10-round title engagement in the Chicago Stadium last night. The challenger will be enriched to the extent of $23,150.

These figures are based on the unofficial receipts checked up today by the Illinois State Athletic Commission. The gross receipts were reported to be $136,192.26, with state and federal taxes amounting to $20,428.68. The net receipts with the state and federal taxes deducted amounted to $115,762.58. The total paid attendance, according to unofficial figures, was 20,713, with possibly 3000 complimentary ticket holders.

Mandell and Canzoneri are understood to have received 60 per cent of the net receipts, with 40 per cent going to the champion and 20 per cent to the challenger.

Mandell was a downhearted winner. He said today that he was not himself and that he would not have blamed Eddie Kane, his manager, if Kane had tossed him out of the ring. The champion appeared to have been overtrained.

GOLFERS FROM ALL OVER COUNTRY GATHER HERE FOR TOURNAMENT

NATIONAL PUBLIC LINKS EVENT STARTS TUESDAY; GREENS TO BE OPENED FOR PRACTICE TODAY

Forest Park Links Open to the Public Until Noon Only Today

THE 18-hole municipal golf course in Forest Park will be closed from 12 noon today to the public in order to give entrants in the National Public Links tournament a chance to practice. The regular greens will be opened this afternoon.

The public also will be excluded from the course tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Thursday, after the matches in the tournament are over, the course will be open to the public and Friday also after the matches.

Saturday the course will be kept clear for an hour before the start of the morning 18-hole round and for an hour after it gets under way. In the afternoon the same program will be followed.

The 9-hole course will be available for play by the public as usual.

By W. J. McGoogan

With the best public links golfers in the country competing, the eighth amateur public links golf tournament will get under way at Forest Park Tuesday morning when the first 18-hole qualifying round is scheduled. Many out-of-town entrants have been in the city practicing for the past few days and the maority is expected to arrive today to get in last licks in preparation for the event.

Thirty-five cities from New York in the east to San Francisco in the west are represented in the 144 entrants. Each city is limited to a total of six.

Carl F. Kauffman of Pittsburg, Pa., who has won the championship for the past two years is entered. He arrived here Friday and has been practicing diligently for the defense of his title. The Pittsburg team likewise has won the Warren G. Harding cup presented to the team of four having the lowest aggregate score for the two qualifying rounds for the last two years and three members of the championship are again entered.

Two Qualifying Rounds.

Two qualifying rounds of 18 holes each are scheduled, one Tuesday and one Wednesday. The 32 low scorers then play matches to decide the championship. First and second round matches are set for Wednesday, third round and semifinal matches Friday and the final match Saturday. The final will be 36 holes and all other matches 18 holes. Those who fail to qualify will play a consolation medal tournament of 36 holes at Midland Valley Country Club Thursday. The use of Midland Valley was tendered to officials of the tournament by John J. Nangle, president of the club and of the St. Louis District Golf Association.

The 18-hole municipal course, according to those who have played it for 10 years, is in the best condition of its history and while some of the visitors have been a bit dumbfounded by its topography, yet after closer inspection they have agreed that it is an interesting layout and should provide a fine test of golf.

St. Louis is to be represented by Bobby Held, Jerry Stanford, Michael Freidlein, Togo Hamamoto, Dr. I. R. Davis and Herbert Lorenz, all of Forest Park. They are splendid golfers and each of them has a chance to win. However, those who are followers of Forest Park golf favor Togo Hamanoto, Japanese member of the team, because of his familiarity with the course and his fine match play ability.

Another Japanese Entered.

It is possible that an all Japanese final will be played, as a member of the San Francisco team, A. G. Sato, is a Japanese He arrived yesterday with two other players from Frisco.

It has been impossible up to the present for the visitors to test their games on the course because temporary greens have been in use. The regular greens have been closed since last Monday in order to get them ready for the tournament. However, they will be opened this afternoon and there will be plenty of opportunity for the players to become acquainted with the course this afternoon and tomorrow.

The course has impressed the early arrivals by its apparent toughness. And it is tough, as all the ordinary golfers in this city who play in Forest Park regularly can attest. But it is not impossible. Good golfers make good scores on it just the same as on other courses. The noncompetitive course record is held by Clarke Morse, assistant professional at the Forest Park Golf Club and Missouri open champion, who went around the course in a friendly match last year in 68, four under par.

Morse describes the course and his method of playing it as follows:

Course Analysis, Hole-by-Hole

No. 1, 395 Yards, Par 4—A creek crosses the fairway 233 yards from the tee with the green beyond. A No. 3 iron should put the player in position for a pitch to the green.

No. 2, 220 Yards, Par 3—Water directly in front of the tee. The fairway is narrow and lined on both sides with trees. On a dry day a No. 1 iron should carry the green but if the course is wet and especially if the wind is against the player a spoon shot is required.

No. 3, 183 Yards, Par 3—The tee is situated in a grove of trees. A creek crosses the fairway some 50 yards in front of the green which is situated on a steep hill on the far side. A straight, high three iron shot from the tee is required to carry the green.

No. 4, 475 Yards, Par 5 — The fairway crosses the foot of Art Hill at the bottom of which is water. The tee shot must be played well to the left. The second shot is a blind one as the green is situated beyond a hill. A good brassie or No. 4 iron should leave only a short chip shot third to the green.

No. 5, 488 Yards, Par 5—This is one of the toughest holes on the course. It is a dog leg to the right with out of bounds to the left and trees lining the fairway toward the green. A good straight drive and a brassie should come close to the green.

No. 6, 172 Yards, Par 3—The fairway slopes toward the green which is elevated. There are traps about two-thirds of the way to the green. Requires a No. 5 iron to clear the traps and with a good break the ball will hop onto the green.

No. 7, 333 Yards, Par 4—There are some troublesome traps close to the green but a good drive should leave only a pitch shot to the green.

No. 8, 348 Yards, Par 4—The tee is on top of a hill while a creek crosses the fairway about 50 yards in front of the green. On a dry day a No. 3 iron should give plenty of distance off the tee and leave an easy pitch to the green. In wet weather probably a spoon could be used from the tee.

No. 9, 641 yards, par 6—A creek crosses the fairway some 75 yards in front of the tee. Out of bounds to the right and woods to the left. Three wood shots and a chip generally are necessary to reach the green.

No. 10, 230 yards, par 3—A blind hole with high rough to the left. A No. 1 or No. 2 iron shot is necessary to get home here.

No. 11, 560 yards, par 5—Dog leg to the right, woods to the right. Two wood shots should put the ball within a chip shot of the green.

No. 12, 209 yards, par 3—Traps to right and left of the green. The fairway slopes gently to the green and a No. 3 iron should carry.

No. 13, 439 yards, par 5—There is a good chance for a birdie here, as a good drive and a 3 iron can reach the green.

No. 14, 368 yards, par 4—Woods to the right present about the only difficulty on this hole. A drive and No. 7 iron should get home.

No. 15, 325 yards, par 4—The fairway is all down hill, with the green elevated a little. A well-placed drive has a good chance of reaching the green.

No. 16, 358 yards, par 4—Water directly in front of the tee, beyond which is a broad fairway. A drive and mashie niblick should reach the green.

No. 17, 160 yards, par 3—The classic hole of the course, and one of the most fearsome looking holes to be found anywhere. Beginning about 20 yards from the tee is the grand basin, and there is water all the way to the green on the far side. The green is guarded by two huge trees. A No. 4 iron probably is the best shot here, for it is better to be over the green than short and in the water.

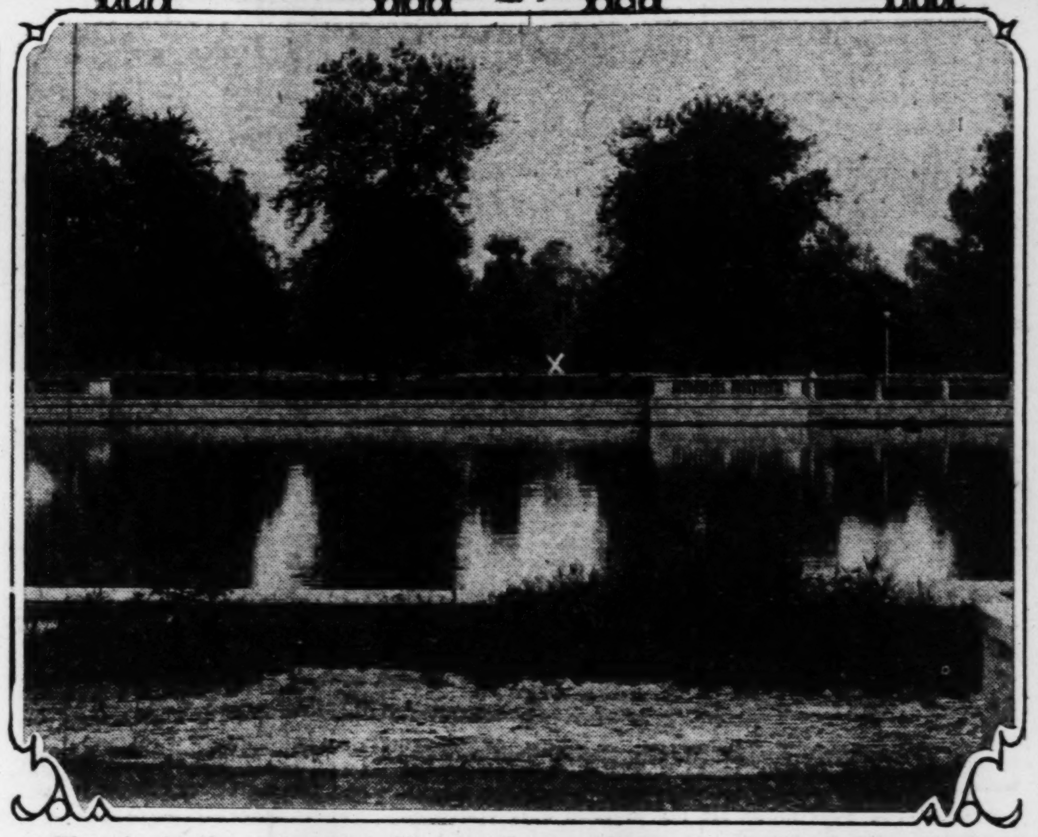
No. 18, 365 yards, par 4—There is a ditch some 50 yards in front of the tee and there are woods on the right, but no serious difficulty is presented by either. A drive and a pitch generally put the ball on the green.

CONGRESS LEAGUE TO REORGANIZE

The Congress Handicap League, which has been in existence for 10 years, will have its reorganization meeting Friday night at the Congress alleys. This league is composed of eight teams and bowls on Friday nights at 9:15 o'clock. There will be one vacancy in the league, and any team desiring to enter is invited to attend the meeting.

The Congress Booster League, which rolls on Wednesday nights, will hold its meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 14. This is also an eight-club league that bowls on the Congress drives.

Where Hopes of Many Championship Aspirants Will Be Sunk



Water is plentiful on the 18-hole Municipal Course. Here are three holes full of it. No. 2 upper left. It doesn't take much of a tee shot to get over, but woe to him who tops the ball. No. 3, upper right. What San Juan was to Roosevelt and Vauquois was to Pershing—that's what the hill at No 3 is to the golfer. It's fine at top, but there's water before you get there. And below, No. 17—that's the hole! Nothing but water. A par 3, but there's many sixes and eights (the hard way,) lurking beneath the placid waters of the Grand Basin.

ST. PAUL CLUB WINS SEVENTH IN A ROW

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 3.—St. Paul extended its winning streak to seven straight games this afternoon when it defeated Minneapolis in the second game of the series, 7 to 6. Pewee Wanninger's home run inside the park was the deciding factor.

twice. Seven runs were scored in this inning by the St. Louis team.

J. Rensch made a pretty play of Borenstein's line drive in the third inning. He knocked the ball into the air with his gloved hand and caught it coming down.

Throwing a runner out at first base on a drive to right field is seen only infrequently in the majors. Yonkers, right fielder for the Goldmans, had the distinction of making this play twice. He retired Gatson in the third and Dowell in the fifth on sharp drives to right field.

Members of both teams were guests of the American Legion at a banquet last night at the Fairgrounds Hotel. Taylor Douthit, Cardinal center fielder, presented gold baseballs to the Goldman players.

DR. DIEKNEITE WINS VETERANS' TENNIS TITLE

By Davison Obear

Dr. Frank Diekneite is the first Veteran's singles champion of the St. Louis District Tennis Association. He defeated Dempster Godlove in the final round of the men's singles event at the Triple A Club yesterday afternoon, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2.

In the opening set Diekneite played in top form. His fast drives apparently bothered Godlove who was able to win only the second and fifth games in the set. Diekneite won four love games in this set and scored a total of 26 points to 10 counted by Godlove.

Godlove changed his style of play somewhat in the second set. He tried a barrage of cross court shots which bewildered Diekneite who won only the first and fourth games in this set. On several occasions Godlove tried some net play but was passed by Diekneite. Godlove won two love games in the set and counted 31 points to 19 scored by Diekneite.

Play in the third and final set was closer than in the others. There were four deuce games in this set and only 11 points separated the players. Diekneite was much steadier in this set. Godlove won the second and fifth games in the set.

The District Veterans' doubles title was decided several weeks ago. Dr. Frank Diekneite and Dempster Godlove defeated W. H. Bronaugh and Paul Laidley in the final round.

The point score of the Diekneite Godlove Veterans singles final:

HORTON SMITH AND HAGEN COUNT A JOINT CARD OF 68

By the Associated Press.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 3.—Walter Hagen and Horton Smith combined their efforts for a better-ball of 68 to defeat Brad Oxnard, former state amateur champion, and Eddie Myers, local professional, 4 and 3 in an exhibition match at the Metacomet Golf Club this afternoon. One of the largest galleries in the history of Rhode Island golf followed the foursome.

Hagen's par-equalling 37 carried the invaders over the first nine all even and then Smith took up his share of the burden with a 35 for the homeward stretch. The British open champion was approximately 73 while the young Missourian, as a result of an erratic first nine, was 77. It marked their twenty-fourth victory in 27 matches, the team having lost but one and tied two.

GUS BOEHMER TAKES JUNIOR NET HONORS

Gustave "Junior" Boehmer won the Municipal junior singles tennis championship at Forest Park yesterday by defeating Joyce Portnoy in the final round, 6—4, 6—2, 6—4.

Both players exhibited some excellent tennis. Boehmer appeared steadier, especially in the first and third sets, when Portnoy was pressing him for points.

Following the match the two players departed for Memphis, where they will compete in the Tennessee State championship which opens tomorrow. Boehmer and Portnoy will then journey to Culver, Ind., for the National Junior and Boys' Tennis Championship. They will represent the Missouri Valley and St. Louis District Tennis Associations in the national event.

MISS JACOBS AGAIN SEABRIGHT CHAMPION; RAIN STOPS DOUBLES

By the Associated Press.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Aug. 3.—Playing on a rain-drenched court Miss Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Cal., won the women's singles title in the annual Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club tournament today, completely outclassing her fellow Californian, Miss E Cross, of San Francisco, by scores of 6—1, 6—2. The match lasted but 33 minutes.

A gallery of slightly more than 200, including Gov. Morgan F. Larson of New Jersey, looked on as Miss Jacobs, the country's second ranking player, successfully defended her Seabright laurels won last year.

From the outset it was seen that Miss Cross, No. 3 in the national ranking, had little chance against the well-placed driving and the volleying of Miss Jacobs. Miss Cross was able to win only three scattered games, the same number collected by Miss Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass., in the semifinal and by Miss Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica, Cal., in the third round.

Match Played in Rain.

Miss Jacobs suffered the loss of but eleven games but not a single set in her four matches.

Instead of slowing up Miss Jacobs' game the pelting rain appeared to make it more dangerous. Her crisp drives slithered over the turf with a low, deceptive bound that had Miss Cross banging the ball outside or into the net for a total of 83 errors in the two sets. Miss Jacobs made 49 miscues.

Miss Cross, taking the net whenever possible in spite of the bad footing, scored 18 placements to Miss Jacobs' 16, but her numerous errors caused her to beat herself.

Men's Doubles Stopped.

The rain, increasing to near cloudburst proportions, drowned out the men's doubles final which eventually was put until tomorrow with the youthful team of Berkeley Bell of Austin, Tex., and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., leading the old Davis Cup combination of Richard N. Williams II, of Philadelphia, and Watson Washburn of New York, 7-5, 7-4, 6-4, 2-1.

In the mixed doubles final contested later in the day when the weather had improved, Bell and Miss Marjorie Morrill, Dedham, Mass., defeated Miss Clara Zink of Cincinnati, and J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., 6-4, 7-5.

17 MATCHES IN WOMEN'S NET TOURNEY PLAYED

The annual municipal tennis championship for women players opened yesterday afternoon in the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park. A total of 17 matches were completed in the women's singles event. Play in the doubles will open this afternoon. There will be an admission charge of 25 cents.

Delphine Rauch of Fairground defeated Merceina Weiss, Kingshighway, in one of the three extra set contests played. Miss Weiss, who is the district girls champion, surprised by taking the first set from her more experienced opponent. Net play enabled Miss Rauch to win the second set, 9—7. In the third set Miss Rauch improved her game and won the set easily. The complete score was 4—6, 9—7, 6—0.

Mrs. Florence Probert, O'Fallon Park player, defeated Virginia Noonan, Fairground Park girls star, in a hard fought three-set encounter. The score was 4—6, 6—2, 7—5. In another three-set battle Edith Steideman, sister of Herbert Steideman, O'Fallon Park, defeated Lillian Boening, Kingshighway, 5—7, 6—4, 6—1.

The first players to reach the third round of the women's singles are Mrs. Violet Furlong, Ruth Minucciane and Mrs. B. K. Brouster. In one match Mrs. Furlong, O'Fallon Park star, won from Deborah Carnovsky of Carondelet, 6—0, 6—2, while in another contest Mrs. Brouster, of Forest Park, showed improved play over last season in defeating Rose Roeder, Carondelet, 6—1, 6—2. Ruth Minucciane, O'Fallon, won from Marguerite Behrensmeyer, Forest Park, 6—3, 6—1, to reach the third round.

CENTURY CREW THIRD IN RACE FOR NATIONAL ROWING CHAMPIONSHIP

beautiful race between the Springfield and Century eights. They came down the historic Connecticut River practically side by side. Never were they separated by more than a few inches, and they continued that way until the finish line, when the local crew was declared winner by a scant margin. Both the Springfield and Century crews were cheered lustily by the rowing enthusiasts who braved the rain to witness the event.

Pennsylvania's work was expected, and its victory taken as a matter of course from the day that its shell was unloaded at the boathouse. The chances of Springfield and the Centuries were matters of conjecture and few believed that they would be able to turn back such stellar crews as those representing the New York Athletic Club and Lincoln Park Boat Club of Chicago, Ill. The Lincoln Park eight, it will be remembered, was the runner-up in the national event for the last two years and the seatings have been unchanged during that time. But these crews never had a chance and finished far in the rear.

Century Lineup.

Holding blades in the Century boat were William Buder, Har Smith, John Bokel, Armand F ster, James Meyer, John F Fred Karches and William Duc Bob Ruedi was the coxswain. The St. Louis boys rowed beautifully. They increased their stroke near the finish and did all that could be expected of them.

Though they rowed against a strong breeze, the Penn oarsmen swung over the mile and quarter stretch of choppy water in six minutes, 32 2-5 seconds.

MacGreal Wins Single Sculls.

Emanuel J. MacGreal of the Bachelors' Barge Club, won the senior quarter-mile single sculls dash by a length over his clubmate, W. E. Garrett Gilmore. Johnny Guest, the Canadians' sculling champion, and John Crooks of the Union Boat Club, Boston. The Clark twins of the Undine Barge Club, another Philadelphia organization, were unopposed when they obtained their second consecutive senior 145 pounds double sculls title.

The Springfield Rowing Association's junior eight defeated the Farragut Boat Club crew of Lynn, in the race for the national junior championship. The time was seven minutes 32 3-5 seconds. The senior 145-pound title was captured by the Undine Barge Club of Philadelphia, after its eight spurted home a length and a half ahead of the Detroit Boat Club eight in the time of seven minutes 15 2-5 seconds.

Of the Post-Dispatch

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Play Browns and Athletics this afternoon tie. A crowd of 20,000 saw the rain

The Athletics used four pitchers to hold the Browns even and it was noted that though the rain continued hard from the second inning on, Manager Mack was not willing to call it off until his team, in the eighth had scored the tieing run.

Browns Rout Groves.

The Browns drove out the great Bob Grove with six successive hits after two were out in the first inning. Jack Quinn was next and he did well until in the seventh, when the Browns bunched five hits, including a homer by Blue, to score three more runs—this margin was erased with the exception of one run in the last of the seventh, when, with two on Jimmy Foxx hit his twenty-fourth homer of the year. The blow came off Sam Gray who had weathered the storm rather well up to this time—he was hit hard but was at his best in the pinches.

Ogden's relief work when he came in with two on and one out in the seventh and retired the A's without more run making was a feature.

A's Tie it in Eighth.

In the last of the eighth, Haas led off with a triple and scored when Al Simmons punched his fourth single of the day through the box. When Foxx hit into a double-play the play was suspended —after a half hour wait the game was postponed.

Tomorrow the Browns will have a day off from their labors. A double-header is scheduled for Monday and another for Tuesday.

Bob Grove got one of the surprises of his life in the opening inning. Easily and, indeed, rather disdainfully, he disposed of Blue and O'Rourke. Manush doubled, but that was nothing. Manush advanced on a passed ball and scored when Schulte singled to center. Kress then tripled to right and Schulte scored. McNeely was good for a single to count Kress and even Grove was troubled so much that he cut loose a wild pitch which put McNeely in the spot to score when Schang followed Melillo with a single. Then the great Grove went out and Yerkes went in to retire Gray.

A's Come Back With Two.

An error by McNeely on Bishop, first up, was followed, after two were out, by singles by Simmons, Foxx and Miller. These brought two runs.

A pass by Yerkes to Blue in the second ended him and Jack Quinn went in, but Blue scored on O'Rourke's single and Manush's sacrifice fly in the third.

A wild throw to second by Gray gave the A's their third unearned run.

Blue Hits Homer.

This run came back in the seventh when Blue, first up, hit over the fence in right for the full distance. It was the first hit off Quinn since the second inning. There was more to come. With Manush out along with O'Rourke, Schulte beat out one to Boley and then when Kress pumped a double to left, "Red" advanced on a wild throw by Hale and tallied on McNeely's single. Melillo also singled but Schang grounded out.

In the last half, Cochrane walked, Simmons singled and Foxx hit his twenty-fourth homer of the year. Miller walked and so did ray. Ogden going in. French

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Playing in a pouring rain, the Browns and Athletics this afternoon played to an eight-inning, 8-8 tie. A crowd of 20,000 saw the rain-soaked proceedings.

The Athletics used four pitchers to hold the Browns even and it was noted that though the rain continued hard from the second inning on, Manager Mack was not willing to call it off until his team, in the eighth had scored the tieing run.

Browns Rout Groves.

The Browns drove out the great Bob Grove wih six successive hits after two were out in the first inning. Jack Quinn was next and he did well until in the seventh, when the Browns bunched five hits, including a homer by Blue, to score three more runs—this margin was erased with the exception of one run in the last of the seventh, when, with two on Jimmy Foxx hit his twenty-fourth homer of the year. The blow came off Sam Gray who had weathered the storm rather well up to this time—he was hit hard but was at his best in the pinches.

Ogden's relief work when he came in with two on and no one out in the seventh and retired the A's without more run making was a feature.

A's Tie it in Eighth.

In the last of the eighth, Haas led off with a triple and scored when Al Simmons punched his fourth single of the day through the box. When Foxx hit into a double-play the play was suspended —after a half hour wait the game was postponed.

Tomorrow the Browns will have a day off from their labors. A double-header is scheduled for Monday and another for Tuesday.

A's Come Back With Two.

An error by McNeely on Bishop, first up, was followed, after two were out, by singles by Simmons, Foxx and Miller. These brought two runs.

A pass by Yerkes to Blue in the second ended him and Jack Quinn went in, but Blue scored on O'Rourke's single and Manush's sacrifice fly in the third.

A wild throw to second by Gray gave the A's their third unearned run.

Blue Hits Homer.

This run came back in the seventh when Blue, first up, hit over the fence in right for the full distance. It was the first hit off Quinn since the second inning. There was more to come. With Manush out along with O'Rourke, Schulte beat out one to Boley and scored when Kress pumped a double to left. "Red" advanced on a wild throw by Hale and tallied on McNeely's single. Melillo also singled but Schang grounded out.

In the last half, Cochrane walked, Simmons singled and Foxx hit his twenty-fourth homer of the year. Miller walked and so did Gray, Ogden going in. French batted for Hale and singled but Ogden then did some fine pitching and got the next three men.

Earnshaw faced the Browns in the eighth and set them down. A triple by Haas and Simmons' fourth single tied the score in the last half after which play was suspended, Connie Mack having achieved his object.

Brownie Notes.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.

It is surprising how little real confidence there is here in the ability of the Athletics to win the pennant, despite their overwhelming lead, with the century mark in games passed. "Oh," they say, "they've looked like this before."

Because of the threat of rain, the teams "stole" a few minutes on the start of the first game.

The Shibes are having the same trouble with overanxious fans the Cards experienced last year. Everybody, even though they believe it too good to be true, wants to put in an application for seats, just in case they win.

Gray should not have been scored on in the last of the first. McNeely dropped Bishop's fly to give the A's a chance. Gray got the next two and then three successive singles followed.

Anyway, the Browns can claim a near record. They saw three Athletic pitchers before a man was out in the second.

In the last of the third, Cochrane and Simmons singled on two pitched balls. The rain continued to pour down as Foxx popped to Melillo. Miller hit a grounder that shoul have turned into a double play, but Gray made a wild throw to second and a run scored. Then Hale did what Miller tried to do—hit into a real double play.

Connie Mack wanted to get that game in, and play wasn't even suspended, even though a young and successful flood was in progress.

Melillo had a great day afield in the tie game. At second, he handled 14 chances, which at least approaches a record.

Haas' triple, which let the leaders tie the count, was a line drive to right on which McNeely made a gallant diving try.

The Browns hit in spurts. After their six in succession off Grove in the first, O'Rourke hit a single off Quinn in the second and then the Browns went hitless until Blue exploded his homer in the seventh. Quinn settled and got two men, and then followed four hits in a row.

Of course, when Mr. Mack let the game go on, he wasn't thinking about the money. Nor, of course, was he thinking of the score, when, at the end of the fifth when it was an official game, the score was 5—3, with the Browns up.

It will be said that the umpires might have called it at any time they thought best, which might draw forth some comment as to when an umpire thinks, best or otherwise. Certainly, 20,000 persons were entitled to a bit better treatment. They paid their money to see two games, and they saw one played to no decision.

The loss of the game would have meant little to the Athletics, so great is their lead. At that, they seem scared to death as the season goes on and the other teams refuse to concede them anything.

like the Browns, can roll up an eight-run lead in the sixth inning, then lose, 13 to 9, there is a screw loose with our baseball system. And these freak scoring games have happened often enough to make certain that the high scoring fever is not accidental.

The Happy Medium.

SOMEWHERE between the crash of bats on defenseless "cripples," such as we hear today, and the piffling popping of impotent batsmen, that we saw in bygone days, lies the resurrection of the game.

Fans like hitting, but not mayhem. They like good pitching, but not no-hit games. The balance between attack and defense must again be evened and this time in favor of the pitching.

The magnates know a lot of ways by which pitching can be helped—keeping balls longer in play, removing the white gloss before using the balls, thickening the leather covering, removing some of the restrictions against pitchers and even modifying the construction of the ball.

The Eastern League already has taken steps to produce a less resilient baseball, next year, and perhaps major leagues will follow this lead.

The cheapening of home runs, the decline of base stealing, the nullifying of great outfielders and the passing of the policy of playing for one run in favor of slugging out a cluster of scores, show that baseball needs a major operation.

There is another thing that seems to indicate it more poignantly, to our club owners: Grand stands occupied by fewer than a thousand cash customers at games where first division clubs are involved!

That calls for emergency treatment.

Breaks of the Game.

BLUE LARKSPUR has sprung a "charley horse" and ruined his chance to achieve a record as enduring as that of Red and Obie promises to be. The "charley horse" is the breaking of a muscle sheath and, in case of a heavy animal, recovery is a slow process and sometimes, for racing purposes, never actually takes place.

Thrown out of racing for the year, the Bradley product will miss his chance to win several valuable stakes for three-year-olds, namely: The Travers, the Lawrence Realization, the Latonia Championship and others. In all, his engagements made him appear the probable winner of more than $100,000 in addition to his present earnings which already totaled for this season, around $150,000. With the added winnings expected of the form he had displayed, he might have approached the mighty Zev in three-year-old winnings.

MAX SCHMELING is unwilling to fight Phil Scott, who was knocked out in one round by Knute Hansen, yet is willing to fight Tom Heeney, who was good enough to challenge and fight Gene Tunney for the title.

The reason back of this strange discrimination caused the row between Schmeling and the commission. Schmeling doesn't fear Scott, but he refuses to fill engagements arranged by a discredited manager (Arthur Buelow), without his (Schmeling's) consent.

The announcement that Max is willing to meet Heeney is a gesture to prove to the commission that it was not Scott he feared.

But even a commission of high specific density, like New York's, could hardly make the mistake of supposing any real fighter would tremble at meeting Phillip. A bad case of the ague might bring that on, but not Phillip.

It Doesn't Happen Often.

ACCORDING to arrangements now being perfected, Sharkey will fight Pierre Charles two weeks before he meets Schmeling, while the German wants to oppose Heeney about the same date.

Ordinarily promoters prohibit such bouts, to make sure that injuries do not ruin the show and compel a change of date.

Evidently the Madison Square Garden promoters figure that neither Charles nor Heeney is capable of doing much damage. After watching both we can put a double O K on that view.

Charles never was anything; Heeney had all his toughness knocked out of him by Tunney.

Freeze Out the Trust.

A SERIOUS move to flatten the Billy Sandow wrestling trust, if you wish to call it that, seems to be on foot. A group of mat promoters, baffled for years by the machinations of Sandow, seemingly have banded together to rid the game of the man who has virtually dominated it for the better part of 10 years.

The promotion group, after several caucuses, announced an elimination tournament open to the world. Lewis and Sonnenberg were invited to attend. Although Lewis had lost his title and Sonnenberg has been discredited in many places and banned in others, both refused to enter.

Now the battle of rival wrestling groups is on, with a good chance that Lewis, Sonnenberg & Co. will shortly pass out of the picture.

We're Hoping—That's All.

THIS is no brief for the group that is promoting the elimination. There are spots on their escutcheons, too, if you please. For a time some of them "played with" the Sandow interests and did a thriving business, too.

Nevertheless, the fight may clear the atmosphere and bring out more wrestling and less showmanship.

Who knows? Perhaps some day the world will really know who is champion of wrestling. So far as the known form goes, we defy any man to name him—and prove it.

If an elimination is held, there seems no reason to doubt now that the best man would be permitted to win.

There is still a strange forgetfulness on the part of promoters, however. A letter from Promoter Fabiani of Philadelphia to the Post-Dispatch says, in part: "Londos has chased Lewis and Sonnenberg for three years in vain."

But he did not chase Lewis in vain, in certain St. Louis contests, in which Lewis defeated Jimmy, so far as the official evidence shows.

The first effort of promoters to restore public confidence should be devoted to telling facts, without exaggerations. Years of misrepresentation, concealment and deliberate untruths as to finances, physical condition, etc., have soured many persons. Bunk propaganda insults the intelligence.

Bicycle Title Races Today at The Fairgrounds

City bicycle championships will be decided in two classes, senior and junior, in races scheduled to be held at the Fairgrounds this morning, starting at 8 o'clock. The races are to be held under the auspices of the American Bicycle League, and the six winners in each class will qualify for the State championships to be held over the same course next Sunday.

Four events are on the senior card, races being scheduled at half mile, one mile, five miles and 10 miles. All races are to be from scratch. The 10-mile race will be eight times around the track, with a sprint at the end of each lap.

In the junior division there will be races at half mile, one mile, two miles and five miles, with a sprint at the end of each lap.

Five points will be scored in each race for first, three for second, two for third and one for fourth. The rider getting the greatest number of points will be the local champion.

A total of 35 entries have been received for both divisions.

McKechnie Banished As Cards Beat Braves had to reverse his decision.

Magerkurth had a hectic afternoon. He was frequently in hot water, and the fans boohed him for several innings after he had banished Wilson and McKechnie. One might suggest that Magerkurth was a bit dizzier than usual in calling balls and strikes, but then perhaps that had better be left unsaid, as the big leagues never thought much of the idea of putting the umpires in the press box.

So let it go the other way—that Magerkurth was not any dizzier than usual.

Red Bird Notes.

Sylvester Johnson, who was knocked out of the box by the Robins Tuesday, will pitch against the Braves in the second game of the series this afternoon. Art Delaney, once a Cardinal, is likely to hurl for the visitors.

Not more than 3000 persons paid to see the opener with Rabbit Maranville, George Sisler, Lester Bell, George Harper and the other Braves. It was the smallest Saturday crowd of the Cardinals at home.

Maranville, shortstop for the world champion Braves of 1914, still is spry. He went to the foul line for Bottomley's pop fly in the first inning, and in the third he went behind second for a spectacular stop of Roettger's grounder and threw him out.

That's one big mistake the Cardinals made this season—sending the Rabbit to Boston for a song, when singing won't get you out of fourth place.

Frankie Frisch reported sick and McKechnie had to rearrange his infield. Andy High moved to second base and Johnny Butler played third. Wilson took Frisch's place in the batting order, with Butler hitting eighth.

Sisler led off in the third with a single and Spohrer started the fourth the same way, but Haid pitched himself out of danger.

With two out in the sixth singles by Maranville and Sisler and a pass to Bell filled the bases, but Harper ended the inning with a polite grounder to Bottomley.

High singled to center for his third straight hit in the fifth and Jonnard sacrificed neatly, but Bottomley and Orsatti grounded out.

Three Braves were left on base again in the seventh. Welsh led off with a single, Maguire struck out and Spohrer doubled to left. After Leverett struck out, Richbourg was passed intentionally and Maranville, with a call of three and two, popped to High.

The eighth was the Braves' only hitless inning, Sisler, Bell and Harper failing to get the ball out of the infield.

CUBS DEFEAT ROBINS, 12-2, INCREASE LEAD TO SIX GAMES

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The Cubs increased their lead over the Pirates to six full games by defeating Brooklyn, 12 to 2, in the series opener here today as the Buccaneers lay idle in a Pittsburg rainstorm. The Bruins pounded three Robin pitcher for 15 hits, and drew steadily away from the visitors. Hal Carlson gave four passes but so scattered eight hits that Brooklyn never was in the running. A home run by Babe Herman in the fifth accounted for one of the Brooklyn runs. Kiki Cuyler drove in four runs with two singles.

VON ELM

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Even with Bob Jones striding the golf world like a Colossus of Rhodes, the coming national amateur championship looms more interesting than ever. For one thing Jones will be confronting the opportunity for making it "three in a row"—a goal amateurs in the past have not been able to achieve, not even the great Walter Travis or Jerry Travers, Chick Evans or Francis Ouimet. Secondly, because one short, stocky blond-head named George von Elm, who stopped Jones from winning three straight, when in 1926 that opportunity was last afforded the Atlantan, never plays poorly in California. Third, because, one rotund slugging Britisher, Cyril James Hastings Tolley, is due to play. Fourth, because this year's national amateur championship marks the first holding of so important tournament on the Pacific coast.

Right after Jones administered his 23-stroke licking to Al Espinosa in the play-off of the tie in the United States open championship at Winged Foot Club, the national amateur championship loomed up as just another golf tournament for Jones to win. But the open and its attendant fever having worn off, one looks more calmly at the situation and finds a brighter side for those amateurs who are going to stack their strokes against his at Pebble Beach, Cal.

Jones Looked Like Winner.

Several weeks ago Bob looked like a positive winner. The betting gentry could have gotten better than even money on Jones to win the amateur field. He looked more certain to win the amateur than in 1926 after he had triumphed in the British open at Lytheham and St. Annes and later in the United States open at Scioto. Just before the amateur tournament started, Jones held all the golf titles for which he was eligible; the two opens and the U. S. amateur won the previous September when he defeated Watts Gunn in the final at Oakmont. But Jones did not win the amateur at Baltusrol. George von Elm did.

George von Elm putted at Baltusrol. He insists it marked the first and only tournament outside of the Gold Mashie event at Newport last in which he did putt in a fashion worth noticing. Who knows but that he may putt again this September on the course in California?

Von Elm Knows Game.

Certainly Von Elm illustrated at the Winged Foot Club that he knows the game from tee to green. Finishing in a tie with Tommy Armour for sixth place showed how well he was playing to the green even if he couldn't putt.

In these last two United States opens Von Elm has not survived the two 18-hole rounds. He was beaten in the second of these short matches at Minikahda by the veteran Harry Legg. He was vanquished in the first round at Brae-Burn last fall by the rotund "Ducky" Yates.

The chances are this will not happen again and once in the 36-hole matches Von Elm, a proven performer, ought to go right on to the final unless fortune pits him against Cyril Tolley in the early rounds, a circumstance not at all unlikely.

The United States amateur draw is seeded. Jones, being No. 1, goes in the bottom bracket. Von Elm, undoubtedly No. 2 player, will be placed in the upper bracket. Phil Perkins, former British champion and runner up for the United States crown, will, if he gets in under the immigration quota, be placed No. 3 in the same half of the draw, with Jones shunting Tolley, probable No. 4, man, in the same half with Von Elm.

Many Things Can Happen.

Jones fears no man over the 36-hole route in match play or in a 72-hole medal play grind. But experience has taught him that strange things may happen in the two 18-hole rounds of the National Amateur. He recalls very vividly having to take Dick Jones' dust up to the thirteenth hole in their match at Balturol. He can tell of the gallant fight Maurice McCarthy Jr. waged at Minikahda and of the struggle the veteran Roy Gorton put up a Brae Burn last year.

Jones is well aware that in this year's championship he may stack up against some young man who, riding the crest, will sink the Atlantan. Three in these last four years almost accomplished the feat. Then, too, when Bob did reach the final at Baltusrol, George von Elm beat him. Jones, for all his marvelous golf, is not unbeatable at match play, and when playing such worthy opponents as Tolley, Von Elm et al., he is not a guaranteed winner.

CONNOLLY, DEAN OF A. L. UMPIRES, RETIRES OWING TO ILL HEALTH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—When Tommy Connolly, dean of major league umpires, caught a train for his home at Cleveland recently, the American League lost its most efficient workman for the season andpossibly for all time. The veteran is tired, after 30 years of making decisions, and his health is not of the best.

CONNOLLY.

His departure comes at a time when it hurts most, for not since the birth of the American League has the organization's umpires operated at such an expense of good will on the part of player and public. In the past few years it has been drained of Billy Evans and Clarence Rowland, both experienced and capable men.

Connolly rarely had trouble on the ball field. From 1922 until the day he left he had found it necessary to put out only a couple of ballplayers. Even in the heat of the final game in which he worked he remained calm to the finish. Umpire Van Graflin banished Lou Gehrig, and doubtless was justified, but when Huggins approached him without a word Van Graflin said: "You're out, too, for delaying the game."

Huggins' journey across the field was to find out what had been done or said. He had made extensive changes in players, and the loss of Gehrig robbed him of a chance to win the game. But out he went.

How Tommy Stopped Them.

This was the signal for Leo Durocher to take off his shoes, and off they came.

"Take them both off, Leo," declared Lazzeri, squatting down, "and we'll both hunt for nails."

Connolly trotted over to both boys.

"Here, here, Leo," he said, with all the claim in the world. "Stop your nonsense. Tony, get up and go back to second."

Both young men did as directed and without a word of comment or reply. They know that Connolly doesn't like to put out players, but they respect his judgment in all matters.

His favorite player is Lazzeri, and he remarked two years ago that he believed Lazzeri was the best young player he had seen come into the league since Eddie Collins. During every game in which there was an argument or dispute, you would see Connolly discussing the points with the Italian. Their mutual admiration remained to the end.

Twice Injured on Field.

Early in 1927 Connolly was obliged to quit umpiring behind the plate. High blood pressure forced him to eliminate as much excitement as possible from his work. He was permited to work at third and first base. A few days later in Boston a bad throw escaped Phil Todt and struck the veteran right above the bridge of the nose, rendering him unconscious.

He had not been returned more than a week when a ball took a bad hop and struck his finger and that was bandaged for weeks. He was in danger right up to the last. He was umpiring at third base in his final contest when Ben Paschal laced a foul ball down there at bullet-like speed. Connolly ducked just in time for the ball to pass over his head.

His 30 years of umpiring have earned him a complete rest, but it leaves a league that much behind in efficiency. Good umpires aren't coming up like they used to.

Was a Personal Matter.

Who can report an umpire's intoxicated condition? There was one on the field last year and he made rank decisions all afternoon. Why aren't umpires obliged to retain a figure that will permit them to scamper about as fast or half as fast as a ball player? There is little wonder that the umpire is held cheaply by the crowd. His futile gesticulations are humorous and some of the decisions complete the material for laughing stock.

When President Barnard was asked in the spring of 1928 about the dismissal of Clarence Rowland, he replied:

"That was entirely a personal matter."

In 1927 Van Graflin was working his first year and a dispute arose during a game in Cleveland. He rendered a decision and Manager Huggins emerged from the dugout.

"Go back! Go back! shouted Van Graflin. "I don't want to put you out, Huggins, so go back."

Connolly told him to listen to what Huggins had to say. He listened and reversed himself a few minutes later.

At the hotel that night Connolly gave him a light lecture.

"Never act hastily like that, Van," he said. "That man wasn't a hot-headed ball player. He represented Col. Ruppert, who has a fortune invested in that ball club as has any owner. He wasn't trying to embarrass you or gain any edge. Remember that."

MRS. MALLORY FORCED OUT OF MAIDSTONE TOURNEY BY INJURY

By the Associated Press.

EASTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Disturbed by rain and lacking its stellar attraction, Helen Wills, the annual women's invitation tennis tournament of the Maidstone Club today concluded the entire first round and most of the second round matches.

Four of the eight seeded stars went out of the first day's play, two by default and two by unexpected defeats. Mrs. Molla D. Mallory of New York, head of the seeded contingent, was forced to withdraw because of an injured knee, while Marjorie Morril, young Dedham, Mass., star, was unable to appear because of conflict between today's match and the final of the mixed doubles at Seabright.

Evelyn Parsons, Tiny California player, provided the day's biggest sensation by eliminating Mrs. L. H. C. Michel of England in a straight set match. Barely over four feet tall and weighing well under 100 pounds, Miss Parsons hit everything in sight to win by scores of 7—5, 6—4, but Miss Parsons fell in the second round before a tried veteran, Mrs. Charlotte Hosper Chapin, 4—6, 6—1, 7—5.

Mary Greef of Kansas City, the second seeded player to taste defeat, met a much sterner opponent in Penelope Anderson of Richmond, Va., a former "first 10" player, the Virginia girl was in fine form and won easily, 6—2 6—1. She scored another fine victory in the second round, eliminating Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Conn., 6—1, 6—1.

Thee Hellrungs are leading the league with three victories and no defeats. Harty Club, County Banks and Uniteds are tied for second with two games won and one lost. C. A. C. is on the bottom with only one victory.

Theoretical Speed of British Harmsworth Cup Challenger Is Placed at 100 Miles Per Hour

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—In addition to the fifteenth race for the Harmsworth Cup, the British International trophy, to be held at Detroit Aug. 31 to Sept. 3, the Detroit Gold Cup Committee has secured the field international trophy as a prize for the winner of a special outboard motorboat race to be run on the final day of the regatta.

The trophy is offered by Sir Leicester Harmsworth and Harold Harmsworth, brother of the late Lord Northcliffe who donated the British international. It is held in trust by the Marine Motoring Association of England for the Field Magazine. This will be the first time it has been offered in competition.

The rules of the race complying with the deed of gift, specify that the course shall be one nautical mile in length exclusive of turns and that all competitors shall make 12 runs of the course, six with the current and six against it.

Drivers using motors of class F specifications or under are eligible. Additional rules specify that the race must be held under the control of the International Motor Yacht Union.

English Girl a Challenger.

The Harmsworth races will draw three entries, Miss Marian Barbara Carstairs, of England, who is challenging; James A. Talbot Jr., and Gar Wood who are defending. The British boat known to date as "Hush-Hush" but entered as Estelle IV is all that the sobriquet implies for no one has been able to secure the specifications save that the craft is a step hydorplane 39 feet long, carries three Napier Lion engines developing approximately 2800 h. p., and has a theoretical speed of 100 miles an hour! It will be shipped to America very soon and tested on Lake Muskoka, Ont., before the Detroit races.

Miss America VIII, which Gar Wood will have ready to defend the trophy is equally secret. It is rumored, however that the craft will show something now in the line of power, probably four Packard engines operating on two screws through a tandem arrangement of the motors. Miss America VII, the present holder of the World's speed record will also defend.

Ralph Snoddy to Drive.

The Talbot boat to be driven by Ralph Snoddy, is a single step hydroplane, 38 feet long with beam of 9 feet 8 inches. She is powered by a two W type 24-cylinder Miller engine, operating on twin screws to develop 1200 horsepower each at 2400 revolutions which can probably be speeded up with that style of motor.

The boat will have an actual length on the water line of 29 feet, the remainder of the over-all length being a fan carried above the water to [illegible] the vacuum incidental to high speeds. The craft will be controlled by a low rudder.

Other events scheduled at the Detroit regatta are outboard races on the first three days for division one and two drivers using classes A, B and C, motors and an unlimited race on Sunday for division two and 3 drivers. In addition runabout races will be held.

Expects 200 Strikeouts.

Carl Fischer of Newark expects to have a strikeout total of 200 this season. He long since passed the 100 mark. Major league clubs have been bidding for him.

Three-I Attendance Falls.

Attendance has not been good in the Three-I League and several of the clubs had to resort to booster days to get enough money to pay expenses.

BROWN AND JOSTIES IN WESTWOOD FINAL

Play in the Westwood Country Club invitation tennis tournament is now in the final round of the men's singles event. Two semifinal round matches were played yesterday afternoon in the men's singles event. Wray Brown defeated Karl Kammann, 6—0, 6—3, in one of them, while Fred Josties won from Teddy Eggmann, 7—5, 7—5, in the other.

The final round matches will probably be played next Saturday. On May 30 last the Westwood Country Club opened its six new courts with first round matches in the invitation tourney. Owing to rain and absence of players from the city play was not resumed until last Sunday.

DOC CRANDALL'S SON FOLLOWING HIS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS AS PITCHER

Playing with the Bell High School team this season, young Crandall won the six games he pitched, allowing a total of 13 hits.

PITTSBURG HAS LOST NINE OF LAST 15 GAMES

By Davis J. Walsh,

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—To the rest of us, it might have been the nicest July 20 we have had this year but, then, the rest of us don't live in Pittsburg, which makes all the difference in the world, particularly to one's linen. Anyhow, July 20 wasn't July 20 in Pittsburg; it was the day on which Burleigh Grimes was hurt, making it the logical birthday of Benedict Arnold, the scoundrel who is understood to have tried to throw the world series back in 1776. It was the day that apparently put the sowser on Pittsburg as a possible winner of the National League pennant.

With Grimes carrying the pitching and Pie Traynor holding up the infield, all was well on July 12. The Pirates were three games in front of their field and hastening onward with the speed of an evil rumor. With Traynor out, the club faltered a trifle and was only a game ahead on July 19. Then Grimes went out and it didn't falter at all. It fell all over itself. And at a late hour last night it still was falling faster than the hair from a receding forehead.

9 Defeats in 15 Games.

They say the Phillies have no pitchers and maybe they haven't. But one of the pitchers they haven't got, Sweetland, shut the Pirates right out yesterday, rounding out their ninth defeat in the last 15 games, which roughly represents the period covering the absence of Grimes and Traynor. In brief, nobody will take issue with the statement that the incapacitation of this pair—one of them, a pitcher, who won 15 of his first 17 games, and the other the keyman of the infield—is losing the pennant for Pittsburg.

But the man would be silly who says that this is wining the pennant for Chicago. Nobody is winning the pennant for Chicago, except the Chicago ball club. Any outfit that wins 13 of its last 15 games may be designated as a self-made winner and one that needs no understudy.

In the natural course of events, the Cubs' performance probably would have carried them to the pace, Grimes or no Grimes. But with both Grimes and Traynor in there, the Pirates undoubtedly still would have a ball club and the National League still would have a pennant race. For the Pirates have been playing around with the chump clubs of the circuit, Boston, Philadelphia and Brooklyn, since late in July and, under ordinary circumstances could have been expected to stick with even the giddy pace the Cubs have furnished.

Sluggers Fall Down.

Instead, they won only once in three games with Brooklyn, broke even in four with Boston and yesterday blew their third of four meetings with the Phillies. For a time, the hitting held up—and they lost. They scored seven runs in one game and nine in another and finished second in both. Then the pitching came on again—and they lost. It is the thing one does best when one's knees are spavined.

McGraw Says Stories of His Fines and Nagging Tactics Are Not Founded on Facts

By John J. McGraw.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 3.—A story has been circulated in newspapers throughout the country during the past week to the effect that the players on the Giants are so discontented over severe fines that I have imposed that they are almost on the point of rebellion. The published articles also intimate they are constantly upset by my nagging tactics. Now, I can and do overlook a lot of things because my position makes me somewhat of a mark for such gossip, but this is a deliberate concoction and untrue and I am going to thrash it out to the bottom. I propose to find out who is responsible and deal with them accordingly.

All of last season there was not a single player on any club fined by me and the total fine inflicted this season is $100. One man was fined $75 of that amount, $50 for staying away from the hotel all night and $25 for disobedience of orders. The other $25 fine was imposed on a player for neglecting to touch a base, which cost us a ball game. That was done as a punishment to speed up the player and make him careful.

As to the nagging charge, I have not so much as talked to the club at a meeting since July 18. I make it a point of staying away from players when they are going bad or are in a slump. It only tends to aggravate the situation. My custom is to point out the faults of the club while it is winning. The minds of the players are much more receptive then and such talks encourage rather than discourage. I know that my system has been discussed and often criticised for years, the writers usually being entirely wrong in their statements and deductions. I never bother to deny these things, but this last article is so untrue and perhaps damaging to my club that I am determined to get at the bottom of it.

Can Interview Players.

No one need to take my word for these things. The press has my permission to interview every ballplayer on my club. If any have been fined I want the players to admit it and to say what they were fined for.

The last series of fines imposed by me was on Hughey McQuillan about two years ago and that was for general misconduct, a most aggravating case of it.

This season one player, Jack Cummings, was absent without leave for 10 days and automatically suspended himself with loss of pay.

A ridiculous statement in this recent story is that I have continually piled up fines on the players for making errors, making them nervous. As a matter of fact in more than 30 years of managing ball clubs, I have never fined a ball player for making an error. That would be absurd. Mechanical errors are just as much a part of baseball, as base hits and we will always have them. Fans, who do not realize this, are often too harsh in criticising a player for dropping a ball or fumbling a grounder. Those things are bound to happen. It is proper to criticise a player for bad judgment, but never for a mechanical error.

Now about that nagging business and the constantly repeated statements that I give all the signs to my pitchers, and so on. So far this season, I have not given signs to the pitchers at all. They have been allowed to pitch their own games and use their own judgment.

The players on the Giants are just as indignant about these unfair and untrue charges as I am and as I say any newspaper man is free to talk with them and get the facts.

Discipline on a ball team is very necessary, but it does not necessarily have to be harsh. Billy Southworth, recent manager of the Cardinals, tells me he made the mistake of mixing with his players and being too free and easy with them. Under these circumstances it is often very difficult for a manager to assert his leadership when firmness is necessary.

In the meantime, the major league races are going at a good pace with little change in position in prospect. The Yanks are playing a good nagging game, that keeps the Athletics constantly on their toes. The A's cannot afford to slip for a moment. It is still possible for them to strike a slump and if they do the Yanks will be right on their heels.

In the National League the Cubs have the best of it, while playing in their own park, and they have been further helped by the team being in good shape. Even when Cuyler was out for a spell, Cliff Heathcote came in and played good ball. The Chicago pitchers have not been as steady as they might, but the heavy hitting behind them has held the club up. The Cubs have caught the winning spirit and have become strong lasting fighters. During the week they have come from behind to win about half their games.

The Yanks, the Pirates and the Giants are waging a trailing fight, their success depending entirely upon a slip on part of the two leaders.

Fans may depend on there being no let up in the struggle by the runners-up because second place carries with it a prize well worth fighting for. Even third place carries with it a pretty good sized share of the world's series money.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 3.—More than 1000 crack shots of America aare expected to participate in the thirtieth annual tournament of the Amateur Trapshooting Association, at the permanent home of the association, six miles north of Dayton, the week of Aug. 19—25.

Guaranteed cash awards and trophies hung up for the several events have an aggregate value of $33,915.

The Grand American Handicap, the big shoot of the week, is set for Friday, Aug. 24. In it will appear the "big guns" of the trapshooting world. The activities of the association are dictated by a board of directors representing 41 states of the Union and three provinces of Canada. Of the 44 directors, but one is a woman. This distinction this year goes to Mrs. W. P. Andrews of Atlanta, Ga., known for her ability at the traps wherever trapshooting is in vogue. Mrs. Andrews "knows her onions" when it comes to knocking down clay pigeons. She won first honors in a number of events at the tournament last year and in previous years. She is also widely known for having popularized trapshooting among women.

Shooters Coming by Plane.

Many of the "air minded" trapshooters will fly to the shoot this year, according to letters received at the association headquarters.

The permanent home adjoins the municipal airport—described by U. S. Air Service officials as being the model airport of the country. Both institutions are located at the intersection of the National Highway and the Dixie Highway, the cross roads for the aerial liners, and mail planes now in use.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.

NOTWITHSTANDING the hundreds of columns written for magazines and newspapers forecasting a social upheaval in Washington by the first of next December, hostesses are following the lead of the White House and are going steadily on with their accustomed programs.

The White House already is laying its plans for the usual events of the winter social schedule, and in appointing military, naval and marine aids has taken the most important step. For many years one or two aids sufficed for the President, but when President Roosevelt came in with his love of the glamorous side of military life, he added the largest staff the mansion had ever accommodated, nor has the list grown less since that time.

The general custom in selecting these officers, who never appear at the White House except in full dress uniform with sword, is to seek detached or unmarried men. One consideration is that an aid can take no family burdens with him to the White House, and if his wife attends a reception she has to look out for herself

Because of the distinction, the post of White House aid carries, the men are selected with great care. From the army the aids include Maj. Raymond E. McQuillin, U. S. Cavalry; Maj. John M. Eager, Field Artillery; First Lieutenant Johnn E. Upston, Air Corps; First Lieutenant Don E. Lowry, Quartermaster Corps; First Lieutenant Hugh B. Waddell, Cavalry; First Lieutenant Edward H. Young, Infantry, and Second Lieutenant Charles E. Saltzman. From the navy are Lieutenant-Commander Alexander Macomb, Naval Intelligence; Lieutenant-Commander John E. Ostrander, Bureau Aeronautics; Lieut. Kenneth M. Hoeffel, Naval Operations; Lieut. Llewellyn J. Johns, and Lieut. William E. G. Erskine, Bureau of Navigation. From the marine corps, the officers of which have the most ornamental uniforms, there are Capt. R. L. Montague and Capt. John Halla. There is an effort to distribute this patronage throughout the States.

In the group of senatorial families remaining in Washington is that of Senator Couzens of Michigan, who bought Villa Rosa, a pink stucco house on Massachusetts avenue in the vicinity of the American University. Villa Rosa is back from the highway and is entered by a broad drive, horse-shoe in shape, the extreme curve ending at the front door. Flowers in splendid luxuriance border the drive, rich in coloring. There is a broad terrace at the back secluded and overgrown with roses. All of the entertaining is done there.

Here's That New Way of Removing Arm or Leg Hair!

—So Many Women Are Asking About

Even by running one's hand across the skin, absolutely no stubble can be felt this new way.

A New Discovery That Not Only Removes Hair Instantly But That Utterly Avoids Fostering Bristly Re-Growth

A NEW way of removing arm and leg hair has been found that not only removes every vestige of hair instantly, but that banishes the stimulated hair growth thousands of women are charging to less modern ways. A way that not only removes hair but delays its reappearance remarkably!

It is changing previous conceptions of cosmeticians about hair removing. Women are flocking to its use. The discovery of R. C. Lawry, noted beauty scientist, it is different from any other hair remover known.

WHAT IT IS

It is an exquisite toilet creme, resembling a superior beauty clay in texture. You simply spread it on where hair is to be removed. Then rinse off with water.

That is all. Every vestige of hair is gone; so completely that even by running your hand across the skin not the slightest trace of stubble can be felt. And—the reappearance of that hair is delayed surprisingly!

When re-growth finally does come, it is utterly unlike the re-growth following old ways. You can feel the difference. No sharp stubble. No coarsened growth.

The skin, too, is left soft as a child's. No skin roughness, no enlarged pores. You feel freer than probably ever before in your life of annoying hair growth.

WHERE TO OBTAIN

It is called NEET—a preparation long on the market, but recently changed in compounding to embody the new Lawry discovery.

It is on sale at practically all drug and department stores and in beauty parlors. In both $1 and 60c sizes. The $1 size contains 3 times the quantity of the 60c size.

Clear Your Skin Of Freckles—Sunburn

You can purge the skin of all impurities and remove freckles, sunburn and other summer defects by using pure mercolized wax. When applied to the face, neck and arms nightly, like a cream, the wax gently absorbs the outer cuticle, and with it every blemish, such as freckles, blackheads and sunburn. The under skin, then brought to the surface is clear, soft and fine-textured as in youth. Procure an ounce from your druggist and begin today testing the merit of this toilet accessory. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. For wrinkles and enlarged pores, bathe the face in a solution of 1 ounce powdered saxolite dissolved in 1 half pint of witch hazel.

DAWES BARES HIS SECRET

Takes Tips on Ambassadorial Etiquette From Japanese Envoy.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—U. S. Ambassador Dawes explained at a dinner the other night how he "the least experienced diplomat that has ever been to the ourt of St. James' solved his problems of diplomatic etiquette.

I just follow the lead of the Japanese Ambassador who is my senior here," he explained. "When he speaks, I speak, and when he bows, I bow." The previously inscrutable face of the Japanese Ambassador, who sat by the American Ambassador, was wreathed in smiles at the conclusion of Dawes' remarks.

MUSEUM PAINTINGS IN COURTHOUSE EXHIBIT

Display of Pictures Attracts Much Attention — Several St. Louis Scenes in Collection.

The summer exhibit of paintings at the Old Courthouse, a display sponsored by the St. Louis Art League, is attracting considerable attention. The visitor, bent on transacting some business, strolls around the rotunda, surprised, entertained and obviously pleased.

The historic old building itself contributes potently to the general scene. Its rough stone floor, which often has been referred to as another evidence of the building's general dilapidation, now comes into its own. For this floor of rough stones is the original floor of the Courthouse.

Paintings described as "only of museum quality" cover the four quadrant walls of the ground floor, paintings lent by several important institutions. Among them is the portrait of the late David R. Francis, the work of Richard E. Miller, of St. Louis. This portrait is the property of the St. Louis Art Museum.

An Indian Scene.

Another painting which catches the eye of the visitor is "Peace and Plenty," another possession of the St. Louis Art Museum. It depicts the placid prosperity of the Indians of the southwest, the plenty found in the cultivation of pumpkin and corn. It is the product of Oscar E. Berninghaus's brush, the artist who deserts St. Louis consistently for the Taos colony in New Mexico.

St. Louis is not neglected by its painter citizens. Frank B. Nuderscher, perhaps as well known for his St. Louis scenes as Berninghaus is for his paintings of the Western Indians, is represented by his "Eads Bridge," another canvas that recently became the property of the St. Louis Museum. Nuderscher and St. Louis are furthermore represented in several other of the artists' paintings hanging in the Chamber of Commerce collection on the balcony walls.

Forest Park Landscape.

Another St. Louis canvas is a Forest Park landscape, a view including the River de Peres. The stretches of the park and the river's banks are covered with a blanket of snow; gleaming sunlight is over all, shadows lurk here and there. The whole piece is vigorously done. It is the work of Tom P. Barnett, the artist-architect.

Washington University has lent the exhibition a portrait of Robert Brookings, painted by William V. Schevill. The philanthropist is shown in his academic robe.

Color is outstanding in two paintings by Takuma Kajiwara. Kajiwara's work forms the keynote of one of the walls of the exhibition. Upon the same wall are two flower pictures by Kathryn E. Cherry, an out-of-door figure painting by Ralp Ott, and a winterlandscape by William Bauer.

Among the other artists represented are Gustav F. Goetsch, Fred G. Carpenter, Fred Rushing Roe, Prof. Edmund H. Wuerpel, John J. Eppensteiner, Eugene Barth and Oscar Thalinger.

LOCUSTS RAVAGE CORSICA

In Two Days Swarms Wipe Out the Crops.

AJACCIO, Corsica, Aug. 3.—An invasion of locusts unprecedented in the history of the island, has made a clean sweep of the most fertile region of Southern Corsica.

Arriving in swarms so dense that they obscured the sky, the locusts in two days devoured all the wheat and vegetables and stripped bare the oak, cork and olive groves and vineyards.

First Russian Clock Factory.

MOSCOW, Aug. 3.—The Soviet Government has assigned $2,250,000 for construction of the first watch and clock factory in Russia. Equipment has been purchased in the United States and American experts will instruct Russians in the craft.

POWERS TO MEET TUESDAY TO ACT ON YOUNG PLAN

Hague Session to Decide on Substitution of International Bank for Reparations Machinery.

FEAR OF ITS POWER ONLY OBSTACLE

Reduction of Amount Charged Against Germany to Be Finally Ratified Also.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE Aug. 3.—Statesmen of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan will meet here Tuesday to wipe the international slate clean of troubles hanging over from the World War.

The first item on the agenda is the adoption of the Young plan for reparations payments.

The principal feature of the new scheme, which is to replace the Dawes plan, is the reduction of the amount charged against Germany for reparations from the original total of 132 billion marks to about 37 billions, payable in 58 years.

A new organization, which the financial experts who met in Paris early this year named the "Bank for International Settlements," is to be substituted for the Reparations Commission and for the Agent-General for Reparations. The Young plan also calls for the restriction of deliveries in kind on reparations to a period of 10 years, beginning with a maximum of 750,000,000 marks and decreasing gradually to 350,000,000 the tenth year, when they cease altogether.

Most of the Governments interested have signified their acceptance of the plan so far as it concerns the reduced amounts Germany must pay.

The Government representatives here, first of all, will decide whether they accept the Young plan of annuities; then they will pass upon the substitution of the proposed bank for the old reparations organizations.

The only criticism of the plan is that the proposed bank would have powers that might enable it to exercise a controlling influence over international finance.

Owen D. Young, originator of the plan, held that some institution of the kind would become necessary, whether accepted in connection with the reparations scheme, or independently of it.

Young declared the time had come when capitalists must consider how to put an end to such anomalies in the capitalistic system as famine in some countries while wheat is rotting in others. The bank for international settlements, he thought, if given power to interest itself in the development of world trade would be able to help powerfully in correcting such evils.

With these questions out of the way, the conference can fix the date for the application of the Young plan, and then will come up the consequences of the reparations settlement; complete evacuation of the Rhineland, and an agreement as to the constitution of a committee of conciliation, temporary or permanent, to watch over any armaments on the left bank of the Rhine.

SUES CONSTABLE AND AIDS FOR $43,000 FOR ARREST

John L. Donovan Charges He Was Assaulted by Carondelet Officer and Deputy

Suit for $43,000 damages was filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday against Constable Tony Fassler of Carondelet Township and one of his deputies, Jack Pleiman, by John L. Donovan 30 years old, of Kimmswick, Mo., in connection with Donovan's alleged arrest March 24, last.

Donovan, accompanied by three men, was driving home from Weber Road Inn, Weber and Union roads, where he is employed as a musician. He charges in the suit that while he was buying gasoline at Bayless avenue and Lemay Ferry road the defendants arrested him and detained him for 15 minutes. Fassler, he avers, hit him in the face and on the jaw with the butt of a revolver, inflicting a four-inch cut and a permanent scar on the face, and causing Donovan to fall back into his car.

According to Harry F. Russell Donovan's attorney Fassler was trying to question Donovan, who said he would be inclined to answer if he knew who Fassler was. Thereupon, Russell said, Fassler showed his badge and remarked, "You're one of those smart guys," and attacked Donovan Fassler could not be reached for a statement. Donovan seeks $500 actual and $10,000 punitive damages for the alleged arrest and $7500 actual and $25,000 punitive damages for the alleged attack.

NEW AIRPORT TO SPEED MAILS BY 20 MINUTES

Universal Aviation Corporation Takes Option on Land Around Horse Shoe Lake.

With a view to bringing the air mail terminal within 20 minutes of downtown St. Louis, the Universal Aviation Corporation, operating mail and passenger lines to Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha, is seeking a location at Horseshoe Lake, near Granite City. The motor trip from the main Postoffice to Lambert-St. Louis Field, the present air mail terminal, requires 40 minutes.

It was learned that the Universal Corporation, through an agent, has obtained options on 610 acres fronting on and including a portion of Horseshoe Lake. The options were obtained for an average of $330 an acre, including 200 acres of the lake. The latter circumstance indicates the possible use of amphibian craft as well as land planes. The land includes portions of five farms, the owners of which are bringing abstracts to date preparatory to transferring the property.

The distance separating Lambert-St. Louis Field from the main Postoffice and downtown hotels was early recognized by commercial operators as an obstacle to efficient air schedules. Partly because of this condition Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., operating coast-to-coast train-plane service, which now uses Lambert Field, will move to Curtiss-Steinberg Airport, south of East St. Louis, late this year.

Another objection to the use of Lambert Field by transportation companies is the presence of two flying schools there, with the danger of collision between a transport plane and a ship flown by a student occurring. Lambert Field in the near future will be used exclusively for instruction and manufacturing purposes and as a refueling station for transient planes, it is expected.

The Universal Aviation Corporation, in addition to its lines out of St. Louis, operates passenger service between Cleveland, O., and Garden City, Kan.

SALE OF PURE-BRED HOLSTEINS ON FINAL DAY OF DAIRY SHOW

S. R. Melin, Who Will Conduct Transactions, Calls Arena Best in the Nation.

Pure-bred Holstein cattle, valued at from $700 to $5000, will be sold Saturday, Oct. 19, the final day of the National Dairy Show here, in the pavilion of the Missouri Stables, S. R. Melin, Minneapolis, Minn., who will conduct the sale, announced yesterday.

Melin, before departing for Minneapolis, praised the new plant of the National Exposition Co., where the show will be held.

"It is without question the greatest show place in the country," he said, "and will house the most complete dairy show ever held. The Southwest is developing so rapidly in the dairy industry that I would not be surprised if in a comparatively short time it will outrank some of the old dairy states of the North."

Melin was the guest here of F. W. A. Vesper of Fredmar Farms, St. Louis County, owner of Netherland Belle Ormsby, valuable Holstein heifer, and of Oakwood Piebe Allie, a blue-ribbon Holstein calf.

LIQUOR LAW CASES DECLINE IN NUMBER

District Attorney's Report Shows Decrease First Time Since Prohibition.

A decrease in the number of liquor law violators prosecuted and convicted in Federal courts here for the fiscal year ending June 30, from the record numbers of 1928, when 985 prosecutions were instituted and 893 convictions obtained, was noted in the annual report of District Attorney Louis H. Breuer to the Attorney-General, made public yesterday.

During the last 12 months, the report shows, only 825 prosecutions of this class were instituted, and 798 convictions obtained, of which 790 were on pleas of guilty. Three of 11 defendants who elected to take their chances with a jury were acquitted. Thirty-two cases were nolle prossed by the District Attorney's office.

The amount of fines imposed and collected was smaller in both instances this year than last. In 1928 fines aggregating $258,981 were imposed and $134,929 collected. This year the total of fines was $210,182 and the amount collected $103,080.

The past 12 months was the first similar period since the national prohibition act went into effect in January, 1920, that failed to show an increase in the number of cases instituted and convictions obtained over the preceding period.

During the 12 months the District Attorneys' office instituted criminal prosecutions in 1119 cases of all classes. Of this number 1097 were terminated by 993 convictions, 92 dismissals and six acquittals following jury trials. Thirty-two cases went to trial. There were left pending on the court's dockets at the conclusion of the year 256 cases. Fines aggregating only $21,836 were imposed in criminal cases, other than liquor violations, and of this amount $15,436 was collected.

TO MAKE PLANS FOR WORK UNDER NEW BOND ISSUE

L. E. Smith of Civic Needs Council Appoints an Executive and a Program Committee.

TO MAKE REPORT IN SEPTEMBER

Efforts Will Be Made Also to Finish Uncompleted Projects, Authorized in Past.

Steps to carry out the proposals for numerous public improvements to be financed by a new bond issue, that were discussed at the series of luncheons last spring, have been undertaken under the leadership of the Chamber of Commerce. Luther Ely Smith, general chairman of the General Council on Civic Needs, the body having direct charge of the projected work, has appointed an Executive Committee and a Program, Plan and Scope Committee.

The Executive Committee, headed by Smith, will meet at the Chamber of Commerce to organize and to outline a tentative program of work to be started soon. The Program, Plan and Scope Committee is to devote itself to a program to be presented at a general meeting of the delegates to the General Council on Civic Needs to be held in September. These delegates represent 135 commercial and civic organizations.

Consideration is given also to uncompleted bond issue projects heretofore authorized. Chairman Smith said:

"Many of the civic improvements that were authorized in the past still remai nto be worked out. Many of the street widening projects authorized in former years not only have not yet been completed but may not be for some time to come. Meanwhile, traffic congestion is growing daily, and it becomes incumbent that some concerted action be taken to consummate these things. We consistently believe that with a focal point for contact in the Chamber of Commerce and a co-ordination of effort by both city officials and citizens results can be achieved, not only with this problem, but with many others of a like nature."

Members of the executive committee are:

William G. Alexander, West St. Louis Business Association; Miss Alberta Allen, Town Club; Fred Armbruster, Manchester Chouteau Association; A. H. Armstrong, Church Federation; Dr. J. W. Bechtold, North St. Louis Business Men's League; Maurise Cassidy, Building Trades Council; Christian Brinkop, Tenth Ward Improvement Association; Dr. E. A. Burst, Cherokee Business Association; Carl H. Christine, Electrical Board of Trade; Clarence Comfort, Advertising Club and Associated Printers; Mrs. M. J. Cullinane, Council of Catholic Women; J. H. Feckter, O'Fallon Park Protective Association; Mrs. Jack R. Forcheimer, National Council of Jewish Women; T. W. Garland, Cabanne District Improvement Association; Frank K. Harris, Business Men's Association of South St. Louis; Mrs. E. J. Hoffman, Board of Religious Organizations; David Kreyling, Central Trades and Labor Union; George H. Pring, St. Louis Florists' Club; Harry Parker, Baden Business Men's Association; J. F. O. Reller, Kiwanis Club of St. Louis; Walter Smith, Chamber of Commerce; A. E. Werremeyer, Associated Printers; Parker Woods, Park and Playgrounds Association; C. E. Valier, Merchants' Exchange.

Members of the program, plan and scope committee are:

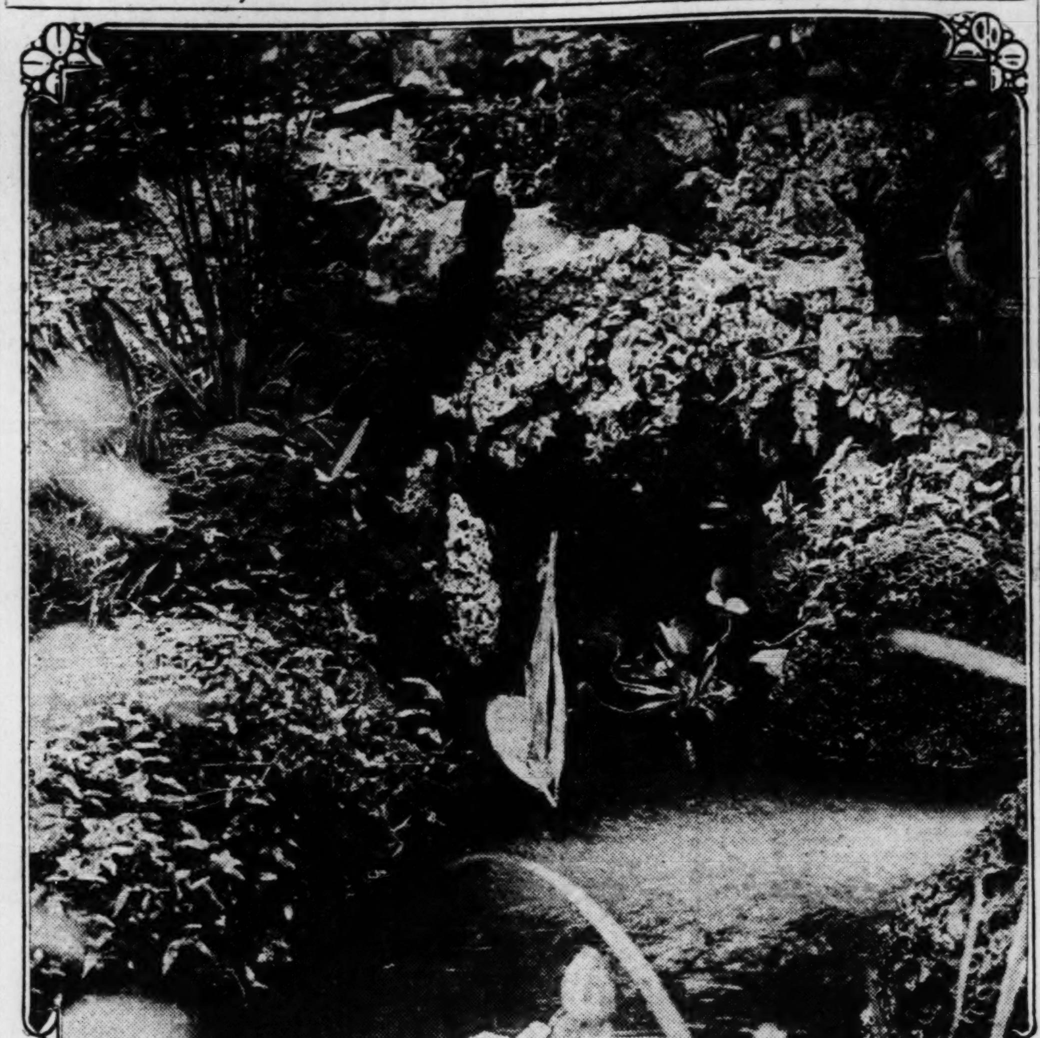
W. D. Aufderheide, South Side Kiwanis Club; William C. E. Becker, American Society of Civil Engineers; Baxter Brown, Engineers' Club; Walter E. Bryan, Joint Council of Associated Engineers; F. B. Chamberlain, Merchants' Exchange; Charles J. Daly, Real Estate Exchange; A. P. Greensfelder, Master Builders Association and Regional Planning Federation; Mrs. John Haskell, League of Women Voters; Eugene S. Klein, American Institute of Architects; Matt Morse, Automobile Club of Missouri; John M. Robertson, Building Owners and Managers' Association; William Wedemeyer, North St. Louis Business Men's Association; W. B. Weisenburger, Chamber of Commerce; Charles E. Williams, Associated Retailers.

ROBERT M. ARBUCKLE NAMED HEAD OF LIGHTING DIVISION

A successor to George B. Heath has been appointed as superintendent of maintenance and construction in charge of the lighting division of the Department of Public Utilities. He is Robert M. Arbuckle, who has been temporary head of the division since Heath resigned upon being indicted about two months ago in connection with the A. M. Ryckoff street lighting contract scandal.

Arbuckle's promotion was announced yesterday by Director of Public Utilities Rilliet. He has been an electrical engineer in the division since 1927, at $255 a month. His new salry is $4200 a year.

Backyard Garden and Man Who Laid It Out



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer

A SHADY pool in the garden of Dr. George A. Bronson, in which floats a tiny sailboat. Below is the builder of the garden, which is situated at Washington boulevard and Compton avenue.

Gardener Builds Oasis in Grubby Section of City

Dr. George A. Bronson Has Made a Beauty Spot of His Back Yard at Compton and Washington.

"The trouble with the average gardener," remarked Dr. George A. Bronson, passing his hand over a coral pyramid from Cairo in his extraordinary back yard, "is that the gardener starts out with nothing but a package of grass seed, a lawn-mower and a desire to be exactly like everybody else.

"When he gets through all he has is a lawn flat as a billjard table, square as a choping block. I've got a prize for a lawn that anybody stops to look at for 30 seconds. But right here, in the heart of a great city, where nothing wants to grow, is a garden that arrests the attention of 300 persons a day."

Dr. Bronson's white hair shone in the sunlight as he turned to survey his handiwork in the rear of his residence, 3201 Washington boulevard. An unfettered imagination have made it as lovely and fantastic as the dreams of a child watching the summer clouds.

Passersby Stop to Look.

Leaning against the iron fence on Compton avenue, were a young Negro and his girl friend, smiling and chattering as they pointed out the myriad curious bits in the garden. Near them was a group of round-eyed dusky children. A large purring automobile stopped for the traffic signal and then backed up for a place to park behind the trucks lined up at the curb, while its occupants, alighted for a closer inspection of "The Oasis."

The yellow sunlight slanted over a rough stone wall on the west, dappled the grass, glittered in miniature pools that in the shade reflected the green above, and struck out many a quaint vista along the tiny curving walks. Here stood a somber pergola of stones of odd shape, there arched a toylike bridge of weather-worn limestone, with bits of old brick and glass giving artful contrast of blue and orange red.

Novel Decoration.

Everywhere in "The Oasis" is something to lure the imagination away from every day. In the stones of the bridge the fanciful may see a wild boar and a camel. In the rocks beside the gate are the heads of a dog and of a rabbit with ears made of Indian spearheads. Along a narrow gravel bed a thread-like stream encounters all the vicissitudes and finds all the tranquilities of a mighty river.

And everywhere is proof that Dr. Bronson, in his 20 years of travel in this country and two in Europe, viewed every bit of beauty or fantasy in terms of translating it to his mid-city garden of 40 by 60 feet. He has seen the weird roots of cypresses arch against the twilight Kentucky horizon, and so the roots of Kentucky cypresses arch weirdly among the stones of his garden. Feathery native copper from Lake Superior, delicate and different as a coral fan, twisted tree-branches from the Ozarks, crystallized silica from Washington County, unusually shaped rocks from Canada and a vacant lot and Egypt and Japan, water hyacinth from the Southeast, cactus from the Southwest and potsherds from the ancient homes of the Cliff-dwellers, all have contributed to his garden.

How Nature Makes a Pool.

He saw a creepy duel between snakes among South Missouri crags, and so one of his fountains is a leaden adder swallowing a writhing rattlesnake. Since he noted the serenity of pools beneath the rocks, he made an overhanging rock above quiet water as one of the masterpieces of his garden.

"In garden after garden you'll find the ground sloping down to the pool, always the same way, never a variation," he remarked. "Nature doesn't do it that way. On one side the precipice will jut up from the water. On the other will lie the level fields. Nature has everything."

Although Dr. Bronson is 75 years old and retired several years ago from his dental practice, he adds daily to his garden. He made the bridges last fall, and spends rainy days in his laboratory, using the apparatus once employed for dental casts to make metallic lizards and dragons and frogs and alligators.

Won Prize for Gardening.

Ten years ago he won first prize in a national contest conducted by a periodical for home gardeners. It is 21 years since, the garden was begun by the dentist and Dr. Shiro Miyake, who earned his way through Washington University School of Dentistry as Dr. Bronson's houseman and later died in Tokio.

"We used to spend our summers on Manitoulin Island, up in Georgian Bay," related Dr. Bronson. "It must have been the end of a moraine, for it was littered with curious rocks—rocks that must have been gathered from thousands of miles. I used to pick up the odd stones in my roaming over the island, and throw them in a pile when I came in. Pretty soon I had more rocks than I knew what to do with, and so we built a walk and a few other fancy pieces of stonework.

"The natives used to drive from miles around to see what the city men were doing. I told the Jap we were just a pair of fools to do that kind of work on a desolate island up in Canada. When we came home we busted right in on the beginnings of this garden, and people have been hanging over my fence to look at it ever since.

"It's remarkable how the people down here respect my garden," he chuckled. "My hose has been outside for 21 years, and no one has ever touched it. A patient of mine from the West End complained one day that someone had broken into a shed and taken her garden hose.

" 'The thieves down here are all friends of mine,' I told her. 'They go out to your part of town to transact their business.' "

Criticises America's Artistic Sense.

Dr. Bronson was born in Villa Ludlow, Vt. He came here from Nebraska and built the huge residence at Washington and Compton, he related, when "I used to go hunting west of Grand avenue." Prior to 1908 he had taken no particular interest in gardening, and he remarked with a kind of awe that "people used to call it beautiful, although it was just an ordinary American lawn."

"Americans, in general, lack the artistic sense to make beautiful and individual gardens" he said. "America started poor. We came over here because we couldn't make a go of it in Europe, or were not allowed to stay there. Our first task was to grow corn and drive the Indians away. We had no time for art. Our job was to get settled in a foreign land—and it was some job!

"Now, with money, we are making a start in that way, but it is well for the over-critical and over-enthusiastic alike to remember that it is only a start.

"The Italians have famous gardens, but they run excessively to white carved stone, which provides too great a contrast to green, and to straight lines and geometric patterns. The English have lots of flowers, but no rocks or water.

"I don't think you can have a garden without irregular curves, rocks and water and an elevation and a depression. You don't go out to the plains of Kansas for beauty. You go to the mountains, where there are heights and rocks and streams.

For Individuality in Gardens.

"And you can't have freshness if you depend on buying things that everyone else may get the same way. You buy a garden, a vase, and others just like it can be bought by the carload. Look at this stone vase. I made it myself. It was work. But it is an individual. There isn't another like it in the world.

"A beautiful stone, like no other in the world, is worth hundreds of dollars to the Japanese. They consider that no garden is complete without a lake, and the prettiest lake is one with islands. A thousand islands would be too many, and one would be too few. So they sit down in a cold-blooded way and figure out that any lake should have three or five or seven islands.

"In the same manner, the Jap and I figured that a dead level could not be beautiful, and so a 'mountain' of rocks and trees and cascades hides my ashpit. We sat down in a cold-blooded way and figured out that a straight line is hell—so we knocked out every straight line in the place."

Keeping the View Beautiful.

Dr. Bronson, sitting on a rock along the 'mountain' path and gazing at the green and silver reflections under a bridge below, was silent for a moment. Across the garden was the window of his room, with a specially designed pane for which he spent nearly $100 so that it would shut off the drab surroundings and give only a view through the heart of the garden.

"I have spent much time and money foolishly in my life," he said thoughfully. "But no expenditure of time or money ever gave me more satisfaction than that which I spent for the moments of beauty and peace I get from this garden. I have lived three-quarters of a century. I have learned what is worth time and money."

Will Cover 260-Miles Camping Each Night in the Woods.

A 260-mile horseback ride through the Ozarks, with camp made each night in the woods, is being taken by 40 St. Louis Boy Scouts and leaders, members of the local council's Ranger Camp at Irondale, Mo. The scouts left Irondale Thursday, and expect to return a week from today.

The ride this year will be longer than those that have been taken during the last three years by the Rangers. Previous rides have averaged about 200 miles. Swinging southeast of Irondale, the scouts are at present following the Black River, cutting across country, however, rather than following roads. The Current River country will next be visited, and a stop made at the Big Springs State Park before starting the homeward trek.

The Ranger Scouts are the pick of the Irondale camps. To qualify for admission they must be not only of first-class rank but must have had previous experience in camping and outdoor life. They specialize in outdoor subjects, particularly woodcraft, nature study and swimming, and when at Irondale stay in open-front shacks instead of cabins as do the main campers

Following the custom of previous years, the Ranger riders plan to stay in the woods, and away from civilization as much as possible. Camp will be made each night at designated sites along the river, to enable a truck which is carrying their blankets and tents to have the baggage ready for unloading as soon as the riders reach camp. Rations for the day are carried by each scout on his horse. "Red" Leavitt, field executive of the Suburban District, is in charge of the ride, assisted by Bob Miller, riding master of the Ranger Camp, and several scout junior officers.

Troop Notes

West District.

Troop 30, of the Y. M. H. A., has transferred its meeting place to Forest Park and for the remainder of the summer will hold outdoor meetings near Jefferson Memorial. A contest, with the office of Senior Patrol Leader as prize, is giving every patrol leader a chance to conduct one meeting, the leader conducting the best winning the award. The meeting this week will be conducted by Patrol Leader Louis Platt. Leaders Melvin Hartzman and Edward Hopper have had charge of meetings, while Leaders Stanley Lopata, Francis Klein and Elliott Gillerman are waiting their turns.

Eighteen scouts, three officers and Scoutmaster Goldsmith hiked to Creve Coeur last Sunday. A program of tests and contests was arranged by the scoutmaster, Senior Patrol Leader Frank Gollub and Patrol Leader Hertzman. The principal event was a nature contest between teams under Arnold Singer and Louis Platt. Each team endeavored to collect and identify the largest number of leaves. Platt's team won.

A campaign for books for the troop library is being undertaken by Troop 49, of First Presbyterian Church. Each scout has been asked to donate one or more volumes and others are being obtained from parents and friends.

A hike to Schoenberg's farm near St. Charles to collect and mount leaves for the troop museum was taken by Troop 87 of the United Hebrew Temple last Sunday. The last meeting also was devoted to tree study. The museum is growing rapidly, particularly in natural history specimens Several of the scouts of this troop are attending Camp Irondale

Ten scouts and three officers of Troop 113 of the Church of the Messiah are on a three-day camping trip at Troop Committeeman Neuhoff's farm in the Ozarks. The boys, Scouts Hamper, Casey, O'Neall, Richter, Hardwig, Finley, Soloman, Harris, Barinstein and Yawitz, all members of Tiger patrol, received the trip for winning an interpatrol contest. The officers accompanying the troop are Scoutmaster Rebore, Committeeman Neuhoff and Senior Patrol Leader Bob Miller.

The troop is making plans for an entertainment in November. The Beavers are to give a demonstration in pioneering, the Silver Foxes one in knots and the Tigers one in signaling.

Troop 246 of B'Nai Amoona Temple is specializing in nature study this summer. Nature hikes are being taken each week under the leadership of the troop nature experts, Senior Patrol Leader Gallant, Patrol Leader Rudolph, Assistant Patrol Leader Weisman and Junior Assistant Drazen. The troop is planning an election of officers in September.

North District.

The Flying Eagle Patrol is leading in an inter-patrol contest being conducted by Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church. Scout Fred Ramery successfully passed his 14-mile hike test last week, and is now nearly eligible for the rank of first-class scout. Instructions in swimming, including talks by experts and demonstrations by the best swimmers of the troop, were given at the meeting last week. Scout Phillip Bergsieker is to have charge of the program at the meeting this week.

Troop 69 of St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church is scheduled to return today from a week's camping trip in the Ozarks. The camp is being held under the leadership of Scoutmaster Sampson and Assistant Scoutmaster Dixon.

South District.

A new troop has been organized in the South District at St. Louis Methodist Church, Oleatha and Hereford avenues, under the leadership of Scoutmaster A. Kalinowsky. Meetings will be held at the church at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evenings. The troop was organized through the efforts of the Rev. Benjamin Redpath of the church, who was a charter member of Webster Groves Troop 3 when it was formed 15 years ago.

Three new scouts, Bernard Weber, Paul Weber and Joseph McMichael, have joined Troop 20, of Holy Family school. Instruction in lifts and carries was given at the meeting of the troop last week and a compass game, in which every member participated, was played. Scoutmaster Bokel spoke on archery.

Suburban District.

An Indian pageant will be given by the scouts of Troop Creve Coeur at the Creve Coeur School tomorrow and Tuesday evenings. The troop has invited all St. Louis scouts and their friends to witness the pageant. John Boern is scoutmaster.

ENDURANCE FLYERS HONORARY MEMBERS OF TROOP 198

Sworn in Following Civic Reception at City Hall; Banquet for Them Planned.

Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, world champion endurance flyers, were sworn in as honorary members of Troop 198 of St. John's Episcopal Church, after the city's welcoming ceremonies were concluded at the City Hall Thursday. Invitation to join the troop was extended in a telegram sent by Scoutmaster John Lewis while the aviators were still in the air.

The invitation was accepted immediately.

Jackson and O'Brine received specially-made gold scout badges, as well as their membership cards, in an investiture ceremony conducted by Scouts Louis Y. Horton, F. Delos Reynolds and Albert Shorkey. Scout Horton administered the scout oath. Several city officials witnessed the presentation of the badges.

The troop is planning a banquet for the flyers, but the date has not been set.

DOCTOR ROBBED OF AUTO AND $10 IN FOREST PARK

Instruments Also Taken; Three Attempted Burglaries Reported.

Dr. Bertram Bersche, 4038 Humphrey street, was sitting with a woman companion in his automobile on Wells drive in Forest Park at 1:30 a. m. yesterday when a man approached and robbed him of the car, $10 cash and his surgical instruments valued at $100.

Espying a burglar crawling through a window at 2 a. m., Thomas Lumpkin, 4406 Garfield avenue, fired six shots at the intruder.

Martin Jenkins, 1827 North Newstead avenue, was awakened by a burglar who sought to enter the Jenkins home at 2:20 a. m. The man fled at his approach. A short time later Patrolman Crabtree fired two shots at a Negro, who ran when the officer tried to question him near the Jenkins home.

Mrs. Hilda Lubbock, 5436 Vernon avenue, was awakened at 4:15 a. m. by a noise in her bedroom. She investigated and found a Negro crawling across the floor. She called to her husband in an adjoining room and the intruder ran out and escaped.

COMMITTEE SEEKS LARGE DELEGATION TO STATE FAIR

Greater St. Louis Day, Aug. 20, to Be Made Means of Improving Agricultural Relations.

Plans for a large delegation to attend the State Fair at Sedalia, Mo., on "Greater St. Louis day," Aug. 20, were discussed at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce State Fair Committee on Friday. Former Mayor Henry W. Kiel is chairman of the committee, which is seeking to have a large representation at the fair from civic, commercial and other organizations of the city and county.

The committee will meet again Tuesday. It is likely that the delegation will go to Sedalia in a special train, as in the past. The chamber's object is to build up friendly relationships with out-State agricultural interests, and to promote the National Dairy Show in St. Louis.

Formerly the occasion at the fair was "St. Louis day," in token of the aroused interest in the metropolitan district it has been changed to "Greater St. Louis day."

$27,933,364 FOR ROADS FROM TAX ON GASOLINE

Oil Inspector Reports on Missouri Revenue in Four Years and a Half.

The 2-cents-a-gallon Missouri gasoline tax has yielded a revenue of $27,933,364 for maintenance and construction of the State highway system in the four and a half years it has been in effect, it is reported by State Oil Inspector McAtee. This tax money is devoted only to the roads.

The revenue from this tax, which has been a comparatively popular one, since motorists have derived direct benefits from it, has increased steadily month by month. This reflects the increased number of motor cars in Missouri and the growing highway traffic.

By years, the revenue has been: 1925, $5,037,510; 1926, $5,798,824; 1927, $6,472,959; 1928, $7,140,062; first six months of 1929, $3,484,606. In comparison, the revenue in the first six months last year was $3,303,397, or $180,609 less, while in the first six months of 1925 it was $2,237,303, or $1,246,703 less than in the corresponding period this year.

Collections last June, $675,607, were by far the largest for that month in any year. However, McAtee pointed out, May collections are regularly larger, while the best months are July, August and September, because of a greater number of automobile tourists. The revenue of the second six months of the year is greater than in the first six months.

By FRANCES B. DAWSON.

MILE after mile we travel over a bumpy road in a chromatic wilderness known as the Painted Desert of Northern Arizona. The steering wheel jerks and joggles. From time to time the rear wheels slither ineffectually in hillside sand. My arms begin to ache with the effort necessary to keep the car on the half-obliterated "highway."

After three trans-desert hours in which the car shakes like a reducing machine, we top a slight rise and suddenly catch sight of the new Lee's Ferry bridge—the second highest structure of its kind in the world—which leaps from one jagged canyon wall to another at a height of 672 feet above that vicious destroyer, the Colorado River.

In a region of wind sculptures and craggy hills the steel bridge seems indeed a frail web to be giving safe conduct to vehicles and motorists more than an eighth of a mile above the canyon river. But the seeming frailty of the bridge is an illusion. The steel, one sees on closer approach, is massive. The canyon walls have been hollowed out so that ponderous girders might be set in tenacious concrete.

Slowly we drive onto the bridge. We halt midway between the approaches and peer gingerly over the side. A look makes one momentarily dizzy. We are higher than any St. Louis skyscraper. In the center of the bridge we are 300 feet from each side of the canyon. The torrent, however, seems 10 times more distant than either gorgeously pigmented abrupt wall. One member of the party has brought a handful of pebbles. One by one the stones are dropped.

It takes them forever to reach the river.

Strata after strata of red, brown and lavender have been laid bare through countless ages by the voracious Colorado. From where we are standing we can see geologic layers infinitely older than mankind. A unanimous vote decides that, despite the rigors of travel, the journey to the bridge was worth while. The heralded thrill is authentic.

But everyone remembers the difficulties we had getting to the bridge and there are comments on the troubles we may encounter getting back. Travel through the Navajo and Hopi Indian country, to the north of Flagstaff, is not a luxurious affair. Water is, at times, a priceless commodity and the woman motorist finds it necessary to obey the time-honored command of the beauty specialist and to use only cold cream on a dust-gathering countenance. For the Painted Desert is dusty in summer. Arizona sunlight supplies an almost overgenerous amount of sun-tan, but sleeping in mountain air, under the stars, repairs most of the damage. In our party was a 3-year-old child, one of whose requirements was a quart of "fresh" milk daily. In a country where cows are known only as cattle and run to beef, this was out of the question. We experimented with a powdered milk, prepared with water and a dash of syrup, the child found palatable. At first opportunity, however, she more than willingly abandoned the synthetic product for the real.

Summer travel across the Painted Desert is hot. Sometimes one runs into choking dust clouds. But there are scenic extravaganzas that compensate. The nights are gloriously cool, with star-dotted skies, and there are no mosquitoes. I have heard persons from St. Joseph, from Kansas City, from Cape Girardeau and from St. Louis wax eloquent on the subject of Arizona grandeur. I sometimes feel that for Missourians the chief glory of Arizona lies in the absence of that singing poet which renders splendid Ozark moonlight nights hideous—the mosquito.

Leaving Flagstaff at dawn, we had pushed northward a matter of 90 miles to the Grand Canyon. The road to the Grand Canyon is unspeakably bad. Rocky and full of washed out ruts. The Government is taking a hand, however, and by next year hopes to have roads which will not break motorists' hearts or so heavily tax their tempers.

We had scenic excitement aplenty at the Grand Canyon. Vast promontories and terraces, splashed with color. More than 80 square miles of this architectural and chromatic extravaganza. And you take it all in at a glance. We viewed the gigantic stage set—showing how ruthless a river can be and what mad color effects nature may accidentally produce—from three distinct points. We were overwhelmed but we had had enough. We lacked the desire to explore the canyon on the backs of mules. We turned northeast now, on the Navahopi road, and set out for the Lee's Ferry Bridge, by way of Cameron.

The Navahopi road leads through stunted cedar and sage brush country. Momentarily one suspects a Bohemian kitchen in the vicinity, and then one realizes it is merely the sage-brush. Acres and acres of it. Miles and miles of it. We pass through a prairie dog town. The little animals, their holes ringed by a rounded wall of dirt, sit up and sniff the air, bark high thin code messages to friends and relatives farther along. There is no danger of congestion on the Navahopi road. In three hours' travel one may not meet a single car. One encounters a few Indians. They look at one with an unchanging expression. They ignore salutations from tourists.

It is about 60 miles from the Grand Canyon to Cameron and the last 30 are hazardous going. The road is narrow and follows the snaky canyon course of the Little Colorado River.

One's machine is perched momentarily on a mountain top, and then it seems to be catapuling down a mountain side, on a rock-strewn road that tilts at an angle of 45 degrees. There is a sheer drop of 200 to 300 feet at the side. The road climbs, drops, suddenly twists in a horseshoe curve. Many a car has come to grief on this picturesque pathway. All the way, one sees huge canyon walls, decorated in weird friezes by the rain and the wind. And then nearby one sees the hulk of an automobile whose driver failed quite to cope with little hazards such as boulders in the middle of the road, turns that make an acute angle of perhaps 23 degrees, sudden descents.

At last we reach Cameron, which has a bridge over the Little Colorado, a trading post, a gas station, and a desert hotel. Two or three Navajos in blue jeans and cerise headbands lounge on the bench outside the trading post. Half a dozen dogs forage in the sand.

The brick inn boasts a garden of small-sized barrel cactus, some wiry cholla cactus, and a sign pointing the way to a coffee shop. The Navajo gas boy, who fills our tank, is very proud of his false teeth. On request he gravely measures out water for the radiator.

We decide to search the trading post for an elusive silver squash blossom necklace, one that goes back to the days of Spain in Arizona. There are Indian ornaments galore, but not the particular necklace we want. We are tempted by some bright Navajo rugs, with ceremonial figures. Cases of turquoise, ornate saddles dear to the Navajo horseman, "chaps" for dude cowboys, gay calicoes, and canned goods. The Indian sells his rugs by the pound and has learned that the judicious use of water will make his weaving a bit heavier. Few soaked rugs, however, get by the eagle-eyed trader. Two Navajo women, wearing velvet dresses, woolen sashes and shawls (it is late June and the sun is ferociously hot) come in and buy groceries on "tick." Later they will bring in rugs they have woven to pay their grocery bills.

We decided to chance the difficult road to Lee's Ferry on the assurance of the trader that we could "get through." So we pushed off. Eighty miles of unimproved roadway, of mere wheel tracks across a seemingly endless desert. But weird, fascinating country. Huge black sand hills, followed by huge gray sand hills. One minute a rock formation on the horizon is striped like a zebra. Another, and one faces a sun-splashed mesa, like some castle out of Arabian Nights. We pass through Krazy Kat's country of graven pillars and wind-carved figures of clay and stone; flat topped hills and buttes. One member of the party notices some strange stone chips. We stop and get out. It is the petrified forest about 20 miles north of Cameron, one of the four or five such formations in the State. We pick up pieces of stone, colored like gems. At one time they were heavy timbers, waving in a prehistoric forest.

We move on and at last reach the bridge. Lee's Ferry got its name from John D. Lee who went into Northern Arizona in 1872. He acquired the right to operate a ferry from the Mormon church at a point known as Lonely Dell. The Mountain Meadows Massacre in which 123 persons were slaugh-

Tariff Still Big Issue in Washington Legislation

Motorists Interested in Effect on Materials Used in Manufacture of Automobiles — Ford Comes Out for Free Trade in Cars—Expect Competition From Foreign Makers Within Five Years.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—During the lull in the special session of Congress, the tariff remains the big legislative subject in Washington, one in which the motorists of the country are deeply interested. The Finance Committee of the Senate is hard at work on the drafting of its version of the Smoot-Hawley bill and present indications are that this will not be completed until September, several weeks after Congress again convenes.

There are a multitude of materials that go into the production of motor cars and parts that are affected by the tariff. The trend in the House bill is upward. What the Senate will do remains to be seen, but it would evoke no great surprise if it stood for several reductions in the House measure.

The Senate committee has before it expressions from a group of motor car factory executives, leaders in the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, that they would be willing to try out a 10 per cent ad valorem duty on automobiles if coupled with the same countervailing duty now provided. There is some expectation that this rate will be recommended to the Senate.

A recommendation that the automobile be placed on a free trade basis was presented at the recent hearings by the representative of the Ford Motor Car Co. This representative, the export manager of the company, stated that he spoke the views of Edsel Ford. Senator Reed asked him to transmit the opinion of Henry Ford on this matter and since that time the committee has been informed that the elder Ford also favors free trade with no countervailing duty.

It was pointed out by the other manufacturers, however, that it was entirely possible that foreign competition might be felt in this country within the next five years. One of the best known executives in the industry frankly admitted that he was not prepared to say what this competition would be. It was, in his opinion, an unknown quantity, but one which the industry must be prepared to face.

Some idea of what the tariff means to the automobile industry may be gained from a comparative evaluation of the House bill insofar as it affects nearly a dozen important articles that go into motor cars, or which affect

Studebaker Adds Sports Phaeton to President Line

Announcement that Studebaker's President eight is now available in a swanky new tourer is made by Sam Lurie of the Lurie Motor Car Co., Studebaker-Erskine distributer. The introduction fo the President eight tourer marks the return of the sport phaeton as the preferred car of motorists who enjoy the freedom of open-car driving.

"The sport touring car of high performance and smart lines, such as the new President tourer, enjoys a unique place in the motor world today," Lurie said. "A decade ago the phaeton was the workaday car of the industry, and represented 90 per cent of the industry's production. The rise of closed-car production, however, has just reversed that situation, as more than 85 per cent of production is now closed models. The touring car has thus become an exclusive model favored by motorists who take pride in driving the latest and smartest expression of the motoring mode.

"Every line of the new President's long, low-hung body reflects the speed and power of the great 115-horsepower motor under the hood. The President has won the title of world-champion car as a result of the unparalleled performance of this motor—the most notable achievement being its run of 30,000 miles in 26,326 minutes, in which it established 115 American stock-car records and set 11 world records and 23 international records as well."

August Output Of Automobiles Is Increased

Cadillac Schedule Is for 5000 Cars, Buick-Marquette for 29,000.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 3.—July production of automobiles has been on a high level, despite the fact that many of the plants were closed the first or second week in the month, in order to give employes a vacation and to take inventory, where necessary.

On a two weeks' basis, Cadillac is reported to have produced approximately 500 automobiles. The schedule for August is heavy, however, and is about 5000 cars.

Buick and Marquette production was about 26,300. The schedule for August has been advanced to about 29,000. Oakland-Pontiac production was approximately 20,000, and Packard about 3500. Willys-Overland was about 18,500 and Chevrolet 128,884.

Although one or two of the manufacturers have announced new models and some of the others have been making preparations to bring out 1930 models, this has not had any effect on retail sales of automobiles, according to surveys just completed.

According to present indications, announcements of new models will probably come later in the year hereafter. This has been brought about for two reasons—first, to get away from announcements during the summer vacation period, and the second, to bring these announcements closer to the time the national automobile shows are held.

Factory officials said today that exports are holding up exceedingly well for this time of the year. Factories in Canada are busy making cars for export and many are going overseas from the United States. This, of course, has been a great aid in maintaining large production schedules.

Australia has been taking an increasing volume of motor cars and gains are being made in such countries as New Zealand and the Far Eastern sections.

Manufacturers are watching highway building procedure very closely, especially in the South American countries. As more roads are constructed, the market for automobiles will expand. Therefore, the United States stands ready to do all it can to help these South American countries develop roads and thus open up natural resources.

Exports of trucks also will show a heavy increase. In fact, the truck field has been a star performer this year. Busses are in considerable demand in a number of foreign countries.

The time is drawing near when some more companies are expected to announce new models. These are expected to be the last word in motor transportation, as better values are being given this year in automobiles than ever before.

Nothing radical is expected, as most of the companies will continue along conservative lines, refining body styles and attempting to provide for better performance.

The only radical changes in automobile types are two front wheel drive cars—the Ruxton, which was announced some time ago, and the Cord, the latter having been developed by the Auburn Automobile Co. of Auburn, Ind. These front drive cars are not new in the racing field, but they have never before been offered for public use. One of the big things about the front wheel drive cars that had to be developed were universal joints. The front drive racing cars had a wide turning radius, and it was necessary to develop universal joints that would allow a car to make a full turn in the average street, as drivers are averse to cars which cannot be turned easily. This problem has been overcome, it is reported, and further developments may be expected in these front drive automobiles.

There also seems to be a trend towards the four-speed transmission, and it is said that several companies are studying this question. Both the Graham-Paige and the Durant have transmissions of this type which have been very successful. Years ago the four-speed transmission was popular, but it was gradually forced out by the three-speed type because owners objected to noisy gears. This has been overocme, and further developments are expected. It is rumored that at least one large company will equip a line of its cars with four speeds.

Promoters of the four-speed transmission claim that it permits high speeds on the open highways at low engine speeds, thus reducing wear, and yet gives flexible performance in heavy traffic on city streets.

These developments are being watched with great interest by students of the automotive industry.

Our "WORK-TEST" offer on GENERAL MOTORS TRUCKS

We offer to provide you with any General Motors Truck in the complete line of 42 different types (whatever available model, chassis, or body most closely meets your needs).

You put it to your regular work for an adequate and thorough test—without cost, obligation, or liability. See what it does; how it compares with equipment you now operate or may be considering.

Find out whether or not it gives you more work-capacity per unit, per day. Learn what it costs to run. Measure how much it will increase your operating radius, or how much it will safely reduce time-per-run.

It is a new basis for wise investment in any haulage or delivery equipment. The very fact that we can and do make such an offer tells much to any thinking man. It certainly puts a measuring-stick on the important, but much abused words: "Dependability", "Performance", "Economy", and "Suitability". It certainly puts value on a clean-cut basis; built-in merit and price against "hoss-trading" and words.

By the very name these trucks bear, you can know that the offer is sincerely made—without tricks or hedging. Granted it is an unusual offer; so are the results, and the value to any truck-owner. Accept on this basis. Come in, drop a card, or telephone. Do it today.

This problem has been overcome, it is reported, and further developments may be expected in these front drive automobiles.

There also seems to be a trend towards the four-speed transmission, and it is said that several companies are studying this question. Both the Graham-Paige and the Durant have transmissions of this type which have been very successful. Years ago the four-speed transmission was popular, but it was gradually forced out by the three-speed type because owners objected to noisy gears. This has been overocme, and further developments are expected. It is rumored that at least one large company will equip a line of its cars with four speeds.

Promoters of the four-speed transmission claim that it permits high speeds on the open highways at low engine speeds, thus reducing wear, and yet gives flexible performance in heavy traffic on city streets.

1500 Town Car Taxi Cabs Sold To Chicago Firm

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—A parade of new taxicabs, almost a half-mile long, will move from Pontiac, Mich., to Chicago, some time in August, as a result of one of the largest single sales in taxicab history. The General Taxicab Sales today contracted for the purchase of 1500 "town-car" models of the new 1930 "General Cabs," products of the Taxicab Division of the General Motors Truck Co., to fill orders of driver-operators of Chicago and vicinity.

Drivers of the first sixty cabs to come off the production line will go to Pontiac in a body and will receive their new cabs back to Chicago in a huge procession.

Automobile Show Managers Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the National Association of Automobile Show and Association Managers, of which Maj. Robert E. Lee of St. Louis is the national president, was held in Chicago July 25 and 26 and attended by 36 managers of automobile dealers' associations and managers of automobile shows.

The principal topic of discussion was the falling off of attendance at all automobile shows in the United States in the spring of 1929, compared with the shows of 1928. Careful analysis of the financial affairs of the 36 shows revealed that there was no falling off, but rather an increase in attendance at the 1929 shows as compared with the 1927 and 1926 shows. In other words the peak attendance at the shows was in the spring of 1928, when Ford, Chevrolet, Pontiac and several other manufacturers were showing their new models.

"The Bootlegging Situation" was discussed by James Dalton of "Motor;" "Service Sales Trends" by George Brosch of the Motor and Equipment Association, and "Getting Legislative Results" by W. D. Edenburn of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association, Claude Klugh of the Pennsylvania Automotive Trades Association and Louis Stapley of the New York Automobile Trades Association. A number of other papers bearing on the automobile industry were presented by different members.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Chicago Jan. 25 and 26.

Bridge Over Grand Canyon Opens Up Delightful Tour

tered and their flocks and wagons driven away, a crime supposedly committed by Mormons disguised as Indians, was charged to his account. He was hunted out of his hiding place in Lonely Dell and executed in 1877. The ferry continued to operate under his name at the only passable point in the river. Later it was taken over by Coconino County and operated as a toll ferry. Ferrying the Colorado was considered so perilous that mail was sent by the circuitous route. Consequently a letter from Cameron to some point in Utah might be two weeks reaching its destination. In 1927 work was begun on the present steel structure. It was finished in 1929 and the bridge was formally dedicated last June 14.

The choice of a name aroused a storm of protest in Mormon circles. Mormon leaders went to the Governors of Utah and Arizona and asked that some other name than Lee's Ferry be given the bridge. They repudiated Lee and any Mormon responsibility for the massacre. They considered it unjust that so great an engineering feat should carry down to posterity a taint on the Mormon name. The bridge, however, was dedicated as Lee's Ferry Bridge and according to every indication the name will remain as long as the structure spans the Colorado.

In conclusion: Lee's Ferry Bridge is an extremely difficult place to reach, but one feels amply compensated for any hardship undergone. Government rangers say there will be a good road to the bridge within the next 18 months. Let us hope.

Ford Motor Co. Builds 2,000,000 Model A Cars

Completion by the Ford Motor Co. of the two-millionth model A automobile has re-emphasized not only the fact that the Ford plants are now the busiest in their history, but has served also to disclose the speed with which the model A car won world-wide acceptance.

The first million model A Fords were built between Oct. 20, 1927, and Feb. 4, 1929, during which the company gradually forged ahead with its production rate and studied and adopted new methods by which greater efficiency and precision could be given to automobile manufacturing.

The second million model As were produced in less than six months. The rate at which the Ford Motor Co. is now building automobiles is indicated by the completion of 1,065,630 units in the first six months of the present calendar year, of which 919,549 were manufactured in the United States.

Travel 18,244 Miles In 29 Days With Expense of 8 Cents

A motor trip of more than 18,000 miles without thought of engine adjustment and at no cost whatever except for gasoline and oil is well within the realm of motorist with a modern automobile at his command and endless miles of good roads before him.

Such was indicated, at least, by the recent tour of Leslie Morrison and Norman Meal of Lawrence, Mass., who visited every state capital in the country in less than 30 days in their Marmon-built Roosevelt straight-eight sedan.

Aside from traveling 18,244 miles in 29 days, the remarkable part of this capital-to-capital journey was the expense log of the two men, which revealed a total expenditure of only 8 cents on the eight-cylinder engine of the Roosevelt car. This sum was spent for a nut and bolt used to secure the exhaust pipe to the exhaust manifold.

Not once during their trip did Morrison or Neal lift the hood of the Roosevelt to inspect or replace a spark plug, to examine the distributer or to adjust the carburetor. Not a tool of any kind was taken in hand for use on the engine, nor was a moment lost in repairing or adjusting any one of the many minor ailments which ofttimes arise in cross-country trips, as well as in ordinary day in and day out driving.

The 29 days of the capital-to-capital tour were filled with many unusual as well as practical features, and a log of the journey would gladden the heart of the lover of scenic beauty as well as the exponent of "See America first."

motoring, such as is the case with cement.

Cement is taken off the free list and a duty of eight cents a hundred pounds is imposed.

Wood alcohol, on which there was a duty of 12 cents a gallon, is increased to 18 cents. Ethyl alcohol remains at 15 cents a gallon. Butyl acetate is increased from six to seven cents a pound. Chromic acid, formerly on the free list, is made dutiable at the rate of 25 per cent ad valorem.

The duty on pyroxylin sheets is raised from 40 to 45 cents a pound.

Plate glass in sheets not exceeding 384 square inches carried a duty of 12½ cents a square foot. This is increased to 16 cents. In sheets not exceeding 720 square inches, the 15-cent rate is raised to 19 cents. The rate of 17½ cents a square foot on large sheets is increased to 22 cents. There is the additional provision that none of this material, measuring one-half an inch or more in thickness, shall be subject to less than 50 per cent ad valorem. Laminated glass, composed of layers of glass, and other material or materials and manufactured wholly or in chief value of such glass, is subjected to a duty of 60 per cent ad valorem.

Pig iron and iron kentledge, formerly 75 cents a ton, is advanced to $1.12½ a ton.

Wool in grease, formerly 12 cents a pound, and washed, formerly 18 cents, is raised to 24 cents a pound. Wool, scoured, 24 cents a pound, and on the skin, 11 cents, is advanced to 23 cents a pound.

Molasses, from which alcohol is distilled principally for use in automobile radiators as an anti-freeze, was put back at the old rate of one-sixth of a cent a gallon.

These are the rates some of which that await the shears of the Senate finance committee.

The members of the United State's delegation to the Pan-American Highway Congress which opens at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Aug. 16 and continues until Aug. 31, are on their way to South America. In Washington the congress is viewed as being of outstanding importance, since it affords further opportunity for the cementing of friendly relations between the North and South American continents.

College on Wheels.

Starting from Worcester, Mass., a motor college plans to cross the continent to California and back. Places of history will be studied on the spot. Geography will be learned from rolling hill and flowing river. The Grand Canyon, Yosemite and the Yellowstone will be visited en route and the ribs of old Mother Earth will be studied where they stick out into the open. Soil, mines, forests, fauna and flora, deserts, will all be part of the curriculum gradually unfolded to the rolling university. Learning is swiftly forsaking books and going back to life.

Motor Busses Taxed Heavily, Net Income Only 1.67 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Although motor bus lines now occupy an important place in the transportation life of the nation, they are the heaviest taxed common carriers and show an average net income of only 1.67 per cent after deducting taxes, according to a survey of motor bus operating costs just completed by the National Motor Bus Division of the American Automobile Association.

The A. A. A. Bus Division pointed out that the operating cost study revealed that bus operators throughout the country are trying, even at the sacrifice of revenue, to place this gigantic highway transportation system in its rightful place as a medium of travel.

"One of the outstanding needs at the present time," says the statement, "is adequate legislation governing interstate operations. This is now before Congress and bus agencies throughout the country are hopeful of favorable action at the approaching session of Congress."

ANNOUNCING

2309 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

Distributor for St. Louis and Vicinity

AUBURN

This is in the nature of a double introduction.

First, the Auburn-Graves Motor Company, an organization of experienced automobile men, in business to render a high type of service to the people of St. Louis and vicinity.

Second, the car we decided to represent here (after investigating carefully all the finer cars) as the one we could enthusiastically endorse to you—AUBURN.

We had felt strongly attracted to AUBURN for some time, because of our admiration for the fine car they were building, and the fact that AUBURN was the fastest growing automobile company in the country. But especially since the first of this year have we become more and more favorably impressed with AUBURN as we heard of the tremendous wave of public buying enthusiasm that was turning in AUBURN'S direction; that month after month AUBURN has been the most oversold car; that in spite of a 200% increase in factory capacity, the demand for AUBURN cars was still far ahead of the supply; that in the first six months of 1929, AUBURN sold more cars than in all of 1928, a record year up to that time.

We realized that there must be a definite reason for such overwhelming public demand for a car; it was NOT due to a shortage of other makes; there was ANYTHNG BUT THAT; the only answer could be the QUALITY, the PERFORMANCE, the VALUE of the car itself.

We made a careful analysis of mechanical features on all the better cars, comparing them point for point, in a more thorough and complete way than you would ever attempt. In all those, important details that could be definitely measured by exact standards, and that make for Comfort, Easier Driving, Better Performance, Greater Car Endurance, we found that AUBURN offers MORE for the money.

Going further in our study of the different makes, we visited many of the leading automobile factories. At the AUBURN plant we saw cars better designed, better built, with greater precision, greater care in selecting and testing materials; a higher grade of workmanship. To satisfy ourselves still further, we took cars right off the assembly line, even before they were inspected, and put them to every driving test you may give a car in actual use. It was the superior performance of the car itself here (for after all that is what finally counts) that SOLD us on the AUBURN as the car that met the strict standards we had set.

Now the AUBURN cars are here on our floors, ready for your critical inspection; of course you will want to see the cars that have created such a phenomenal sensation; you will want to decide for yourself that these cars are what everybody is describing as The World's Greatest Automobile Value.

You are cordially invited to come in this week so we can become acquainted; we want you to know the high type of service we are prepared to render; and most of all, we want you to drive one of those AUBURN cars that everybody is talking about.

Rubber Is Used In 450 Parts of Plymouth Cars

Executive Engineer Discusses Chrysler's Pioneer Work in Research.

A big motor car lifted clear of the ground by its front engine mounting—a piece of live rubber, two inches in diameter, bonded by a special process to steel plates—the rubber itself, in tension, carrying the whole load!

Rubber being aged the equivalent of 10 years in 10 days, by a series of unique testing processes!

These are two of the interesting highlights developed in an interview with Carl Breer, Chrysler Motors' executive engineer, on the pioneer work that Chrysler has been doing in improving automobile performance through a wider use of new rubber devices.

Mention rubber to the average person and he is apt to think of the semi-savage jungle natives of Sumatra and Brazil, clad only in their loin cloths, going from tree to tree, tapping them for their "latex," the rubber-bearing sap of the trees is called. The business of gathering and curing rubber has been described and pictured thousands of times in print and on the screen.

One also calls to mind such familiar rubber articles as elastic bands, hot-water bottles, erasers, heels, garters, boots, suspenders and so forth. Most of all, one thinks of tires, since nowadays practically everybody rides on rubber.

"But the average motorist," says Breer, "has little conception of the wide variety of uses to which rubber is put in the construction of the motor car, unless he owns a car in which these new devices are employed to secure improved performance and more comfortable riding.

"We at Chrysler take considerable pride in our pioneer work of developing new automotive applications of rubber. Under the close supervision of R. K. Lee, one of our experimental engineers who has specialized in rubber research work for many years, our technicians have worked out the first rigid code of specifications covering all types of rubber adaptable to automotive uses to be established in the industry.

"Perhaps you will better realize the scope of this work when I say that over 450 different parts made of rubber are used in Chrysler Motors' products. So you see that mention of such features as rubber engine mountings, rubber spring mountings, fabricated rubber body shims, the special lead-impregnated rubber centrifugal rings on our impulse neutralizers, and wire insulation, only begins a long story of rubber's usefulness in the modern automobile.

"About two and a half years ago, when we began our most intensive campaign for standardization of rubber parts, we found that there were 120 different types of rubber in commercial use. Our first effort was to determine the exact type of rubber best suited for every automotive need, then, through close co-operation with souces of supply and rigid inspection, involving chemical analysis and many physical tests to establish proper standards of tensile strength, elongation, permanent set, hardness, flow and compression, we made practicable the use of a uniform high-quality rubber perfectly adapted for each particular purpose.

"One of the most interesting of all automotive applications of rubber is found in the engine mountings of the Plymouth. Through ingenious design, metal-to-metal contact between the engine and the frames is entirely eliminated.

"The Plymouth power plant is literally cushioned in rubber, and in such a manner that the rubber is not under compression. For the first time in rubber engine mounting construction we have eliminated the great compression of the rubber which, in mountings employed on much higher-priced cars, causes so marked a loss in flexibility, and consequent loss of capacity to absorb vibration.

"The Plymouth front engine mounting is amazingly unique in that there is no metal fastening whatever between engine and frame. The engine is cushioned upon a solid block of rubber which is bonded to brass-coated steel plates. The top plate is bolted to the engine, and the bottom plate to the front cross-member of the chassis frame.

"Adhesion of the rubber to the brass-coated steel plates (vulcanized by special process) is tested to a minimum of 300 pounds per square inch. Big full-size car that it is, the Plymouth car can be lifted off the ground by its front engine mounting without breaking the bond between the rubber block and the brass-coated steel to which it is vulcanized.

"The two rear engine mountings of the Plymouth (one on each side) employ a U-shaped plate which is encased between large rubber blocks vulcanized to brass-coated steel in such a manner as also to eliminate metal-to-metal contact entirely. Each rear engine mounting will hold up five tons. Thus an immense factor of safety is provided.

"The Plymouth is the only low-priced car that has rubber engine mounting of this perfected design to absorb objectionable vibration and sound. They contribute in a large measure to the quiet smooth performance which is winning by the thousand for Chrysler Motors' lowest priced product.

"Among the many tests which we make of the various types of rubber are those by which we age rubber to the equivalent of 10 years in the same number of days.

Viking Must Have a "Pull" to Do This

CHLNG TEST KEEP RIGHT AHEAD

A towing dynameter increases the load of this Viking eight at the General Motors proving grounds.

Pulling Power of Viking Measured By Dynamometer

By This Device, Engineers Can Approximate the Various Grades.

If it were possible to build a road from the lowest depth in the oceans to the peak of the highest mountain in the world, would it be possible for an automobile to drive up this grade, an elevation of nearly 12 miles, without overheating?

While such a road is an impossibility, yet the engineers who designed and perfected the Viking, the new V-type, eight-cylinder companion car to the Oldsmobile six, are able to give an authoritative answer to the question. They know the performance qualities of a car under such circumstances without having this impossible road at their command.

The engineers were enabled to obtain this accurate knowledge through the use of the new towing-dynamometer at the General Motors proving ground, one of the many testing devices utilized in perfecting the Viking.

By means of the towing-dynamometer, engineers can approximate on a level road the pulling effort and effect of an automobile climbing varying grades or running through heavy sand. And they can keep up this test hour after hour without cessation until the ultimate of car performance in this respect has been definitely established.

The towing-dynamometer is a truck equipped with specially devised electrical apparatus whereby a load may be held constant or varied, at the wishes of the operator.

The truck is coupled to the car being tested through a drawbar, which is connected to a registering apparatus that records the pull required by the automobile to draw the truck.

The dynamometer has a large dynamo located under the driver's seat which is connected with the running gear. The dynamo, in turn, is connected through a rheostat with a set of four banks of resistance coils located on the body of the truck. This rheostat is controlled by the operator of the towing-dynamometer or by remote control from the driving compartment of the car being tested.

When the towing dynamometer is operating the dynamo excites its own field, creating a resistance which is transmitted to the running gear, thus increasing the pull. By manipulation of the rheostat this resistance can be maintained at any desired point and for any length of time. The total pull of the towing dynamometer, including the resistance created, is registered on a large dial located in the truck driving compartment.

As an added measure of efficiency and for checking purposes, the operator of the towing dynamometer and the driver of the car being tested maintain telephonic connection with each other by means of special telephones placed in the two vehicles.

This strenuous test of pulling the towing dynamometer hour after hour is chiefly used to try out the efficiency of the cooling system of an automobile. This, and the many other specially devised machines at the proving ground, were used to thoroughly test every performance feature of the new Viking before it was introduced to the motoring public this spring.

More Than Half Of Cars Bought Out of Income

AUBURN, Ind., Aug. 3.—Of the 4,158,748 automobiles produced in the United States in 1928, 2,500,000 were bought out of income. Of this number, 46 per cent were sold with a down payment of 25 per cent, or one-fourth of the purchase price, R. H. Faulkner, vice president of Auburn, points out.

While the percentage of new cars bought out of income in 1928 was less than in 1925, when it reached a total of 68.2 per cent, 1928 showed an increased percentage over the previous year, Faulkner stated.

"Making possible the purchase of an automobile out of income has enabled thousands of families to drive cars which otherwise would have been impossible," Faulkner said. "This has opened up a vast market for the manufacturer, increasing production and making greater values possible. It has brought about the two-car family and increased the demand for quality automobiles.

"Automobile financing has been placed on a substantial basis and the purchase of a car on a payment plan through a recognized company is looked on as good business. Not only individuals, but thousands of business concerns which might well pay cash are buying cars out of income and thus utilizing their capital elsewhere."

Tourists to Parks.

It is estimated that one-quarter of the touring motorists of the United States this year, or 2,500,000, will visit national parks.

Diamond T Truck Has Harmonious Color Combination

One of the outstanding developments in today's close alliance between modern merchandising and motor truck transportation is the growing recognition of the importance of appearance in truck design and finish, according to C. A. Tilt, president of the Diamond T Motor Car Co. In many respects the motor truck is a "good will ambassador" from producer to consumer, and as such becomes a real factor in building prestige.

An interesting example of the individuality with which it is possble to endow the modern truck which is designed with an eye to good looks as well as good performance is a new Diamond T six-cylinder one and one-half ton model delivered recently in Chicago.

Following the trend of modernistic art and decoration the Diamond T stock panel body is finished in bands of bright color which range from pale cream to lemon yellow, then grade into several shades of orange and finally into deep red. The lettering on the body is in pale cream against the deep red background.

The body has an exceptionally striking appearance, but the colors are well selected for harmony, and the effect is one of distinctive individuality ably reflecting the prestige of the long established company it represents.

Speed Limits Being Raised or Abolished

Five States Have Raised the Maximum, Five Others Eliminated It.

Speed limits are slowly, if not surely, catching up to automobiles.

As to actually overtaking them, the possibility seems rather remote, for engineering seems rather more speedy than legislation. But there are two things happening to speed laws that are making the lot of the motorist happy and a third that probably would make it happier than the other two.

The first satisfying thing is that speed limits are being liberalized in virtually all quarters of the country. The second is that, elsewhere, they are being removed altogether.

The third eventually, and it is no more than that at present, is that following the abolition of the arbitrary maximum there may come an arbitrary minimum speed. It is held to be a natural step and there are forward looking officials and motorists in both this country and England who are not so certain these days that the slow driver is not more of a menace than the fast one.

In recent weeks, five States have officially gone on record as favoring higher maximum speeds on their highways. Minnesota has gone from 30 to 35; Mississippi from 30 to 40; New Mexico, Ohio, and Oklahoma from 35 to 45. At the same time, Tennessee and Indiana have gone even further and abolished the maximum law altogether.

In this action, they have followed the course of Connecticut, Michigan, and Montana. Any way it is counted, that makes five states out of the 48 that have gone to higher speeds.

Just 43 states to go and then there will be no arbitrary maximum speed limit! Then, many insist, the next logical step is to establish a minimum limit below which the driver may be arrested as dangerous.

A minimum speed limit law is not a brand-new idea. Several years ago, John M. Mackall, then chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, sponsored a measure in the Legislature for the establishment of a low speed limit of 20 miles an hour on State highways. The bill failed to pass but it died a gallant, fighting death, and its friends have by no means abandoned hope.

At that time, Mackall was unqualifiedly certain that the slow driver was more of a hazard on the open road than the fast one.

At that time, Mackall was unqualifiedly certain that the slow driver was more of a hazard on the open road than the fast one.

Motorists, generally, and traffic officials, too, are rapidly leaning to the viewpoint expressed when the bill was beaten; namely, "they just are not ready for it yet. It will come. It is as inevitable as the necessity for liberalizing the maximum speed laws."

One of England's foremost traffic authorities, commenting in a similar vein, says:

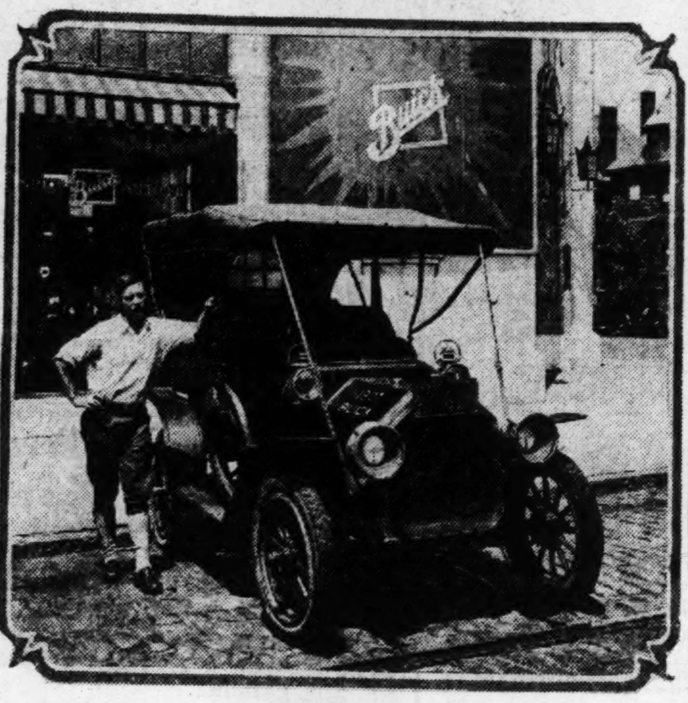
"In a country fettered by traditions and hampered by prejudices, new departures are slowly made. Paradoxical as it may seem, one great stride toward road safety could be made by enforcing a minimum instead of a maximum speed along straight open roads." Continuing, he cites one specific study alonga prominent highway, where, he says, "at numerous points along the way there were little danger eddies, each created by the presence of some slow vehicle which everybody wanted to pass and which there never was room to pass very safely."

On America's wider highways, exactly the same situation prevails. Never does a driver encounter it but that he begins to think it is something about which "there ought to be a law." When enough get to thinking it and the theory is proved sound, there will be a law unless many are guessing very badly.

An interesting application of the minimum speed limit idea is being tried with a success on the James River bridge in Virginia. And, on a bridge, too. That is something to think about and at first blush, it might seem the very worst place to enforce such a regulation.

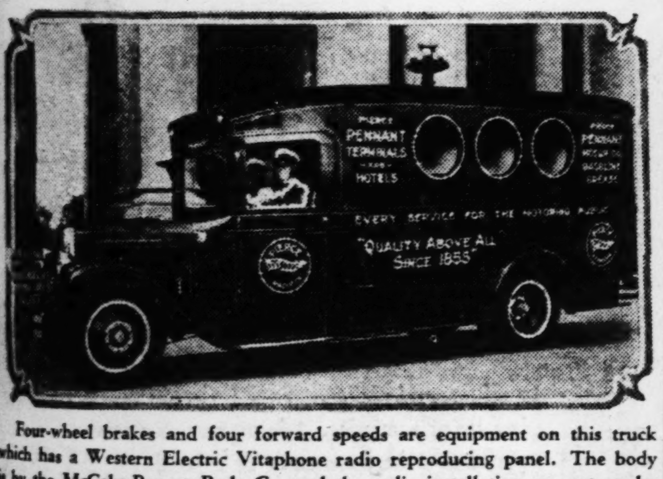
The James River bridge, one of the world's longest, is five and a half miles from end to end. Its sponsors have specified that no driver using it shall cross at a speed lower than 35 miles an hour although, for some older cars, this speed is fairly close to the maximum of which the vehicle is capable. The regulation is working with safety.

Ancient Two-cylinder Buick on Tour



William Osterhout is proud of his car—a Buick touring car of 1907 vintage. Passing through St. Louis last week, he remarked it was good for many a mile yet.

Pierce Radio Car on G. M. C. Chassis



Four-wheel brakes and four forward speeds are equipment on this truck which has a Western Electric Vitaphone radio reproducing panel. The body is by the McCabe-Powers Body Co. and the radio installation was set up by the Radio Installation Co., both of St. Louis.

New Type Piston Pin Standard on Oakland, Pontiac

Even so small a thing as a piston pin may play an eventful role in your summer tours because this little device carries a burden out of all proportion to its size, its particular function being to transmit the full force of an explosion from the piston head to the connecting rod.

A terrific strain centers upon it not only every time there is an explosion of gas in the cylinder, but also each time the piston reaches the top or bottom of its stroke. Wear inevitably results both in the pin and the piston boss in which it rests, resulting in looseness and rattle when a car is humming along at a constant speed. While not harmful to the engine, this pin rattle frequently has proved a source of annoyance to drivers.

To eliminate this noise has been an engineering problem since the beginning of the industry. In their effort constantly to improve the quality of the modern car, the automotive engineers gave this seemingly minor point a major share of attention and research.

Not until a new type of piston pin construction was discovered did the problem yield to intensive engineering study. A new principle of pin construction now has been evolved which practically eliminates pin rattles for the life time of a car. This involves the pressing of an aluminum plug into each end of the pin. Aluminum, highly sensitive to temperature changes, expands under the heat of a running motor and the "swelling" makes the piston pin fit tightly in the piston.

The new method of construction was worked out under the direction of B. H. Anibal, vice president in charge of engineering of the Oakland Motor Car Co., and pins so made are now standard equipment on all new Oakland all-American and Pontiac big sixes.

1907 Buick, in Tour of Country Visits St. Louis

Side-Winder Has Only Two Cylinders and Old Carbide Lights.

"It's a great old bus and it has served our family well," said William Osterhout as he proudly pointed out the merits of his 1907 model Buick five-passenger touring car, in which he is traveling from Gloversville, N. Y., to Los Angeles.

"You know," offered Osterhout, "my father bought this car in the fall of 1906—it was delivered Feb. 28, 1907, and she's been goin' ever since.

"This car would climb a brick wall if she could only get a hold on it; she'll percolate along at 45 miles an hour, too."

The car that Osterhout is driving is one of the famous "Model F" type produced by Buick back in the days when the automotive industry was in its adolescence.

A chain drive, carbide lamps, two-cylinder motor, dry cell batteries and the odd location of the gas tank—under the hood—are but some of the features of this relic of automobile antiquity.

The crowd gathered around the car, parked at the Vesper Buick Auto Co., gasped when Osterhout lifted a crank from the back seat of the vehicle, stuck it in its side and then spun it. The even sound of this veteran car's motor, it might be added, was surprising.

Approximately 242,000 miles have been traversed by this proud old monarch of the road and, if Osterhout can possibly squeeze another 200,000 miles out of it, he's going to do it, he remarked.

No-back Device On Peerless Holds Two Other Cars

The added safety provided by the no-back device which is incorporated in the new Peerless straight eight-125 was demonstrated last week by Peerless officials in Cleveland.

The no-back automatically prevents the car from rolling backward on a hill unless the gear shift lever is deliberately placed in reverse position.

To test this device, a hill with a 15 per cent grade was chosen. A Peerless eight sedan was headed up the grade. Two other Peerless sedans not having the no-back were then connected to it by means of ordinary towlines.

Brakes on all three cars were released and gear shift levers placed in neutral so that the entire load of nearly 11,000 pounds was supported by the no-back device.

The Peerless sedan which was used weighs almost 4000 pounds, but the no-back proved beyond question its ability to support a load nearly three times that heavy. When the strain of the two extra cars was applied, the straight eight never moved an inch, the no-back locking firmly.

Don't Mix 'Em.

Some chassis lubrication systems require oil, others grease. The car owner never should try to substitute the one for the other.

Chrysler "70" Still Winning Races on Local Dirt Tracks

A Chrysler "70" phaeton, one of the first of the cars bearing that name to come off the production line in Detroit in 1924, is still winning dirt track, stock car races throughout Pennsylvania at a mile-a-minute pace.

For the greater part of the Chrysler's existence it has been owned by Paul Lasischo of Mauch Chunk, Pa., a youngster skilled in getting the best out of a motor car.

Lasischo, an auto race enthusiast, long cherished ambitions to be a speed demon of the dirt tracks, of which there are several circuits throughout the Eastern part of the Keystone state. Many of these events are of a "free-for-all" character, and it was in these competitions that Lasischo gained his first lesson in race driving.

Confident that his Chrysler could show its rear tires to the other stock cars entered in these contests, the youth stripped the automobile of its top, windshield and fenders and began to win races in a manner that has since gained for him an enviable reputation as a daring, skillful driver.

CHRYSLER

Rumors about Chrysler's plans are flying thick and fast. The man in the street is saying, "Chrysler has something up its sleeve" . . Widespread gossip insists that Chrysler will soon make an announcement fully as sensational as its dramatic debut of five years ago. Everywhere you hear that Chrysler is going to write another thrilling page of automotive history. The public, which has long expected the unexpected from Chrysler, is waiting in anticipation . . Chrysler greatly appreciates the splendid compliment expressed in this nation-wide belief that something important impends—that whatever Chrysler does is of vital interest and tangible value to the motoring public. It is particularly gratifying right now, in the face of the announcements recently made or promised by other manufacturers, to have American motorists thus reiterate their implicit confidence in Chrysler's ability to stay ahead—and go even farther ahead . . The highest possible tribute to Chrysler prestige is this fact that, after all, everybody is watching Chrysler.

At St. Louis Airfields

FOLLOWING the termination of the endurance flight, Lambert Field took on the appearance of a circus lot after the big top has been hauled down and the red wagons have departed.

Their curiosity satisfied, spectators are now staying away in large numbers and it will require some special attraction to bring most of them back. Acting Field Manager Parks and his assistants spent several busy days gathering up empty pop bottles, old papers and other rubbish that littered the western side of the field. The flight ended, everyone connected with the field settled down to routine duties again, and indications are that Jackson and O'Brine will do likewise after a brief tour.

Flight Boomed Business.

The endurance flight proved a windfall for commercial companies. The Universal Aviation Corporation carried 4000 sightseers during the period, 900 of them on a single day. The Von Hoffmann planes also carried a large number of sightseers. A new Stinson-Detroiter monoplane was bought for the occasion. The forced landing of a trimotored plane at night failed to discourage those who had paid $3 each for 20 minutes aloft.

Joe and Gentry Still Talking.

In the opinion of some of their Lambert Field friends, Joe Hammer and Gentry Shelton, pilots of the Missouri Robin, should have been required to walk in the Jackson-O'Brine parade. Joe and Gentry are still telling stories on each other.

Busy on New Apron.

Contractors engaged in making improvements at Lambert-St. Louis Field have set to work in earnest. Scrapers are smoothing out landing areas in every direction, the first runway of crushed rock and Tarvia is nearing completion, and construction of the 2000-foot concrete apron on the west side of the field is proceeding rapidly. Two new buildings are also under construction, one being the new service hangar for the Von Hoffmann company and the other a new assembly building at the Curtiss-Robertson plant.

Anxious to Try New Runway.

Lambert Field pilots are anxious to test the experimental runway, which is 100 feet wide and follows a path across the field from southwest to northeast. The material, crushed rock and Tarvia, is similar to that used for runways in warm climates. The effect frost will have on the surface will be observed. The location is said to meet with the approval of the majority of the pilots at the field.

School in a Tent.

Because of the construction activity on the west side of the field, the operations department of the Universal School has been temporarily installed in a tent near the Ryan factory, on the north side.

$450,000 Worth of Robins Sold.

One result of the endurance flight was the receipt of orders for 60 Challenger Robins by the Curtiss-Robertson Co. At $7500 a ship, this amounts to $450,000. The actual cost of the flight, including the four planes, special equipment and $1000 worth of gasoline, amounted to approximately $40,000.

Ruth Elder Drops In.

Visitors during the week included Ruth Elder, who made an unsuccessful attempt to cross the Atlantic with George Haldeman. Miss Elder arrived at Lambert Field from California late Thursday in an open Swallow biplane piloted by J. E. Granger. She departed next day for Cleveland, O., where she will participate in the Women's National Air Derby.

Air Executives Go to Europe.

Two local aviation executives departed for Europe during the week to study aeronautical development. J. D. Livingston, vice-president of the Curtiss-Robertson Co. departed from St. Louis Thursday with Mrs. Livingston for a three months' tour. Col. Halsey Dunwoody, executive vice-president of the Universal Aiviation Corporation, sailed Friday from New York for France and will be gone a month. Both Dunwoody and Livingston plan to travel by air in Europe.

Steel Furniture.

Installation of machinery and equipment in the new Von Hoffmann mechanics' school building at Lambert Field will be completed this week. Work benches and stools of hollow steel tubing are being made by welding students.

Parks Schools to Expand.

Parks Air College is to have branch institutions at seven other cities under an expansion program announced during the week. Tentative locations have been selected in Texas, New Jersey, Ohio, Southern California and Washington. Each institution will be operated from a field owned by the Parks interests. A new issue of 400,000 shares of stock, listed at $14.50 a share, was authorized by the directors to finance the expansion program.

Van and Schenck Fly.

Among the passengers carried from St. Louis over the Universal Air Lanes were Van and Schenck, vaudeville team; A. Bulova, president of the Bulova Watch Co., and Reg Robbins, Texas endurance flyer.

Ships for Mexico.

The last two of the six new Ryan broughams were flown from Lambert Field to Nogales, Ariz., last week by Russell Young and Dan Robertson and delivered to the Pickwick Stage Co., which will operate the planes in Mexico.

Navigation Course.

An advanced course in navigation has been started by the Universal Schools. Ensign John W. Geppert, naval reserve, will be in charge of the course, which includes dead reckoning, astronomical observation, piloting by charts, radio navigation and other subjects. The course will be of particular value to students seeking transport licenses.

"Babe" Poses on Cat-Walk.

"Casey" Lambert Buys Brougham.

"Casey" Lambert has purchased a new Ryan brougham and expects to have the ship this week.

Dempsey Finds His Job.

"Boots" Dempsey, who likes to stunt, has found a job that suits his fancy. Last week he was appointed test pilot for the Curtiss-Robertson plant and makes as many as five stunt flights a day testing ships.

Instruments Stand Up Well.

The instruments in the St. Louis Robin were inspected after the flight by C. W. Bunch, Pioneer Instrument Co., and found in good condition except that one of the two oil temperature gauges was broken.

On Aerial Vacation.

Dr. A. C. Leggatt, flight surgeon at Lambert-St. Louis Field, departed on an aerial vacation to Kansas City, Oklahoma City and Chicago after making out his report on the condition of Jackson and O'Brine.

West Pointers Want to Fly.

The popularity of aviation is indicated by the application of 115 of the 297 officers graduated from West Point this year for detail with the Air Corps.

Chosen Sales Representative.

Makes 500 Planes in Year.

The Curtiss-Robertson plant, now producing 75 planes a month, will have turned out more than 500 planes on Aug. 7, the first anniversary of the opening of the plant.

Chosen Chief Instructor.

Roger F. Becker, a motor expert, has been appointed chief instructor of the Curtiss Ground School, recently opened in the Syndicate Trust Building.

Building Passangers' Canopy.

The steel frame for the passengers' canopy in front of the T. A. T. building at Lambert Field has been completed.

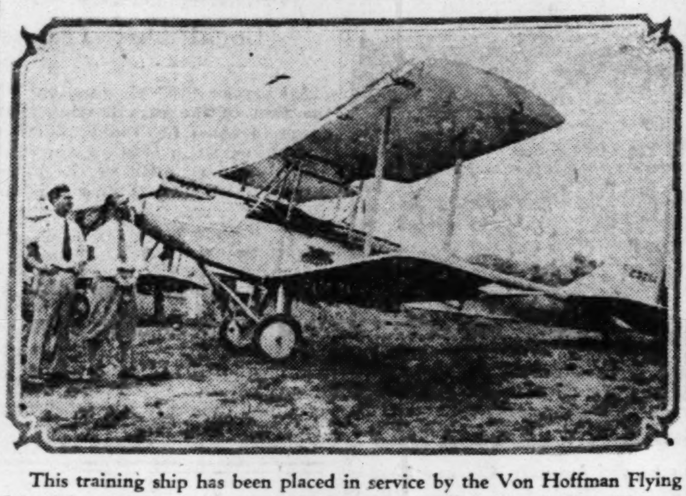
Rickenbacker Visits City.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, war ace and vice president of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation, was a visitor at Lambert Field during the week.

Selecting Sites for Beacon.

Eyre Sloniger, air mail pilot, is covering the western end of the Universal route in a light plane selecting sites for four beacons, which will be installed 26 miles apart.

Avro-Avian "Slotted Wing" Biplane



This training ship has been placed in service by the Von Hoffman Flying School here. The slots are designed to prevent the plane from stalling or spinning. This type of ship has been used successfully in the British army. It is the first of its kind to be used at a local school.

Woolaroc to Fly Here

The Woolaroc, plane in which Art Goebel won the Dole race to Honolulu will visit St. Louis Aug. 9 on a final flight before being placed in the hangar-museum constructed by Frank Phillips, head of the Phillips Petroleum Co., near Bartlesville, Ok. More than 50 cities are included in the plane's itinerary. Goebel will fly the ship himself.

Curtiss Develops Bi-Motored Plane For Night Flying

Carries 18 Passengers, Two Pilots and One Steward; Many Conveniences.

A twin-motored, 18-passenger Curtiss Condor biplane, equipped with sleeping compartments for night flying over the Transcontinental Air Transport line, will pass through St. Louis shortly.

In addition to the passengers, the Condor will carry two pilots and a steward. In tests the ship, powered by two Curtiss Conqueror 600-horsepower water-cooled engines, has been shown to have a top speed of 139 miles an hour and cruising speed of 120 miles. It will reach an altitude of 5700 feet with one motor.

The cabin seats are arranged in three rows, with a longitudinal aisle. Each seat is adjustable, upholstered in leather and fitted with arm rests. The cabins are insulated against noise and vibration with a layer of wood pulp.

Overhead baggage racks, dome lights, a carpeted floor and small cabin radiators connected with boilers in the engine exhaust manifold, are part of the equipment.

With a wing span of 91 feet 8 inches, the ship stands 16 feet 6 inches high.

Plymouth has Over-Size Tires
CHRYSLER MOTORS PRODUCT
YOU will find on Plymouth the largest tires of any car in the low-priced field. Real over-size balloons—4.75—more than ample for this full-size car.
That is why the improved Plymouth—with all its full-size roominess and great comfort, with all its Chrysler-designed style and beauty, with all its Chrysler-like swiftness and smoothness, with all its ruggedness of construction, and the safety of its Chrysler weatherproof internal-expanding 4-wheel hydraulic brakes—with so much else to talk about, devotes an entire advertisement to over-size tires.
Larger tires mean riding on more air, which in turn means greater buoyance and comfort. Then, too, larger tires wear longer, add much to appearance and, most important of all, give the car greater traction, a firmer grip on the road—and that means sure-footed safety.
From tires to roof, from radiator to gasoline tank, Chrysler engineers have endowed the improved Plymouth with qualities and abilities never before available in a car of low price. Make your own comparisons—the facts can't be missed.

Chrysler Will Bring Out New Line Thursday

Cars Will Cause Sensation, Is Prediction of Midwest Motors President.

Announcement of a new line of Chrysler cars, that will be shown to the public for the first time next Thursday, is made by L. M. Stewart, president of Midwest Motors, Inc., distributer.

"Next week Chrysler will make an announcement which will, in my opinion, be as sensational as Chrysler's entry into the automobile field five years ago," Stewart asserted. "I am confident that when the public gets to know the new line it will agree that Chrysler has again been first in interpreting modern motoring demands.

"The new Chrysler line will be conspicuous in three major points —style, performance and economy of operation."

A special private showing for newspapermen and Chrysler dealers will take place tomorrow at the show rooms of Midwest Motors, Inc., 2621 Locust boulevard.

Japanese Police Give Motorists Amusing Hints

One of the officers of the Autocar Co., motor truck manufacturers of Ardmore, Pa., recently brought back with him from Japan a copy of a leaflet which contained Japan's "Rules of the Road and Hints to Motorists," written in English for the benefit of tourists. In part, the rules read:

1. At the rise of the hand of policeman, stop rapidly. Do not pass or otherwise disrespect him.
2. When passenger of the foot hove in sight, tootle the horn. Trumpet melodiously at first. Then tootle with vigor, and express by word of mouth the warning: "Hi! Hi!"
3. Beware of the wandering horse that he shall not take fright. Go soothingly by.
4. Give space to the festive dog that makes sport in the roadway. Avoid entanglement of the dog with your wheel spokes.
5. Go soothingly on the grease-mud as there lurks the skid demon. Press the brake of the foot as you roll around the corners to save the collapse and tie up.

Mechanical Features Make Whippet an Easy Riding Car

Improved mechanical features introduced in the Whippet fours and sixes to enhance their riding comfort have brought in thousands of favorable comments from Whippet owners all over the country, according to reports of Willys-Overland dealers.

With the open touring season at its height and drivers putting their cars through the gruelling tests of bad roads, steep hills and sharp curves, engineers of the company are gratified over the testimony of many owners that the Whippets have established a power of performance and riding comfort to a degree never before attained in previous models of this line.

The superior Whippet's increased wheelbase, shock absorbers, oversize balloon tires and longer front and rear springs combine to afford unusual riding qualities. Extra cross members in the frame of the new Whippet, together with the advanced type of frame construction and the employment of heavier materials, give greater strength and rigidity.

Overhead Roads.

Plans have been placed before the French ministries of Interior and Transportation of a project linking Paris by an overhead automobile road with Nice, Marseilles, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Brest, Lyons and Geneva. According to the scheme, the roads would be carried on reinforced concrete pillars at a height of about 25 feet, and would consist of two one-way tracks, each about 20 feet wide. A large proportion of the heavy initial expenditure, it was suggested, could be covered by the importation of materials from Germany under the reparation plan and the upkeep would be more than met if motorists paid a special tax of 100 francs a year.

Painting Cars.

Applying the new paint with horizontal strokes of the brush is one way to keep the job from looking streaky afterward.

Durability of Hard-Surfaced Roads Tested in Laboratories

Chunks of Material Stretched to Size of Human Hair to Measure Reaction Against Impact of Heavy Cars.

Chunks of road coming in cigar boxes from all sections of the country are daily being stretched to the size of human hairs one meter long to test the ductility of the road surface in a great laboratory in Boston, where men far advanced in the fields of science are performing the most extraordinary and strangely interesting experiments ever known in the history of road building.

The importance of the ductility test, which is but one of many, can be illustrated by the fact that, upon its ductility, depends in no small measure the ability of a road to react without breaking to the repeated shattering impacts of heavy trucks and automobiles. Its scope may be known by the statement that if the asphalt thus maintained at the desired standards were to be stretched into hair lengths the result would be equivalent to an asphalt hair roughly computed, for the purpose of illustration, as reaching many million miles in length.

The samples arriving at the laboratory are sawed in two. They are cooked, separated into their constituent parts, weighed, bathed in warm waters, punched by needles, drawn into hair lengths, or pounded by hammers, and whirled about in steel cylinders. Even the dust from the rock is weighed to determine its abrasive qualities when wet and also when dry.

In witnessing the meticulous care taken in conducting these experiments one is reminded of the operating rooms in a great hospital where fine needles, delicate hands, keen eyes and a score of almost humanly supersensitive instruments are put to work. The billion dollars spent annually on roads in the United States is money that is literally laid upon the ground never to return except in the form of economical transportation, and only a knowledge to the nth degree of a road's lasting qualities can determine the justification of this expenditure. A staff of experts working under the chief of the scientific staff of the Warren Brothers laboratory in Boston have gone further into the testing of roads than have most men in the fields of radio, aviation or other related developments. For over 30 years they have been performing thest meticulous tests and few outside of the laboratories are aware of the marvels performed therein.

The road sample that comes for a test is no more of a road sample that you can put into cigar box, but it is a representative section of work being laid in some part of the country and must come up to the standards of Warren Brothers Co. or it is torn up and another stretch laid down.

The sample, consisting of asphalt mixed with stone and sand, is put into an oven and cooked to loosen it up. It is then mixed with a solvent and the whole is then placed in a receptacle revolving at very high speed so that the asphalt is completely separated from the sand and stone. The dissolved asphalt is thrown out through a porous filter ring or washer. Thus is had an exact specimen of the kind of asphalt that was used to bind together the stone and sand on a certain piece of road a few days previously. This is then placed in a small metal container and immersed in water of 77 degrees Fahrenheit, where it remains for an hour until the temperature of the asphalt equals that of the water. The sample is now placed under a small needle which bears down on it with a weight of 100 grammes for a period of five seconds, electrically timed.

The distance which the needle penetrates into the asphalt is recorded on a dial. This is called the penetration test for consistency. The asphalt has now been so shaped that it can be attached to a mechanism which will stretch it very slowly. The mechanism is contained in a small upright glass vessel which is filled with water maintained at a temperature of 77 degrees. It is stretched so slowly that one cannot perceive the movement. It is drawn into long thin hairs a meter or so in length. It must stretch at least a meter (39.37 inches) to pass this firm's test.

These two tests illustrate, first, the control for consistency, for the needle must not vary in the depth it sinks into the asphalt sample more than half a millimeter. Second, the test for ductility which means it must stretch without breaking. A surface in which asphalt is used that possesses these qualities will best withstand the terrific effects of millions of hurrying automobiles and of heat and cold.

Asphalt is only part of the composition of the road. There is rock to consider. It must be strong and tough. It must be able to stand impact and jolts without breaking and abrasion without being ground into powder.

So the rock is bored into cylinders and subjected to blows by a machine. The rear wheel of the average four-ton truck often gives a 16,000-pound jolt to the road after a jump of a few inches and it is the rock in the sub-grade which must take the brunt of this punishment. The torque of a truck rounding a curve at high speed is terrific and here again the rock must withstand an abrasion test. It is put into a revolving cylinder where it comes into contact with hard iron surfaces. The cylinder is revolved 10,000 times. The piece of rock is then removed and weighed and the dust arising from the abrasion is also weighed. The weight of the dust, of course, shows the percentage of abrasion. This is a meticulous experiment for, if great care is not taken the dust caused by the rock being thrown about the cylinder may form a cushion to minimize a part of the abrasion during the balance of the test.

But how will rock stand up under abrasion when it is wet? Rock is different when wet and dry. To test this a special machine was invented. In this the rock is hurled about in a cube containing water and thus valuable data are accumulated as to abrasive qualities of the rock when both wet and dry.

And prior to all these tests comes the primary test of materials. Rock and bitumin are carefully analyzed and chosen in the first place and the bitumin is subjected to a chemical test. Rock and sand are heated to 300 degrees Fahrenheit to rid them of all moisture. They are then weighed and mixed in definite proportions. The asphalt of bitumin has also been heated so that its temperature corresponded to the rock and sand. A mixture of rock, sand and asphalt, the whole being two inches thick, is laid on the old macadam roadbed which has been prepared to receive it. Over this has been placed a mixture of sand and asphalt half an inch in depth. The two mixtures, still at a very high temperature, are then subjected to the pressure of a heavy steam roller so skillfully operated that it maintains perfectly the contour of the street.

Under its pressure the two mixtures are united. The rocks are kneaded so that they firmly set. The top mixture is forced into the thicker stratum below. The result is a tremendously tough composition with fine materials at the very surface to resist abrasion and sealed against water and underlaid by a very solid composition containing heavier crushed rock. The whole has been compressed into a single piece about 2 inches in thickness, and it is this from which a sample has been taken and sent in a cigar box to the laboratory.

Increase of Plane Output Creates Big Demand for Welders

Welding of mill carbon and chrome-molybdenum steel tubing and sheet aluminum requires particular care, according to officials of the American School of Welding, 3033 Locust boulevard, a training organization which specializes in welding airplane parts.

According to W. D. Patterson, head of the school, the increase in airplane production has created a demand for the trained welder.

Danger in Speeding Lies in Poor Tires

On good highways, with modern automobiles, 35 to 50 miles an hour is the customary speed. The danger factor lies in the tires, according to J. M. Vitt, manager of the Economy Tire Service Co., 2749 Olive street, Fisk dealer.

"No motorist who has any regard for his safety will drive at excessive speed on badly worn tires," Vitt says. "Even racing drivers have a hard time handling a machine when a front tire goes out. With an ordinary driver, a blowout at 60 miles an hour is likely to cause a wreck."

Five Per Cent of Accidents Due to Women Drivers

Here's a shock for men drivers!

A recent survey conducted in 30 States showed that only 5 per cent of all accidents were due to women driving cars, according to W. S. Isherwood, sales executive of the AC Spark Plug Co.

It also was found that on an average more women drivers bring in their cars at regular intervals for mechanical checkup, which includes brake inspection.

Motorists' Group to Urge Standard Car Registration

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Standardization of the various methods of automobile registration throughout the United States is to be urged by the American Motorists' Association on all State Legislators meeting this fall.

A comparison of the manner in which the 48 states compute the license fees for motor vehicles show that there are 16 different methods.

W. L. Bowcott, president of the Square Tire Sales Co., Grand boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue, who recently formed an alliance with 12 other tire dealers to distribute Marathon, Runner and Equity tires and tubes, reports that sale of these tires has more than doubled since the association was formed. The associated dealers buy their tires direct from the factories and sell direct to the consumer, thus eliminating middle profits.

The Eddie C. Miller Auto Repair Co., Kingshighway boulevard and Shaw avenue, have installed a motor X-ray, the latest addition to their modern repair shop, which is also equipped to handle brake-testing.

Announcement that the Willard Storage Battery Co. will build a $1,000,000 factory in Los Angeles, is made by C. W. Lockhart, manager of the Willard branch here. The new plant will be the third of the company.

A Chevrolet six truck played its part in the record endurance flight of the St. Louis Robin. When it was discovered that the supply of Naturaline super aviation gasoline was running low, a Chevrolet truck was dispatched from Tulsa, Ok., with 800 gallons. Driving continuously in an endurance run of their own, two men pushed the truck steadily for the more than 600 miles, arriving in St. Louis in 23 hours.

Care of the hull of a racing boat is an important factor, according to Mrs. E. E. Gillham, proprietor of the Missouri Simoniz Co., 4530 Delmar boulevard.

"Experience of veteran kachtsmen in cup races has proved the value of Simonizing speed boats to obtain a surface that allows them to slip through the water with the least possible hull resistance," Mrs. Gillham said. "The same thing is true, to a less extent with fast automobiles."

Increased demand for driving instruction has caused the addition of a Chrysler, a Cadillac and a Model A Ford to the equipment of the St. Louis Automobile Driving School, 4057 Washington boulevard, according to V. L. Stanfield, manager. Carl Kelly, former driving school instructor in New York, has become connected with the local company.

Two additions to the Buick retail sales forces of the city are announced. Robert Stark, associated with the Flint Chevrolet Co. for eight years, has joined the force of the West Side Buick Auto Co., and Ralph W. Page has become connected with Vesper-Buick Auto Co. He recently returned here after a trip to Florida.

In connection with the showing of the new Durant 6-63, a meeting of Durant dealers was held at Hotel Coronado Tuesday. H. J. Shorter, assistant general sales manager, discussed the new model and declared Durant sales have increased greatly in the last six months. Financially, he declared, the company ranks high, with assets of $4.18 for each dollar of liability. W. S. Cook, district manager, presided over the luncheon meeting.

The new Jay lubricant, suited to combustion chamber service, and the Motop oiler, for introducing the oil through the intake manifold where it mixes with gasoline vapors, have been received for distribution by H. C. Merry, Inc., 3920 Lindell boulevard. Passing through the manifold, the lubricant dissolves gummy substances on the walls of the upper engine chambers that resist the extreme heat of combustion.

Mammoths of the Road.

There are nearly 100,000 motor busses in the United States, and they cover some 800,000 miles of route. Practically every city in the country is directly linked with other cities by long-distance bus lines, and terminals with waiting rooms, bulky time-tables and all the paraphernalia of full-blown transportation systems, have been established at points in every section of the country.

Highway Mileage in U. S.

The United States and its possessions are said to have a total road or highway mileage of about 3,019,035, or about 13,000 more miles than the total in all the countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and the islands of the Pacific.

Two New Models Are Introduced by Chevrolet

Imperial Sedan and Sport Coupe Round Out 6-Cylinder Line.

Rounding out its line of six-cylinder valve-in-head cars, the Chevrolet Motor Co. announces two new closed models—the Imperial sedan and the sport coupe. Officials point out that despite the scores of improvements incorporated in these new models prices have been kept within the low Chevrolet price range, the imperial sedan listing at $695 and the sport coupe at $645, both f. o. b. factory, Flint, Mich.

The new sedan is introduced because of a widespread demand for a style car in the low-price field. On this model the famous Fisher body designers have lavished their skill with noticeable success. It has smart concave front pillars with a rakishly molded visor and in the back and rear quarters are stylishly fitted with landau bows. The interior is smartly upholstered in deep tufted plush, and the car is equipped with an adjustable driver's seat, and other items commonly found in smart cars of this type such as completely equipped instrument panel, smoking set, etc. It is finished in lustrous black with molding in Saginaw green and striping in tusk ivory. Exterior bright work, such as radiator, head lamps and landau bows are chromium plated.

The new sport coupe is also offered in response to a demand for a style car for two passengers, and includes a comfortable rumble seat in the rear and a rear window that is easily raised and lowered by means of a convenient regulator.

Introduction of these two new models comes simultaneously with the announcement that more than 950,000 of the new sixes have already been delivered into the hands of owners and that Chevrolet factories are operating on the biggest summer production level in the history of the company.

As a result of the introduction of these two new models, the Chevrolet passenger car line embraces seven cars, five closed and two open models.

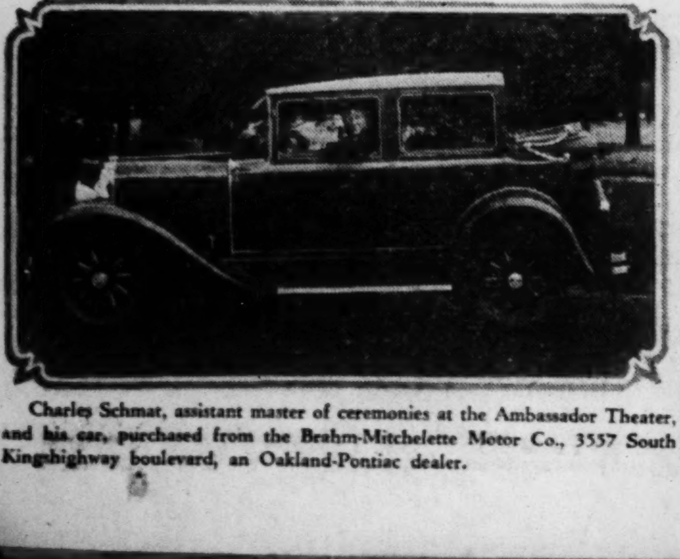
Bureau of Roads To Have Exhibits At Rio de Janeiro

A historical exhibit prepared by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "Twenty-five Years of Highway Progress in the United States," will be shown at the Second Pan-American Congress of Highways to be held in Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 16 to 31.

The exhibit consists of six brilliantly lighted display booths which picture road development from 1904 to the present day, the types of vehicles using the roads, and the number of motor vehicles in existence at different periods.

Telling the story of progress in highway transportation, one picture shrows ox-drawn carts, another the Indian travois, and mules hauling tobacco hogsheads; then two-wheeled carts and four-wheeled wagons, the primitive automobile of 1900, and motor trucks and modern automobile models.

Movie Actor Buys Oakland Landaulet



Charles Schmat, assistant master of ceremonies at the Ambassador Theater, and his car, purchased from the Brahm-Mitchelette Motor Co., 3557 South Kingshighway boulevard, an Oakland-Pontiac dealer.

I. B. Johnston Is Named Secretary Of Stochl Tire Co.

Irvin B. Johnston, who has been in the tire business here for 10 years, has become secretary-treasurer of the Stochl Tire Co., Inc., 3740 Washington boulevard. Johnston started with the South Side Auto Supply Co. and in 1922 became connected with the Johnston Brothers Tire and Service Co., of which he was vice president and sales manager.

Roosevelt Used Champion Plugs on Endurance Run

Evidence of the remarkable advance the last few years have witnessed in design and construction of spark plugs is seen by Champion Spark Plug Co. officials in the feat of the Roosevelt straight eight car which established a new all-time record in its nonstop endurance run of 440 hours and 30 minutes on the Indianapolis Speedway. All Roosevelt cars carry Champions as standard equipment.

"When it is borne in mind that the Roosevelt used at Indianapolis was under continuous headway for more than two and a half weeks and that no stops were made for any reason in that time, even fuel and other supplies being delivered while in motion, the stupendous significance of this gruelling test of the car and its parts becomes strikingly evident," said R. A. Stranahan, president of the Champion Spark Plug Co.

12 Studebakers Used With Aero Cars by T. A. T.

A novel type of aero-car trailer attached to a Studebaker president eight cabriolet has been placed in service here in connection with the 48-hour coast-to-coast air-rail passenger service inaugurated by the Pennsylvania and Santa Fe railroads and the Transcontinental Air Transport, according to the Lurie Motor Car Co., Studebaker-Erskine distributor. The new service started July 8 with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh piloting the first plane from Los Angeles on its eastbound flight. The Studebaker aero-car is being used to transport passengers between the flying field and the railroad station.

"Eleven Studebaker president cabriolets and one president eight state sedan have been purchased by the Transcontinental Air Transport and placed in service at the various ports of call on the transcontinental route.

"In addition to St. Louis, president cabriolets with aero-cars attached are stationed in the following cities: Los Angeles; Kingman, Ariz.; Winslow, Ariz.; Albuquerque, N. M.; Clovis, N. M.; Waynoka, Ok.; Wichita, Kan.; Kansas City, Mo.; Indianapolis, Ind., and Columbus, O.

A Wonder Highway.

The longest highway on the North American Continent, some 5000 miles in length, is planned for Canada. Starting at Halifax, the road will be built north of Lake Superior, in a wild, uninhabited country, to Vancouver, through the Rocky Mountains all the way.

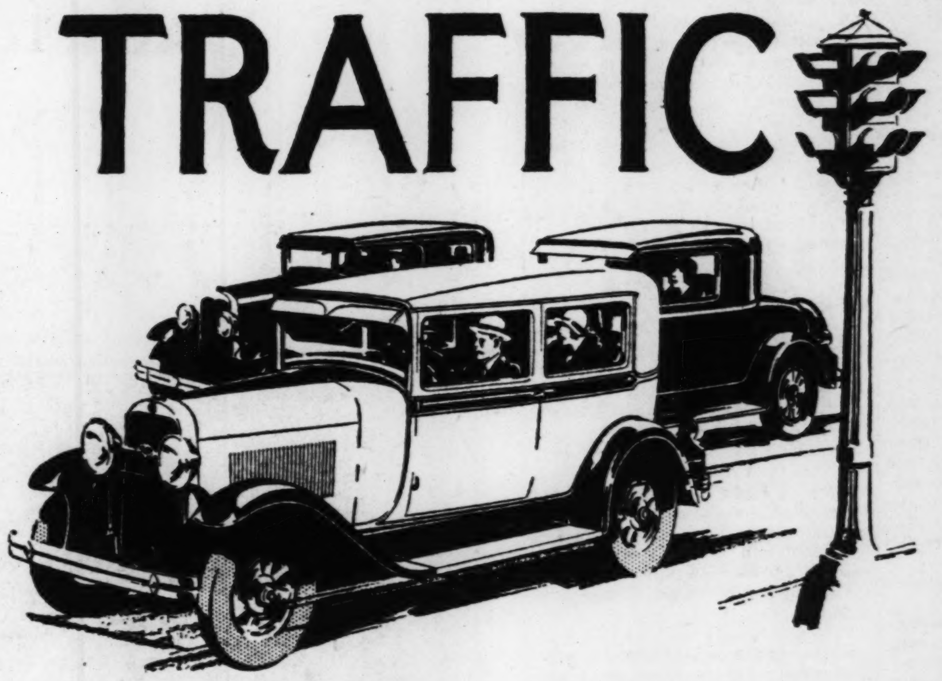
Easy Steering – Easy Shifting – Lightning Pick-up – Safety Brakes-

DRIVE IT THROUGH TRAFFIC



IF YOU want a car that is easy to handle in traffic, come drive this finer Oldsmobile.

The moment you pull away from the curb, you'll realize that here is a car that will give you genuine pleasure to drive. The driving position is supremely comfortable, due to the Fisher adjustable front seat and the adjustable steering wheel. Controls and instruments are conveniently arranged. Gear-shift, clutch, and brakes are easy to reach and to operate. Response to the throttle is swift and smooth.

Your first experience at a signal light will tell you that here is getaway second to none—pick-up as stageless as that of an electric motor. And each succeeding trial will prove how readily Oldsmobile flashes into the lead when the green light signals "go."

But there's more than getaway to driving in traffic—far more. Put Oldsmobile through its paces. Make opportunities for difficult tests deliberately.

Note how easily and surely Oldsmobile glides through crowded streets. See how it straightens out, almost automatically, after turning corners. Observe how quickly you can stop. Good brakes are an essential safety factor for city driving. Oldsmobile's positive-acting four-wheel brakes are exceptionally efficient—and they are smooth, quiet, and easy to operate as well. Then try parking. The same fingertip steering and short turning radius that give you such sureness of control in driving make parking easy even in small spaces.

Just drive this Oldsmobile. Try it in traffic and on the open road. Make critical comparisons with other cars. That's the only way to find out what it can do, and how it does it. That's the way to know every phase of its performance. That's the way to judge its value.

This new radiator emblem identifies the fine car of low price.

Cold Water Pipe for Ground.

A cold water pipe is better for a ground than a hot water pipe. The former is more likely to go direct to the ground while the hot-water pipe may be insulated as it passes through a heater. Scrape the pipe clean and use a ground clamp to make sure of firm contact.

Dodge Announces Two New Models For School Busses

Introduction of two new models of six-cylinder school busses with increased carrying capacities at new lower prices, and reductions up to $220 on other models of school busses have been announced by the bus and motor coach division of Dodge Brothers. Production schedules have been geared to supply the heavy seasonal demands for school busses through the nation-wide Dodge dealer organization.

"Record-breaking sales leading to volume prodction in the immense manufacturing facilities of Dodge Brothers have made it possible to offer these larger and improved school busses at reduced prices," said A. H. Ferrandou, director of the company's bus and motor coach department. "The traditional safety, economy and dependability of Dodge Brothers school busses are reflected by an increase of 75 per cent in the company's sales for the first half of this year, compared to the corresponding period of 1928, in a market that is constantly expanding to meet the demands of transporting children to and from school."

A 40 per cent increase in carrying capacity has been effected in the two new busses by the addition of a longitudinal seat with back running down the center of the bus. The body width has been increased, insuring adequate room for the additional children carried.

Model A Fords Win Three Places In Russian Event

Continuing their series of triumphs in European automobile contest, Model A Ford cars won first, second and third places in competition with 45 other automobiles in the recent Russian speed, endurance and reliability race between Moscow and Nijni-Novogorod and return.

Details of the victory have just been forwarded to the Ford Motor Co. by V. I. Meshlak, vice chairman of the Supreme Economic Council of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Results of the contest proved gratifying and of great interest to Russians because of the recent negotiation of a nine-year agreement with the Ford Motor Co., under which Ford passenger cars and commercial vehicles will be manufactured in the soviet republic.

Gardner Sedan Wins In Brazilian Contest

In a spirited contest with 10 leading American foreign cars, the Gardner eight-in-line deluxe sedan entered by Amaral, Lima, Ltd. distributer for Brazil, won by 35 votes over the nearest competitor and with a 1612-vote margin over the third nearest contestant. By polling the highest number of votes in the contest, the Gardner sedan carried off first honors and the first prize, a gold medal. The Gardner car polled a total of 3120 votes out of a total of 13,944 votes cast for the 10 entrants in the beauty contest.

The contest, according to word received by T. F. Fowler, director of exports for Gardner, surpassed in enthusiasm and interest any similar event ever held in Brazil and interest in it was nation-wide. In fact, it was looked upon as a great sporting event in the below-the-equator city of Sao Paulo.

To Identify Oscillating Tube.

Oscillation in radio frequency or detector tubes may be identified by high-pitched whistles coming out of the speaker when the dials of the set are moved. The tube that is oscillating can be identified easily. By touching a finger to the grid, a plucking sound is heard when the tube goes in and out of oscillation.

Radio Trade Notes

Sparton radios were presented to Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, endurance flight champions and Major C. Ray Wassell and P. V. Chaffee, their refuling crew, by the Sparks-Withington Co. of Jackson, Mich. The ceremony took place at Lambert field Thursday at the end of a day crowded with receptions for the airmen and was witnessed by hundreds of spectators.

Tom A. Dudley, Sparton distributer in St. Louis, who made the presentation speech, congratulated the flyers on their feat. The aviators stood beside their gifts under a wing of the big Sparks-Withington monoplane, Miss Sparton.

Plans for donating the sets were made by Sparks-Withington officers as soon as they learned that the endurance flyers had landed their plane. The company monoplane, which is on a tour of the state capitals of the country for the Jackson Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of stimulating interest in aviation, was ordered to proceed from Indianapolis to St. Louis with sets for the flyers. On Wednesday, a similar model was presented Gov. Leslie of Indiana. Following the presentation, the Miss Sparton left to continue its tour.

Declaring that four outstanding qualities are demanded by the radio buying public today, Harry Brockmann, distributor of Philco balance-unit radio sets, has pinned much of his hope for success in 1929 on the tone, selectivity, sensitivity and appearance of this product.

"Radio engineers have determined that to secure the first three qualities, tone, selectivity and sensitivity, it is necessary that each unit entering into the construction of a set shall exactly match and balance, one against the other, so that each unit will work at its exact peak of efficiency," Brockmann said. "Radio units have individuality and certain definite characteristics and unless they all work together at this exact peak of efficiency, the result will be a weak insensitive receiver producing distorted programs and altogether unsatisfactory both as to tone, distance reception and the ability to separate stations. An unbalanced set puts hurdles in the way of the radio impulses and altogether kills off or suppresses many of the tones and overtones which are so necessary for complete enjoyment of a fine program.

"Philco has overcome innumerable difficulties in engineering and manufacturing in bringing out its new Balanced-Unit Set in which every condenser, coil, transformer, choke, and resistance is carefully and painstakingly selected and balanced so that they all operate together. In this way Philcos are comparable to the instruments of a great symphony orchestra. When units are balanced there is an open road through the set from the antenna to the ear and the programs are heard in their original beauty and clarity.

"To lessen electrical resistance in the new Philco set the wiring has been simplified to a point where electrical losses due to complicated and poorly arranged wiring have been reduced to a negligible point.

"There are two new Philco balanced-unit chassis models this season. One is a 6-tube AC screen grid and the other an 8-tube AC neutrodyne-plus. Both these new models use the new 245 power tubes in push-pull."

Ellery W. Stone, president of the Kolster Radio Corporation, announces that an agreement has been signed in Berlin between Kolster-Brandes Limited and Telephonfabrik Berliner Aktiengesellschaft of Berlin for the manufacture and sale of Kolster and Brandes models in Germany. Under the proposed plan the radio division of Telephonfabrik Berliner Aktiengesellschaft, one of the oldest telephone and radio companies in Germany, will be merged with Kolster-Brandes' German operations. In the future, the Kolster-Brandes receivers will be manufactured in the factories of Telephonfabrik Berliner Aktiengesellschaft in Berlin and Hanover, and will be sold in Germany by a company to be known as Kolster-Brandes Tefag.

A new battery compound has just been announced by the Goodyear Chemical Co., New York. The new product, "Electex," increases the efficiency of all storage batteries using sulphuric acid electrolyte, according to L. E. Burkhart, the inventor.

The layman often questions the economy of radio receivers operated from the house current, according to George Lewis, vice president of the Arcturus Radio Tube Co. of Newark, N. J. "As a matter of fact," says Lewis, "these receivers are necessarily the most economical type of sets, due to the fact that they have eliminated the charge-discharge inefficiencies of the battery sets.

A stock Apex radio receiving set is part of the chosen equipment aboard the record-breaking S. S. Bremen, which smashed the best previous crossing records both ways across the Atlantic. Says Leopold Ziegenstein, commander of the Bremen, in a radio to the Apex officers in Chicago: "Apex radio operating satisfactorily on the high seas." This same set will shortly be presented in America in three screen grid models at popular prices.

James C. Gordon, president of the James C. Gordon Co., Inc., 1213 Pine street, held demonstration in the Crystal room of the Hotel Jefferson, Friday afternoon and evening, at which 100 Bosch Radio dealers were present.

Gordon, in a talk said the meeting was in celebration of the company's first year in the radio business, handling the Bosch line, and that it had had such success with the Bosch radio in this territory that the American Bosch Magneto Co. of Springfield, Mass., had assigned the Kansas territory, which consists of Nebraska, Kansas and the western half of Missouri, to Gordon, who recently opened a branch office in Kansas City, Mo.

At the speakers' table were Herbert Shoemaker, Western sales manager whose office is located in Chicago; Julian L. Deane, sales promotional representative from the factory; Wallace P. Moran, chief technician, who is in charge of the Western territory, Chicago, and A. B. Clark, district sales representative, Chicago.

The entire line was on display in the corridors of the hotel and attracted much attention.

Amos 'n Andy on KWK, Nightly, Beginning Aug. 19

New 52-Week Series of Blackface Comedians to Be Heard in NBC System at 9 P. M.—No Tuesday Broadcast.

Amos 'n' Andy, the blackface comedians known to radio listeners from coast to coast, who have signed an exclusive long term contract with the National Broadcasting Co. to appear over an extensive network, are to be heard over KWK, beginning Aug. 19. The pair will inaugurate a new network program based on a conception of a daily comic strip for the air. The series will bring two of America's most famous radio artists before the microphone for a 15-minute period beginning at 9 o'clock St. Louis time, every night, except Tuesday. The programs, scheduled for 52 weeks, are sponsored by the Pepsodent Co. It is said that the contract provides for a salary that exceeds all records for radio comedians.

The nightly programs of Amos 'n' Andy will be put on the network from various parts of the country. Theatrical tours, arranged for the team by the National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau will carry them into all parts of the United States, which will necessitate the microphone being carried to them wherever they happen to be when the time comes for them to go on the air.

Freeman Gosden and Charles J. Correll are the full names of Amos 'n' Andy, whose droll Afro-American witticisms have captivated the nation. Their popularity is pointed to by broadcasting officials as complete evidence of the hold of radio on the American public. They are wholly the products of the microphone and never appeared on the stage as blackface comedians until radio made their names familiar in all parts of the country. A recent tour of personal appearances not only resulted in packed houses everywhere, but also made them the central figures at numerous civic receptions.

Gosden is the Amos of the pair and Correll is the Andy. They have been identified with radio broadcasting since 1925, always as blackface comedians. Their popularity dates back to their first broadcast. Unlike many performers, there has been no letup. Their favor with the listeners has increased steadily.

Correll was born in Peoria, Ill. All his life he had a hankering to be an actor. But first he tried the construction business. Finally he gave it up to try the stage. In Durham, N. C., he found a young Virginian, Gosden, rehearsing an amateur show. Correll joined the troupe and in the succeeding months they were thrown together a great deal.

Later the show went to Chicago and Correll and Gosden shared an apartment. They discovered that their voices blended well and many of their off hours were spent in harmonizing for their own amusement. In the spring of 1925, "just for the fun of it," they went to WEBH, Chicago, and asked to broadcast.

"Sure," said the manager, "but there'll be no pay."

That was all right with Correll and Gosden. They had no serious radio ambitions then. But the first broadcast was so successful that WGN, Chicago, offered them places on its staff. Jan. 12, 1926, they went on the air for the first time, as Sam 'n Henry.

Two years later, at the close of their 568th broadcast as Sam 'n Henry, their contract with WGN expired. They signed a new one with WMAQ. As the characters of Sam 'n Henry were the property of WGN, Amos 'n Andy came into being.

While Sam 'n Henry were popular, Amos 'n Andy have outdistanced their popularity by far. After their first year with WMAQ the curiosity of the public concerning them reached such a pitch that they wrote a book telling all about themselves.

Amos 'n Andy are inclined to give credit for their popularity to the fact that they try to live their characters. They go among Negroes, learn their ways and foibles. Their picturization of Southern Negroes transplanted to the North has been said by students to be the most realistic ever accomplished.

100 Dealers Back From Plant of Atwater Kent

Guests of Brown & Hall Supply Co. on Trip Aboard a Special Train.

One hundred radio dealers from St. Louis and the surrounding trade territory have returned from a trip through the 32-acre Atwater Kent Co. plant at Philadelphia. The dealers were the guests of the Brown & Hall Supply Co., 1504 Pine street, on a six-day tour of the East, which included Washington and Atlantic City.

The special trail bearing the party arrived at Philadelphia last Tuesday and the dealers were taken in busses to the plant at Germantown. In groups of 10 to 15 the members of the party were shown through the huge Atwater Kent plant by guides who explained in detail the construction of radio sets. All of the dealers were greatly impressed.

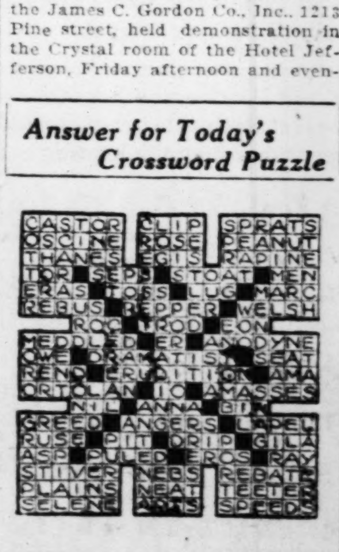
'Phone Switchboard Acts as Receiver

By plugging her headset into one line on a telephone switchboard Miss Viola Littlefield, operator-stenographer at Boston, can hear a radio program.

Telephone engineers say the proximity of one of the lines to a circuit connecting a radio station's studios, just across the street, with its sending station, converts the switchboard into a receiving set.

Answer for Today's Crossword Puzzle



Steer in the Stations

with the "NAVIGATOR"

YOU'RE ruler of the air waves as you sit at the helm of the "Navigator." Steer in the stations at your will. Anywhere . . . everywhere . . . is at your call. That husky crew of nine powerful tubes goes out and gets what you want to hear.

The "Navigator" isn't the ordinary radio you're accustomed to hearing. Don't make the mistake of thinking so. It is entirely different in circuit; superior in tone and performance. The famous "Technidyne" circuit is used—new to radio this year—the most selective circuit known. You're never bothered with heterodyning or other noises. Power Detection, a new "Navigator" feature, makes possible the remarkable power. And tone? You have to hear it to appreciate what the new push-pull amplification circuit, using two of the giant new 245 tubes, has done for real reproduction.

You'll be as delighted with the "Navigator's" price as with its performance and appearance. Seven models to choose from, cabinet or console, from $79 up. Your nearest A-C Dayton dealer will be glad to demonstrate.

Consoles are the finest work of Globe-Wernicke, Cincinnati, and represent fifty years' experience in the woodworking art.

Prefers Radio To Singing in Opera

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa.—The radio has won over the stage in the case of a promising young singer.

Miss Virginia Kendrick, 22, recent winner in the contralto division of the Federation of Music Clubs' contest at Boston, has declined an offer of the American Opera Co., saying that the contract would interfere with her concert and radio work in Pittsburg. Miss Kendrick has sung many times over KDKA since first becoming prominent as a singer there in 1924.

She was one of the winners in the sesqui-centennial contests at Philadelphia. The contract offered her was said to have included a 20-week tour of the United States.

RADIO PIONEER

Little Joe Warner, who has remained popular through the year as a radio broadcaster, will be featured from the Majestic Theater of the air tonight.

Truly Informal

William A. Hillpot and Harold R. Lambert, who play "Trade" and "Mark" on the air, go Tin-Pan Alley one better in informal musical composition.

One of them gets an idea for a tune. He hums it over and over until the other gets it. They rehearse their program for hours. And not always do they choose the studios for these rehearsals. They meet over a cup of coffee in a side street restaurant.

"I though up a new gag," says Trade. He tell it. Immediately both senses its possibilities. Then it is nothing unusual for them to do their stuff for the benefit of walters and customers.

Interference to radio reception set up by small motors may be effectively stamped out by the use of a so-called interference filter.

FORMAL OPENING OF LENNOX HOTEL SET FOR SEPT. 3

TWAIN HOSTELRY NEAR COMPLETION

National Exposition Co. Arena Near Forest Park Highlands Expected to Be Ready Sept. 1.

Three building projects which in the aggregate cost about $6,850,000 are rapidly nearing completion and work is going forward in expectation that final touches will be placed on the structures early next month.

The formal opening of the 27-story Lennox Hotel at Ninth street and Washington boulevard has been set for Sept. 3 and the 15-story Mark Twain Hotel at Eighth and Pine streets will be completed not more than a week later. Ben Brinkman, president of the National Exposition Co., expects that its arena being built west of Forest Park Highlands will be completed by Sept. 1. It will be opened with the National Dairy Show in October.

No date has been set for the probable completion of the 29-story Park-Plaza Hotel being built by the Koplar Brothers at Maryland avenue and Kingshighway at a cost of $6,000,000. The steel superstructure is now at the fourth floor.

Work on the Lennox Hotel, which will cost about $2,900,000, was begun a year ago last May. The project, like others in St. Louis, was delayed for about two months by the building trades strike. Further difficulties were encountered when it was found necessary to sink the foundation deeper than plans called for because of quicksand. That condition is reported to have added $400,000 to the cost of the structure.

Extra Workmen Employed.

Despite these setbacks, the hotel will open on schedule, due to employment of extra workmen on both day and night shifts.

The hotel is being built and will be operated by the Heiss Hotel Co., of which Charles Heiss is president. The same company owns the Hotel Mayfair and the two will be operated under joint management, with William F. Victor as resident manager. Preston J. Bradshaw was architect for both structures.

The Lennox has 400 rooms, each with tub and shower baths. Among the unusual features of its equipment are the exclusive use of electricity in the kitchen, chromium plated plumbing fixtures and a system for cooling the air in the dining room, coffee shop and barber shop.

It is said to be the first hotel west of Chicago to use nothing but electrical equipment in its kitchen. Chromium is a non-tarnishing rust-proof metal, which does not require polishing.

The lobby, dining room, mezzanine and main floor corridors of the building are finished in paneled mahogany.

Mark Twain Hotel Sold.

The Mark Twain Hotel started by Julius Feldman a year ago last March and sold the first of this year to Charles Levy for a price reported to be about $2,000,000, will have no formal opening, but it is expected it will be open for business before the middle of September.

The building will cost $1,450,000 equipped. It contains 200 guest rooms and there are six shops on Pine street and one on Eighth street. The main entrance will be on Eighth street. The hotel will have a small lobby, finished in marble and walnut, but there will be a spacious mezzanine.

Special attention has been given to the two restaurants which will be operated by the hotel. Both the main dining room and the basement coffee shop will be cooled by iced air. The coffee shop, with a capacity of 278, has been designed to simulate the deck of a steamboat. Pictures of Mississippi River scenery about Hannibal, the birthplace of Mark Twain, have been painted on all four walls.

The hotel is owned by the Claridge Hotel Co., of which Levy is president, and will be under the management of H. C. Worley, who will continue in the same connection with the Claridge Hotel.

No Pillars in Arena.

Out at the exhibition arena, scaffolding is being erected so that the Lamella roof, 165 feet wide and 335 feet from the floor of the arena, may be constructed. This type of roof does away with the necessity for pillars, and the view of the 20,658 spectators who may be crowded into the structure will be unobstructed. This type of roof was used first in St. Louis at the Missouri Stables.

The roof will be in place by

The hotel is being built and will be operated by the Heiss Hotel Co., of which Charles Heiss is president. The same company owns the Hotel Mayfair and the two will be operated under joint management, with William F. Victor as resident manager. Preston J Bradshaw was architect for both structures.

The Lennox has 400 rooms, each with tub and shower baths Among the unusual features of its equipment are the exclusive use of electricity in the kitchen, chromium plated plumbing fixtures and a system for cooling the air in the dining room, coffee shop and barber shop.

It is said to be the first hotel west of Chicago to use nothing but electrical equipment in its kitchen. Chromium is a non-tarnishing rust-proof metal, which does not require polishing.

The lobby, dining room, mezzanine and main floor corridors of the building are finished in paneled mahogany.

Mark Twain Hotel Sold.

The Mark Twain Hotel started by Julius Feldman a year ago last March and sold the first of this year to Charles Levy for a price reported to be about $2,000,000. will have no formal opening, but it is expected it will be open for business before the middle of September.

The building will cost $1,450,000 equipped. It contains 300 guest rooms and there are six shops on Pine street and one on Eighth street. The main entrance will be on Eighth street. The hotel will have a small lobby, finished in marble and walnut, but there will be a spacious mezzanine.

Special attention has been given to the two restaurants which will be operated by the hotel. Both the main dining room and the basement coffee shop will be cooled by iced air. The coffee shop, with a capacity of 278, has been designed to simulate the deck of a steamboat. Pictures of Mississippi River scenery about Hannibal, the birthplace of Mark Twain, have been painted on all four walls.

The hotel is owned by the Claridge Hotel Co., of which Levy is president, and will be under the management of H. C. Worley, who will continue in the same connection with the Claridge Hotel.

No Pillars in Arena.

Out at the exhibition arena, scaffolding is being erected so that the Lamella roof, 165 feet wide and 125 feet from the floor of the arena, may be constructed. This type of roof does away with the necessity for pillars, and the view of the 20,650 spectators who may be crowded into the structure will be unobstructed. This type of roof was used first in St. Louis at the Missouri Stables.

The roof will be in place by Aug. 24, acording to George H. Holcombe, engineer in charge, and while scaffolding is being taken down the work in installing permanent seats and boxes will be begun. There will be 13,000 permanent seats.

The surrounding ground is being graded and the lighting system installed. The two towers on either side of the arena will be outlined with Neon lights.

The building slump in St. Louis continued throughout July when the total permits issued was only 39 per cent as great as the total for the same month last year. The figures were $2,631,867 for July, 1929, and $2,781,731 for July, 1928.

The decline in construction is not peculiar to St. Louis, but has been emphasized here by recent labor difficulties and a surplus of certain types of building due to previous over-construction. The money-market has had an influence in building generally, high rates due to speculation in stocks, making the financing of building operations somewhat difficult.

The decline here has been consistent since the first of the year, construction in each month being lower than in the corresponding month of the previous year. The total estimated cost of projects for which permits have been issued during the first seven months of the year has been only 60 per cent of the total for the same period a year ago. In 1929 permits totaling $18,611,599 have been issued, and in the first seven months of 1928 the total was $28,343,782.

About one-fifth of the permits issued during July were for alterations, that classification accounting for $449,115 in the total. The largest item in new construction was $631,000 for ten apartments, each to cost more than $15,000.

Thirty-seven permits for apartments to cost less than $15,000 each were issued, the total estimated cost being $244,500. Permits for 112 brick and 22 frame dwellings were issued. The estimated cost of the brick dwellings is $500,640 and the frame, $47,300.

Other large items were $305,100 for four warehouses and $172,900 for seven factories.

How Would You Sell a Good Used Car?

If you could hold it up so that the largest number of prospective buyers could look at it and hear you tell why it is a bargain at the price you ask, the sale would be easily made—wouldn't it?

The way to sell it is to describe it to the largest number of prospective buyers who are watching for such offers in the Post-Dispatch Classified Automobile Columns. Do not overlook the importance of telling enough about the car to really interest the man who wants yours. The Post-Dispatch Classified Columns are selling cars every day through advertisements giving the information prospective purchasers desire. Call MAin 1111 for an adtaker.

Light Opera and Musicomedy

"The Vagabond King" at Municipal Opera and "Hit the Deck" at the Garden Theater are Week's Attractions at the Outdoor Show Places With "Babes in Toyland" and "Peggy Anne" to Follow as Summer Season Draws Near End.

WITH the summer season drawing to a close the Municipal Opera starting tomorrow night, will present the very stirring light opera, "The Vagabond King," leaving the musical comedy field to the Garden Theater where the tuneful and snappy "Hit The Deck" goes on view this evening. But two more weeks of Municipal shows remain for Forest Park after "The Vagabond King." The Garden is to remain open until Labor Day.

According to all reports a most pretentious production of Rudolf Friml's Vagabond King, with Carolyn Thomson singing the role of Lady Katherine, which she created in the original New York production and played for more than three seasons, will be offered tomorrow night. Steps have been taken by the Municipal Theater Association to make the production of "The Vagabond King" a notable one and the management has decided to enhance the chorus work and announcement is made that the ensemble has been increased to 120, with many new voices in the male section. This move will tend to invigorate the choral numbers, especially the thunderous Song of the Vagabonds, featured in the Friml score.

Alice MacKenzie, by the way, is not in the cast of "The Vagabond King." Her resignation from the Municipal company does not go into effect until next Saturday night but the Forest Park organization decided not to use her after the completion of "The Enchantress" this evening. Miss MacKenzie is to go into vaudeville almost immediately and is booked to appear at the St. Louis Theater here on Aug. 10. A tour of the Orpheum circuit will follow.

* * * *

FOR "Hit the Deck," the colorful musical comedy with a nautical background at the Garden Theater, Stella Mayhew, who achieved one of the greatest successes of her career in the show, has been brought here to appear in the role she created. It is that of a Negro mammy who feels a deep responsibility for the young mistress she has reared from babyhood. She wanders throughout the play, singing her famous "Hallelujah" song.

Another member of the original production who will be presented to St. Louis audiences by Peter Greig is Roger Gray, once a great favorite with local theatergoers. Gray appeared here many years ago with the Park Opera Company and later with his own light opera company at the Pershing Theater.

"Hit the Deck" is an adaptation of the Belasco stage success "Shore Leave," with music by Vincent Youmans. It has a refreshing plot with the "gobs" of the navy playing a prominent part. The story starts on the docks at Newport, where Looloo, daughter of a sea captain, runs a coffee house that is the headquarters for the sailors on shore leave. Here Looloo meets and falls desperately in love with "Bilge" Smith, a roistering son of the bounding billows who lives up to the tradition that the sailor has a girl in every port. From then on the story drifts around the world until the lovers are finally united for keeps.

THE history of "The Vagabond King" cannot be narrated without mention of St. Louis. It was in this city that most of the liberetto and lyrics were written and it was at the Municipal Theater last summer that the first repertory production of the light opera was given. The Friml opus was originally produced in this country by Russell Janney, an intrepid soul in the theatrical world who had dared to do the finer things. In casting about for suitable material for a light opera, Janney fell upon Justin McCarthy's famous play, "If I Were King," which had served E. H. Sothern as a starring vehicle for several seasons. Janney commissioned Brian Hooker and William H. Post, an excellent actor, to write the libretto, and to Friml was given the task of writing the score. It was while Post was appearing at the American Theater here for two weeks in "Seventh Heaven" in January, 1925, that the book was completed.

"The Vagabond King" was produced at the Casino Theater in New York in September, 1925, and received an ovation. It remained on Broadway for nearly two full seasons. Six companies were organized to tour the country the following year and everywhere the piece won universal acclaim. St. Louis saw it for several weeks at the Shubert Rialto Theater and repeat engagements were played several times at the same playhouse. When Janney later lost most of the profits of the Friml work on a subsequent production of "The White Eagle," he took "The Vagabond King" to Europe and it repeated its American triumph. The profits of the latter production are to be used by

An Investment in Dreams

By Carolyn Thomson

Municipal Opera's prima donna, who appeared in the original production of "The Vagabond King," relates some of the inside history of the Friml light opera.

"IF I were king—ah, love, if I were king"—

Like every other ardent teenage girl who had read Justin Huntley McCarthy's novel "If I were King" those words remained in my mind. I could see myself, I suppose as every other romantic girl sees herself — as the high-born princess to whom Villon, the poet and vagabond recites that verse. And, though I had never seen Mr. Sothern play Francois Villon, I had seen Sothern in his later years, and in my dreams I had invisioned such a poet as he must have been. So much for romantic fancy. I had then not even the slightest dream of ever going upon the stage. Naturally my wildest fancies would never associate Francois Villon with the one really romantic event in my otherwise uneventful life.

So much for background.

Then in the summer of 1925 the word went round New York. Russell Janney was casting a musical version of McCarthy's novel, with music by Rudolf Friml to book and lyrics by Brian Hooker and W. H. Post.

"Why don't you try," asked a friend, "for the role of Katherine?"

That was the friend who told me of it. Otherwise there would have been no need to ask. I think I should have tried anyway.

I could see myself as had seen in those girlhood dreams—I was the high-born Princess to whom the poet-rogue poured forth his heart in song. Now I could realize by dream. That much just seemed certain. And next morning I was at Mr. Janney's office. How many there were ahead of me. I have to laugh now at my surprise. Katherine had seemed so much my role it hadn't even occurred to me that anyone else wolld be trying for it.

FRANKLY I didn't like the idea There are times when humor fails to come to your rescue in a situation. It failed me then. Instead of laughing at my own naivete, was bothered. I had never before been asked for an audition before I got a role. I was annoyed. I didn't know whether I would sing for Mr. Janney now. But still—there was Katherine. I did want to sing that heroine of my dreams.

So I stayed till all the rest were heard. At least I would not have to sing in front of them. And then I sang. And Mr. Janney gave me the contract. I was to be Katherine.

We went into rehearsal. Probably it was a week, it may have been a little longer. I don't remember exactly the Equity rule. But one day the Equity representative walked into the rehearsal hall. "It's too bad," he explained. "But you know the Equity rules. They are for your protection. You can't rehearse any longer without a bond. Mr. Janney has promised a $3000 bond to protect you, but he hasn't been able to provide it, I'm afraid you're through."

Three of us has a conference: Dennis King, Max Figman and myself. What a shame, we were all agreed. There could be no question about "The Vagabond King." It was certain of success. Splendid music, fine lines, a genuinely romantic story. But a production that would cost $60,000. And Mr. Janney couldn't raise $3000 for a bond.

"I've a little money," I said to Dennis King, "and I have some friends I could try to interest."

"And I," he answered. Figman felt the same.

So. Mr. King and I went to Mr. Janney, who was almost in despair. We told him we had confidence. We offered him what money we had. We undertook to interest our friends.

ONE evening we got them together. Friml played the music and we read the book and sang our songs. Our friends were agreed that this would be a success. So they went in with us. Yes, it seemed certain of success—but as yet there was no "Song of the Vagabonds" for that splendid inspiration didn't come until later.

All of us were in together now. I learned something of the story of the operetta. How Will H. Post, playing the priest in "Seventh Heaven" has written the book at white-heat during his engagement at the American Theater, St. Louis. How Mr. Janney at wits end for money for production had offered a St. Louisan a quarter interest in the work for $5000. Intimate things, like that.

IT became necessary to have more money. For a time it looked as though we would never get further than New Haven. But one of the other friends who had joined us had faith—and money to back up the faith. We reached Broadway. Excited, nervous, almost paralyzed by the ordeal, we faced our first audience at the Casino Theater, on September 21, 1925. But we were without fear. We, at least, had confidence.

The more particularly because two nights before the opening Mr. Friml, in his apartment at about 2 a. m., had a sudden inspiration and created the music of "The Song of the Vagabonds," and, of course, such a rousing, inspiriting song must add immeasurably to our chances for success.

Our faith was justified. "The Vagabond King" ran on Broadway for 511 performances. To tell the truth, I have scarcely played anything but Katherine since.

And it made those of us who had faith in it something over a million dollars. Which shows that faith is profitable.

I know of a fact that neither Mr. King nor myself would ever have dreamed of putting in a penny if we hadn't rehearsed, sung and acted our roles until they had gripped us both in their identities.

When Stella Mayhew
First Became A Blackface Artist

IT was a tense moment. Vincent Youmans twisted nervously in his seat. He was in the throes of the mental agony that tortures the artist when the real test of the brain child he has labored over for weary weeks is about to begin.

The time was two years ago and the place the Belasco Theater in New York. It was the opening night of "Hit the Deck," for which Youmans had written the music.

The usual gala crowd of first-nighters was on hand. There was the usual excitement and enthusiasm attendant on all opening nights. The audience appeared to be amused and interested in the show thus far, but there had been nothing to indicate a spontaneous success.

Now approached the moment that would let the author know whether his show would be just another musical comedy or acclaimed in the morning papers as a hit.

. Small wonder that Youmans was nervous as the cue was given which sent the orchestra into the music of "Hallelujah," the song which he hoped would "click" with the audience.

THE stage illumination dimmed as a spotlight picked up the rotund Negro mamy with apron and bandanna handkerchief who ambled to the footlights and swung into a song.

The audience leaned forward during the pause before the singer, apparently oblivious to her surroundings, crashed into the mighty chorus with all the religious fervor of the real Negro:

Sing Hallelujah, Hallelujah!
And you'll shoo the blues away;
When cares pursue ya,
Hallelujah!
Gets you through the darkest day,
Satan likes awaitin'
And creatin'
Skies of gray,
But Hallelujah; Hallelujah!
Helps to shoot the clouds away.

Stella Mayhew had made one of the greatest triumphs of her long and successful career, and "Hit the Deck" was destined to be one of the outstanding musical comedy hits of recent years.

"It was one of the greatest moments of my life," Miss Mayhew said on her arrival in St. Louis to play her original role in the Garden Theater production of "Hit the Deck," opening tonight.

"The song exceeded Mr. Youmans' fondest expectations. He could hardly prophesy that nightly audiences would demand from eight to 10 encores of this rousing spiritual syncopation that fairly lifted the audiences from their seats."

MISS MAYHEW'S following marveled at her characterization of the blackface role she played in "Hit the Deck." During the previous 15 years in which she had appeared only in whiteface, her friends had been lulled into forgetfulness that this seasoned performer had ever appeared before in blackface.

Then they remembered that the best characterization ever done by her was just such another role in the earlier days of her stage experience.

Stella Mayhew, who is a native of Pittsburg, educated in Toledo, made her professional debut at the tender age of 5 in Grafton, O., in "Rip Van Winkle," but it was some years later that she, in the role of old Aunty Lindy, in that good old-fashioned melodrama of the South, "Swanee River," first laid claims to distinction as a full-fledged character actress—and it was under a mask of burnt cork. So great was the success of "Swanee River" and its colored mammy as played by Miss Mayhew that both she and the piece toured the length and breadth of the land for seven years.

And as has often been the case, it was several years thereafter before managers would accept her in any other kind of part.

"Why, I just had to run away from the legitimate stage because I was such a hit, and hide away in vaudeville," she chuckled.

Then followed her successes in musical comedy in "The Show Girl," "The Man From China," "Comin' Through the Rye," "The Jolly Bachelors," "La Belle Paree" and a dozen others.

Miss Mayhew has established her reputation as a laugh-maker and she is quite satisfied with that distinction. She is a comedienne and she never wants to be anything else. "I believe one of the greatest gifts any human being can possess is that of being able to make people laugh,' she says. "That is why I am so contented and happy over my part in this busy life. There is nothing so pleasing or inspiring to me as to hear roars of merriment from the audience in front, and the greatest compliment of all is when your fellow players laugh at you as they stand about in the wings and listen."

A Voice From The Grave

First Talking Picture to Be Played After Star's Death Is on View This Week With Gladys Brockwell, Killed in Auto Accident, Speaking to the Fans in "The Hottentot"—Harry Rose Goes to Philadelphia—Some Current Examples of "The Show Must Go On."

By NIE.

FROM the Great Beyond a voice is talking to local picture fans this week. Movies have been shown of cinema stars after their death—seldom with any great amount of success, incidentally—but now, for the first time a talkie is being heard in which one of the leading characters is no longer alive. The picture is "The Hottentot" at the Ambassador and the actress whose voice comes from the grave is Gladys Brockwell. A few weeks ago, shortly after the completion of the film, Miss Brockwell was killed in an automobile accident in California.

It will be somewhat ghostly to see and hear her on the screen, more so than when Rudolph Valentino appeared, after his death, in "The Son of the Sheik." Valentino's film was silent one but in "The Hottentot" Miss Brockwell's voice will ring out with great clearness. The picture, too, is a comedy with the actress taking part in a great many farcical situations photographed at a time when she had no thought that death was right around the corner.

NOW it is an old tradition of the theater that the show must go on. The death of Gladys Brockwell more or less carries out that tradition in the picture field. Recently there played at the Grand Central here a film called "On With the Show" which more or less humorously depicted the backstage axiom that regardless of what happened the show must not stop. Just how true this unwritten law is obeyed, come what may, was strikingly illustrated here lately.

During Harry Rose's stage show at the Missouri, Jack Riano, an eccentric dancer, slipped from the footlights while doing a burlesque imitation of a tightrope walker. Losing his balance he tumbled head first into the musicians' pit 10 feet below. He struggled up, was hauled to the stage by the astounded Rose and continued his act to great applause, the audience believing his fall was part of the act. A few moment later Riano returned for a dancing bit in the finale. Then he collapsed. He was badly hurt and had to be withdrawn from the program for several days.

Again at the Ambassador a few days ago, a young dancing couple, Chilten and Thomas received a telegram that their baby had died. Almost crazed with grief they continued with their act four times daily until some arrangements could be made for a substitute team. Although urged by Charles Skouras to return home at once the couple did not depart until time for the funeral and then returned immediately to take up their fun making in such an elaborate manner that those out in front had no idea of their heavy hearts.

THE Missouri this week has gone into its straight picture policy, doing away with stage shows entirely. Just how the fans will react to the move remains to be seen. Loew's, downtown, has been doing the same thing for some time with varying success. With good pictures the theater has done good business, while the poor films have failed to draw. That, after all, is as it should be and the Missouri will find the same condition without doubt.

Harry Rose, the last of the Missouri's masters of ceremonies, has moved on to the Warner-Skouras house in Philadelphia where William Goldman, first manager of the Missouri Theater and one of the first, and greatest, picture showmen in St. Louis, is in charge. The Fox Theater meanwhile shows no signs of weakening on its stage show policy and will continue to supply Grand avenue with Fanchon and Marco revues and vaudeville acts along with its feature pictures.

RONALD COLMAN, star of "Bulldog Drummond," at Loew's Theater, was born in Richmond, Surrey, England, in a large family consisting mostly of boys. His father was a silk merchant in moderate circumstances; the only indication that any of the Colman boys might ever become actors lay in the fact that an ancestor of theirs had been a playwright and theatrical manager in eighteenth century London.

Educated at Littlehampton, Sussex, Ronald was first intended for the law and then for an engineer. He found little to attract him in either of these professions and was already beginning to hunger after the stage when the World War broke out and temporarily

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.

THE Hoboken dramatic experimentalists have quarreled and are now making legal faces at each other. Art and business made a sour mixture. Reviving the old time plays was a novelty and drew the curious for many months but after that they went to visit the wide open saloons and restaurants. When the beer fell off in alcoholic content the crowds fell away. And there isn't much left to The Seacoast of Bohemia any more—but a happy memory.

Everybody jokes about spinach and yet the restaurant men say it is one of the most popular dishes on the menu. And, incidentally, the most profitable.

In the recent hegira to California was an actor who had wintered in Florida and was tanned almost black. In the dining car he dropped down in a seat opposite a gentleman from the South. The gentleman withdrew in great hauteur in the middle of his meal.

The other day in Chicago I met one of the reputed bad men. It was my first close up of the real gangster with notches on his gun. He was soft voiced and his English was excellent. One could not help but be impressed by the softness of his well manicured hands. Because his record was made known to me in advance, I was conscious of the quick darting looks he gave around the room while talking. Otherwise he might be the chief executive of a successful corporation.

The East Side gangster in New York is generally a measly little rat—chicken breasted and undernourished. He is primed with drugs and kills from behind. The Chicago gangster may be as cowardly but, if the one I saw is representative, they certainly do not look it.

The Dutch Treat Club is composed of famous writers and artists who meet every Tuesday for lunch. Each week there is a guest of honor. Recently they asked Rudy Vallee, one of the recent town talks. Vallee failed to show up and it is perhaps just as well for most of the members, hearing of his highly exploited sex appeal, remained away. Nothing is so irritating to most men as a so-called "lady's man."

The brightest quip of the week from Abe Martin: "The feller that carries a baby like an overcoat never misses a circus."

I often wonder if the true value of friendship is not exaggerated. It seems to me the greatest favors I have received in life were from total strangers or mere acquaintances. The only person who ever went out of his way to show me how to make a profitable investment was a busy man I had known but a short time. The most cheerful and inspiring letters come to me from those I have never met. The most critical letter I ever received came from a friend of many years who has avoided me ever since. All of us like to accept friendship—but so few of us prove it.

Englishman arriving in "the states" have good reports of Ambassador Charles Dawes. Strangely enough they like him best for being himself. It should not be a difficult trait to be one's self. Yet it seems to be. And there is no place in the world where it is not welcomed.

Short shavings: Ziegfeld has another big hit in "Show Girl" . . . The Central Park Casino is not doing so well. . . . Only a few night clubs plan to reopen this winter. . . John Ringling is New York's sharpest bargainer in buying art. . . . Now they say the 18-day diet does more damage than keeping the flesh. . . . The most expensive paper knife on record is one of jade with a jeweled clock in the handle costing $1800. . . . Marie Dressler, who made a comeback in the silent movies, scored in a recent talkie. . . And there's still more life in the old girl yet! . . . The Scottie leads in sales in fashionable dog shops. . . . The full-dress suit makes a big comeback this fall. . . . The story goes a group of high-class tailors are furnishing them free to the social bell sheep. . . . And they expect the lesser sheep to follow. . . . They likely will. . . . Montague Glass goes out of his way to walk under ladders. . . Adolphe Menjou, whose future was in doubt with talkies, has scored in his first speaking venture. . . . Two big movie divorce cases are scheduled for the first pages soon. . . .

I have at last attained the last word in "sucker lists" and am receiving mysterious letters from China regarding a "hidden inheritance" of which I am the sole heir. My informant is "snadowed," but is leaving for San Francisco and will send me a letter with instructions from there. I am, goody-goody, to share in "the $15.000 investment Freiland Blair made in China and which has grown a thousandfold."

Come to think of it, maybe it's a swell ad.

Janney on several new light operas scheduled for the coming season in New York.

There is no doubt that the score of "The Vagabond King" ranks with the best composed by Friml, who had already given the stage "Rose Marie," "Katinka," and "The Firefly." The score is studded with such musical gems as "Only a Rose," "Love Me Tonight," "Tomorrow," "A Flagon of Wine," and, above all, the "Song of the Vagabonds." Post and his collaborator, Brian Hooker, relied chiefly upon McCarthy's drama for the libretto of "The Vagabond King." The story narrates how Villon, from the gutter, saw and fell in love with Lady Katherine de Vaucelles, kinswoman to King Louis XI, and how he won her.

The cast for the week follows:

Huguette du Hamel	Sibylla Bowhan
Guy Taberie	Florenz Ames
Louis XI	Wm. J. McCarthy
Francois Villon	Roy Cropper
Katherine de Vaucelles	Carolyn Thomson
Thibaut d'Aussigny	Pierre White
Captain	Wm. C. Gordon
Lady Mary	Grace Yeager
Noel le Jolys	Robert Betts
Oliver le Dain	Truman Stanley

IN "Hit the Deck," Virginia Smith will play the role of Looloo, with Sam Critcherson as "Bilge" Smith. In addition to these two and Roger Gray, the cast also will include Estelle Jayne, Georgette Caryll, Floyd English, James B. Carson, Edward Garr, Victor Casmare, Wayne Nunn, Ethlynne Bradford, James Marlow Jr., Gus Haley and others. The Gardenia chorus will be seen in several new dance numbers.

The production of "Hit the Deck" will be the seventh attraction of the Garden Theater's projected season of 10 weeks. Next week, beginning Sunday, Aug. 11, an attraction new to St. Louis will be presented. It is "Peggy-Anne," adapted from the stage success, "Tillie's Nightmare."

Another Victor Herbert composition, "Babes in Toyland," produced twice previously by the Municipal Opera, will be offered Monday night, Aug. 12, as the attraction for the season's eleventh week.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

By Helen Hurd

Jacqueline Logan Still Looking for A Good Picture Drama

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 3.

JACQUELINE LOGAN doesn't speak the regular movie language. Yet she's been in pictures since early in 1922. She has never had any adverse criticism that amounts to anything, and yet she has never "hit" one of the big pictures of the year. Producers find in her a consistent, capable performer, yet they have never given her anything particularly outstanding to do. She is a girl of balance and perspective, interesting to talk to, and extremely level-headed. So many times during what is generally known as an "interview" one listens to and watches the mental and physical gyrations of the "victim," when all the feeling is, "now when you have quit acting, I would like to know just what you really are like." Some stars will either profess no knowledge of books or music, beyond the latest theme song, or will discourse learnedly upon any subject which the interviewer decides to bring up with a "book-of-the-month" sort of knowledge. Behind Jacqueline Logan, however, is some background, and her conversational knowledge isn't superficial. In her career, she has been a newspaper writer, professional pianist, pipe-organ player, soloist, dancer, stage lead, and screen star. But she does not act off the stage. She can talk about books, because she has a working knowledge of books. She once wrote one. It was a good book, according to those who read it. But Jacqueline Logan is a procrastinator, and she put off doing anything bout it until the manuscript was lost. This desire to write harkens back to her reporter days on the Colorado Springs Gazette, when she was in college. Following the muse, she went to Scotts Bluffs, Neb., where she was assistant editor of the "Republic." It was after a year there that she decided to hit New York as a writer. But Gotham didn't want her as a newspaper woman. That is another story.

JACQUELINE LOGAN.

WE talked about music—the Bowl Symphonies, grand opera, singing lessons. Her mother was a noted soloist, having at one time been prima donna of the Boston Opera. Her mother teaches voice in Hollywood now, but not to Jacqueline. It's like having one of the family teach you to drive. She has studied voice for many years, and has kept up in her musical information, as well as her mi-mi-mis. She is an accomplished pianist and plays the pipe organ with credit.

Jacqueline was born in Corsicana, Tex., the same town that sent Mary Brian to the movies. Her father was a well-known architect, having designed many of the State buildings of Texas. He died while Jacqueline was quite young, and her mother moved to Colorado Springs, where she taught piano and voice, while her young daughter went to school.

JOURNALISM opened a locked door for Jacqueline Logan. She met the Shuberts, after she decided that jobs on newspapers in New York weren't handed out like cigar coupons. He picked her out among several applicants for a tryout in the chorus, but she informed him that she didn't want to be in the chorus—that she wanted to play the ingenue lead. She had never had stage or dancing experience, so Mr. Shubert called her on her ambition and put her in as the understudy to all the feminine parts. The show was a revival of "Floradora." After a few weeks, during which Jacqueline Logan made every minute count, the ingenue lead dropped out and she fell heir to the part. When the show went on the road Flo Ziegfeld picked her for his Follies of '21. Allan Dwan, then directing for Paramount, saw some pictures of her, and arranged to have her play opposite Monte Blue in "The Perfect Crime."

In less than six months, from small town paper work to leading lady for Monte Blue. She ascribes it now to ignorance, luck and nerve. Her good looks and sense might have helped. It seems a shame that she has never had a good picture story. She has been on every lot in Hollywood, with many directors and leading men, but it's just one of those things that happen out here.

SHE has played in many pictures which used animals, leopards, lions, bears and such. And never an eye bats when a jungle king stirs out of his lethargy, or is awakened by the lights to display a bit of temper. She tells one story of Oscar, the bootblack at Paramount, who has had parts in a number of pictures. This particular day, the tiger went on a rampage, and Oscar who was peacefully sleeping on the set, awoke to stare the beast in the face. He made a 10-foot wall in one, and when asked how he did it, he said he just prayed and was wafted.

Eight Ways to Lose a Husband Says Ruth Chatterton

EIGHT sure ways of losing a husband's love were outlined the other day by Ruth Chatterton, former stage star and now a popular addition to Hollywood's ranks of celebrities. Miss Chatterton's views on how to lose a husband were inspired by her role in W. Somerset Maugham's "Charming Sinners," a talking film recently seen in St. Louis, in which she is featured with Clive Brook, Mary Nolan and William Powell. She plays a wife who sees her husband of 10 years fall head over heels in love with her best friend and then saves her home by playing a game of "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

RUTH CHATTERTON.

Miss Chatterton classifies the marital errors of wives in this order:

1. The watching type of woman who constantly suspects her husgand's motives and turns his pockets inside out to find evidence of philandering.

2. The "how dare-you-flick-cigar-ashes!" woman who inspires a man to seek any place where he can loll in positive disorder.

3. The "why-don't-you?" wife who knows more about her husband's business than he does. She has a sister, the "Why-aren't-you?" woman, who can't undertand why Jim can make piles of money while her husband struggles along for a living.

4. The "well, I'm safely married now" type who lets her face become a series of chins and her figure a sacklike outline, because she has children to tend and cooking to do. And because she has a "marriage certificate."

5. The "why can't I have it?" woman who goads her husband into nervous breakdowns to satisfy her selfish desires; who has a closet full of frocks while the real money-maker in the family has one shiny suit.

6. The "what do you think Junior did today?" woman who plagues her husband with unnecessary details of what the kiddies did all day, the disposition of the woman next door and what a terrible headache she had after washing the breakfast dishes.

7. The "Oh, leave me alone" woman who is an iceberg where affection is concerned and repulses petting and accepts it as though it were just part of a job.

8. The "why can't I go with you?" woman who demands to attend every golf, baseball, poker or football game and who can't understand why women aren't permitted to attend stag functions and why her husband wants to go to these affairs when he knows she can't go along.

AS soon as you're starred, your troubles begin. At least, that's the opinion of many of the new stellar lights. Paramount came out at the convention in St. Louis with the announcement of several new stars, and now they are starting on their starring pictures. Evelyn Brent has a part that would suit to perfection the more mild type of actor like Mary Brian, but which gives the tragic Evelyn a pain. But the big boys must know what they are doing. Bill Powell fussed about his starring role, which made him the comedian with Hal Skelly as the straight man. But what is life in Hollywood without a few good rounds of argument. It's all in the game.

THELMA TODD, who deserted drama for the slapstick, will support Ken Maynard in his next picture. Which reminds us that Ben Turpin is coming back into pictures, and will be in Chevaliers newest. . . . Emelie Melville, on the stage for 70 years, has a part in "Illusion." She ought to know something about acting, and does. She was once Edwin Booth's "Juliet." . . . Another interesting veteran is Effie Ellsler, the original "Hazel Kirke," She played in "Woman's Trap," about which pre-view critics give very favorable reports. . . Regis Toomey is going over to Pathe to make "Rich People" with Constance Bennett. Robert Ames, who has just finished a picture with Gloria Swanson, will be the other leading man. . . Gloria has left for Paris for a two months' vacation. . . . Some of the soldiers in the English and German "armies" which were recruited for United Artist's "Three Live Ghosts," got overly excited at the Equity argument, and pulled two men out of a car carrying film, and destroyed several hundred feet of the picture. The first real uprising resulting from Equity, besides the meetings. . . No casualties.

solved all his problems for him. He immediately enlisted in the London Scottish Infantry and went to France.

He fought through the first battle of Ypres and well in 1916 when an ankle wound sent him home with a First Lieutenant's rank and a permanent discharge as unfit for further military service. An uncle offered him a minor post in the diplomatic service, and he was about to take it when a stage offer from Lena Ashwell, famous English actress, brought him back to his former ambition and a decision to go on the stage.

COLMAN rose rapidly to the position of a prominent juvenile, playing opposite Gladys Cooper, the English Ethel Barrymore, in "Damaged Goods" and "The Little Brother." After the war in England, times were bad, so young Colman borrowed the passage to the United States and came to seek his fortune on the stage in New York.

After several months of starvation, he got himself a part playing with Henry Miller and Ruth Chatterton. Henry King, the picture director, was in New York at the time looking for a leading man for Lillian Gish in "The White Sister." He saw Colman in this Miller production and offered him the place. Colman had had some experience acting in British pictures and accepted with some misgivings about giving up the good job he already had.

His work in "The White Sister" so pleased King that he was engaged to play with both Dorothy and Lillian Gish in "Romola" while the company was still on the Italian location. Samuel Goldwyn took notice of his work in "The White Sister" and engaged him by cable to go to Hollywood to play in "The Dark Angel" with which he was then planning to introduce Vilma Banky, his latest find, to the American screen. Colman and Banky were such a successful combination in this picture that their contracts were made permanent. Both have stayed under the Goldwyn banner ever since.

"Tarnish," "A Thief in Paradise." and "Stella Dallas" were other of his earlier pictures. As a co-star with Vilma Banky in "The Magic Flame," "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Night of Love" and "Two Lovers," he became one-half of one of the screen's famous romance teams. Loaned to Paramount for "Beau Geste," he turned in a magnificent performance as the eldest of the three Geste brothers. Consequently he was good and ready for individual stardom last year when Samuel Goldwyn decided to let his co-starring team go their separate ways. "The Rescue" was his first individual starring picture and "Bulldog Drummond" is the second.

Stratford Company To Appear Here Shakspeare's Play

THE Stratford-upon-Avon Festival Co., precisely the same its personnel as when on tour in Canada and the United States last winter, is now in the midst of its summer festival at Stratford. The company appears in what is called the Temporary Memorial Theater, a cinema house that will be used until the completion, two years hence, of the magnificent new Memorial Theater, toward the building of which Americans and Canadians, as well as English people themselves, have contributed most generously.

After its very successful overseas tour last winter, the company returned to England and played the regular spring festival, in celebration of Shakspeare's birthday at Stratford. Then followed a short provincial tour, with a return to the home theater on 1 for the summer festival, which will continue until Sept. 7. A night later the organization will sail for Montreal to open there Oct. 7, its second North American tour.

The coming tour will embrace nearly all the cities visited last season, and will include a week in St. Louis at the American Theater. As before, the proceeds from the tour will be devoted to the fund for rebuilding and endowing the Shakspeare Memorial Theater.

ARM BOARD ADVISES HOLDING WHEAT CROP

rowding of Markets Unfortunate at This Time, Government Agent Says.

y the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The ederal Farm Board indicated today that it believed wheat growers ould be wise to refrain from rowding the markets with grain at his time.

The Board announced it had ade no statement, and did not tend to forecast in any way, the roper price of wheat for this arket year. The Board described he present tendency toward overrowding terminals and transportion facilities as "unfortunate."

The statement, to which verbal mplification of any kind was reused, was interpreted as advice to heat growers to hold back their roduct in order that better disribution may be effected but withut the assumption on the part of he Board of any responsibility for he eventuality of wheat prices.

The text of the Board's statement today, given out after the losing of the grain exchanges, was s follows:

"The Federal Farm Board is eing besieged by telephone calls, elegrams and letters regarding vercrowded terminals and transortation facilities for the handing of wheat. This excessive rowding of wheat on to the maret has created a far wider spread etween cash wheat prices and rices of wheat sold for future deiveries than usually exists.

"The Federal Farm Board has ade no statement or forecast hatsoever concerning a proper rice for wheat for this market ear nor does it propose to do so, ut under conditions which exist his season whe nall reports agree n a substantial reduction in world upply as compared with last ear, it seems unfortunate to crowd wheat on to the market faster than existing facilities can handle it, resulting in cash prices which are much lower than contract prices for future delivery."

RAIN CHECKS FOREST FIRES IN CANADIAN PROVINCES

Downpour Helps Situation in Ontario and Manitoba, But Alberta Still Suffers.

By the Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Aug. 3.—Forest fires in Northwestern Ontario and Eastern Manitoba were thought to be definitely checked today after a night of steady rain which spread over the entire flame-stricken area.

Thundershowers in Southern Alberta last night were of great benefit to crops, but did not extend enough northward to be of any use in extinguishing the worst fires Alberta has suffered. Hundreds of firefighters are working there day and night.

Expected to Leave Within Two Weeks for Sandringham.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Because of continued good progress, King George has been able to transact business personally during the last few days and has spent several hours at his desk dealing with matters previously handled by his secretary. Although he has not been outside Buckingham Palace since his last operation, this was said largely to be due to unsuitable weather.

It is now thought the King will be able to make the journey to Sandringham within the next two weeks in order to carry out his original plans of spending the summer at Norfolk.

BRITTEN IS CONFIDENT OF ANGLO-U. S. PARLEY

Congressman in England Suggests Britain Could Scrap Some Warships for Parity.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Aug. 3.—Congressman Fred A. Britten, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, whose comment on the Anglo-American naval problem is naturally of interest to the British, declared on arriving on the Leviathan today that he had every confidence in the conversations now proceeding between Premier MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes.

If Great Britain scrapped seven or eight cruisers now under construction and the United States built all 15 cruisers authorized by the Britten bill, he said, the United States would still be more than 70,000 tons under Great Britain's gross tonnage. Some of the British cruisers are smaller than the American and if Great Britain showed any real disposition to reach parity he believed much more scrapping would be unnecessary.

"I think the leading powers of the world would look on the suspension of cruiser construction at this time by England as the first big move Great Britain could make towards naval limitation and America would certainly feel that the new government was intent upon reaching an equality arrangement with the United States as quickly as possible."

The Congressman, who is on his way to Geneva for the interparliamentary conference of Aug. 23, said that this would foster more kindly feelings between the two countries.

ASKS STATE TO HALT COLUMBIAN CLUB DEAL

Bailey Council, Knights of Columbus, Opposes Purchase of Building as Headquarters.

Bailey Council No. 981, Knights of Columbus, has invoked the power of the State government to oppose the purchase of the Columbian Club property, at Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, for $175,000 as headquarters for the 14 councils of the order in St. Louis.

Attorney-General Shartel is requested, zy the terms of a resolution adopted by Bailey Council Friday night, to apply for an injunction against the district officers of the order to prevent completion of the purchase and to obtain reinstatement of members who, it is charged, have been wrongfully suspended from the order by Joseph M. Ebeling, district deputy.

Bailey Council charges, in its petition, that Ebeling has suspended John H. Kissel, grand knight of the council; Robert W. Bira, recording secretary, and Richard J. Klohr, past grand knight, and that he has threatened to suspend Hugh J. Cassidy and Harry Sextro, and "if necessary," to suspend all the members of Bailey Council from membership, to take complete charge of that council's affairs and compel it to go on record in support of the purchase.

Censorship of Paper Alleged.

Klohr was editor of The Handclasp, publication of Bailey Council, and the council charges that the paper was so censored as to compel its suppression. This, Klohr said yesterday, was because matter unfavorable to the purchase of the club property was printed in The Handclasp.

The officials against whom the Attorney-General is asked to institute the suit are Luke E. Hart, supreme advocate of the Knights of Columbus; Thomas A. Langen, State deputy for Missouri, and Ebeling. They are declared, in the petition prepared by Bailey Council, to have formed a purchasing group known as Columbus Circle. They have purchased the property, it is alleged, with the purpose of conveying it to the order.

Because the Knights of Columbus is a fraternal beneficiary association, the petition says, an injunction proceeding can be instituted only by the Attorney-General. Bailey Council states that if its request is granted it will furnish the Attorney-General with competent local counsel and will defray the expenses of the litigation.

No Opposition to Resolution.

At the meeting of Bailey Council, 68 votes were cast for the resolution addressed to the Attorney General and none against it. Hart said last night that the purchase of the building would entail no financial obligation to Bailey Council, as that council did not intend to meet in the building. Only the councils meeting in the building will have to pay for it, he said. Hart declared that no officer of the order would profit by the purchase of the property. He declined to talk of other phases of the matter.

When the purchase was announced last April, it was stated that $250,000 would be spent for improvements and that recreation quarters for boys would be an important feature. The present Knights of Columbus building is at 3549 Olive street.

STABBED DURING GAME OF DICE

Tillo Westrich, 28, Taken to Hospital in Serious Condition.

Tillo Westrich, 28 years old, 4020 Westminster place, was taken to City Hospital in a serious condition early yesterday after police, called to his home, had found him suffering from stab wounds in the chest.

His brothers, John, 23, and Ray, 22, said the three had engaged in a dice game at the home of Andrew Lux, 2703 North Whittier street, and that Lux had attacked Tillo with a knife following an argument. Lux was arrested.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

CHARGE THAT SLAVERY EXISTS IN LIBERIA OFFICIALLY DENIED

International Board Will Investigate Faulkner's Allegations, U. S. Is Informed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Denial that slavery and forced labor conditions exist in Liberia was made in an official statement by Edwin J. Barclay, Secretary of State of the republic, submitted to the State Department today by Ernest Lyon, Liberian Consul-General at Baltimore and chief diplomatic representative in the United States.

The matter was brought to the attention of the United States Government because of the publication in American newspapers of charges by Thomas J. Faulkner, an American-born naturalized Liberian, who was an unsuccessful candidate for the Liberian presidency against President King. Faulkner is at present in the United States.

Secretary Barclay's statement said that the Liberian Government was appointing an international commission to investigate and report on labor conditions alleged by Faulkner to exist in the republic.

The Firestone Rubber Co. of Ohio at present is developing large rubber plantations in the republic and is employing native labor.

As Comforting and Reassuring as a Rainbow in the Sky

Until you need us, our service means little to you. But when a sudden emergency arises, then you will appreciate its full significance and efficiency.

The many fine details of the service we render blend into a dignified procedure, like the many beautiful hues of the rainbow in the sky—and as comforting and reassuring.

IN MEMORIAM

ARMBRUSTER, APPOLINNA—In loving memory of our dear mother, Appolinna Armbruster, who departed this life one year ago, Aug. 8, 1928:

You suffered hours, yes, hours in pain,
To wait for cure, but all in vain,
Till God alone knew what was best;
He called you home to give you rest.
We do not forget you, nor do we intend;
We think of you often and will to the end.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be,
But dear to our memory you ever will be.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN. (c)

FLYNN, MARY A.—In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, who departed this life one year ago today, Aug. 4, 1928. Sadly missed by

GLEN, FANNIE RAMKE—Treasured memories of our darling daughter who departed this life Aug. 4, 1923:

Years of sacrifices, little of play
Loving and giving and smoothing the way,
Strong in adversity, ready to do,
Faithful, unselfish and friend ever true.

Gone from us, but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year,
In our sad and lonely hours,
Thoughts of you are always near.
PARENTS.

From this world of pain and sorrow,
To the land of peace and rest,

SAYS MEXICAN CHURCH SETTLEMENT IS ONLY TRUCE

Editor Tells Institute of Politics Church Is Dissatisfied With Present Position.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 3.—The recent settlement between the Mexican Government and the Roman Catholic church is at best only a truce, an arrangement unlikely to endure, Ernest Gruening, author of "Mexico and Its Heritage," an extensive traveler in Mexico and editor of the Portland News, today told the general conference on Mexico of the Institute of Politics.

"It seems unlikely that this settlement can be permanent when one reviews the long-standing conflict between church and state and realizes how dissatisfied the church is with its present position," said Gruening. "By the present agreement the church has gained no concession of major importance.

"The impression is widely current throughout the United States that the Government, finding its task of keeping religion away from the people an impossible one, was forced to yield and came to terms with the church. That is incorrect.

"Some time ago the church objected to the governmental decree stipulating that the clergy must register and that only Mexicans by birth may be ministers of religion. The church ordered the withdrawal of the clergy from the churches, expecting to create a situation which would bring the Government to its knees.

"When that did not result, there was nothing for the episcopate to do but make terms, and this it very wisely has done; but, under the terms of the agreement, the clergy agrees to come back and register. Furthermore, religious instruction is not permitted in the schools. Such an arrangement is sure to irk the church in the end.

"Throughout Mexico I found little regret among Mexican Catholics over the absence of the priests, and one worshiper even said: 'No, I like it better without them. It's the first time I've been able to worship without paying for it.'"

Dr. Frank Tannenbaum, author of "The Mexican Agrarian Revolution," told the conference that the Mexican Government today rests on a much safer, broader, democratic base than it ever has before.

"That fact is due to the failure of the recent revolution," he said.

MAX MANNE RECOVERS AUTO HE 'GAVE' MISS PINKERTON

Uses Replevin to Get Machine From Woman Who Sued Him for $300,000.

The $1250 automobile which Max Manne, furniture manufacturer, "gave" Miss Alma Pinkerton before she sued him for $300,000 alleging breach of promise to marry, is back in the garage of the Artistic Furniture Co., which holds title to the car.

Miss Pinkerton had asserted she would not give up the automobile but Friday midnight a Deputy Sheriff accompanied by Karol Korngold, attorney for Manne, with a replevin attachment, removed the car from the garage behind the apartment at 826 Clara avenue, where she lives. She did not appear to protest. Yesterday the car was turned over to the furniture company of which Manne is president.

Machines that Run Prof. Russell Pyle's House

These Devices, Many of Which Were Invented by Him, Open and Close Windows, Turn on the Heat or the Electric Fan, Wash Dishes and Perform Other Necessary Household Tasks.

By M. W. CHILDS

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WILMINGTON, Ohio.

THERE is a most innocent-looking house on one of the tree-bordered streets of this town that contains various devices so ingenious and clever that they have the flavor of magic about them. The genie of the house is Professor Russell Pyle of Wilmington College and his slave of the lamp is electricity.

Over a period of years he has devoted his idle time to the business of putting this slave to work so that it will perform every possible task and thus simplify enormously the whole business of living. And he has succeeded to such a degree that electrical contrivances, many of them of his own devising, are employed in nearly every imaginable way to remove the need for human effort. There is even a machine that proved highly effective in rocking his small daughter's cradle when she was put to bed.

Like Ralph Borsodi, economist and author, whose experiment in a new way of living just outside New York City has attracted so much attention, Professor Pyle, by the very nature of his major interest in life, cannot look forward to any marked increase in his income nor to a corresponding rise in his scale of living. Therefore, he decided it was to his interest to put machines to work for him in such a way that economies of time and money could be effected. Moreover, he has an advantage over Borsodi in that he can devise his own machines, in many instances invented new ones when he found the need for them.

PROFESSOR PYLE, who is head of the physics and mathematics department at the college here, is primarily interested in pure research. He is at present working on a dissertation for a Ph. D. degree at Ohio State University, his subject being the dielectric constants of organic compounds. It has no practical application so far as can be seen now. But besides this interest in the abstract, Professor Pyle has a very decided bent for the practical. Ever since he can remember he has liked to work with machinery. Which is, of course, one reason for his astonishing house, in which electricity puts you to bed at night and gets you up in the morning. Foreseeing the need for some new device, he has started in to tinker, and the result has been satisfactory in most cases.

To be sure that everything would be just as he wanted it and to save money, he wired his own house when it was built six years ago. This was no amateur's job. At 15 he wired several houses at Bluffton, Indiana, where he then lived. And at 16 he had been offered a contract to wire a whole town, but he chose instead to enter Purdue University and study mechanical engineering.

Into this six-room house of his Professor Pyle put 1800 feet of wire and 60 plugs and switches. And he did it for $86—$200 under the price that electricians had made to him. In it he installed most of the electrical equipment that was then on the market—sweeper, iron, washing machine, pumping system for rainwater used in the bathroom, fan, bathroom heater, electric floor polisher and one or two other devices. Here, too, he was able to defeat the high cost of living in a way which those less mechanically inclined could not. He took second-hand equipment in several instances and by a little work and some new material restored it to a condition nearly as good as new. For instance, he got his washing machine without a motor for $20 less than the list price and installed a second-hand motor he had picked up at $6.50.

Professor Russell Pyle, Mrs. Pyle and their daughter, Sylvia Anne.

Before the birth of his daughter, Sylvia Anne, four years ago, he had an idea. He set quietly to work without telling his wife anything about it. One day, about three weeks after the child had arrived and the nurses had departed, he said to Mrs. Pyle: "Let's see how she likes this mechanical rocker." And he brought out of the basement what appeared to be an ordinary-sized traveling bag. He had previously built a crib and mounted it on four rubber-tired wheels. Now he proceeded to demonstrate the rocker.

The suitcase contained a motor and a gearing device which he proceeded to attach to the child's bed in such a way that when the current was switched on the crib was moved back and forth at a rate of about 30 times a minute in a range of about four feet. The whole thing was so timed that it provided the equivalent of the necessary human energy and the effect was the same as though a devoted mother had lulled the child to sleep. The mechanical rocker could also be attached to the child's perambulator.

Just at first Mrs. Pyle was dubious. A mechanical rocker to put her child to sleep seemed somehow unnatural. But Sylvia Anne was the deciding factor. It was soon discovered that she was effectively lulled to sleep in this way. Later, they learned that the faint purring of the motor had a soothing effect which was also conducive to slumber—the mechanical equivalent of the lullaby. Professor Pyle found this out when, by way of experiment, he detached the gear arm from the crib but left the motor running. To prevent any jarring when the bed was moved back and forth the gear arm was attached to the crib by means of a piece of an old inner tube.

The bed could be very easily wheeled about to any part of the house and the rocking device was compactly fitted into the case which Professor Pyle had made and could be connected to a wall plug in any room. About five minutes' running time was required to lull Sylvia Anne to sleep. And the whole thing, including the bed and the motor, represented an outlay of $14. There was just one objection. The children of the neighborhood were so fascinated by the mechanical rocker that they insisted upon trying it out, sometimes to Mrs. Pyle's inconvenience. If Sylvia Anne had not been such a good child the mechanical rocker would also have been useful in quieting midnight yells, but that was never necessary.

Professor Pyle in the act of opening the garage doors by pulling a small ring on the post which actuates a home-made electric door control.

Next, Professor Pyle tackled the matter of rising and dressing in winter in the discomfort of a cold room. The only alternative, apparently, was to get up an hour before the regular rising time, close the windows to give the furnace a chance and then shiver back into bed. But Professor Pyle rebelled against this. Again he had an idea. He took an ordinary, cheap alarm clock and fitted it to an electrical device so arranged that at the time set on the clock before going to bed the windows are automatically lowered and the hot-air register opened. Now the Pyles can sleep blissfully on until 7 or 7:30, always assured that they will rise in a warm room.

That is done in this way: The alarm clock establishes a connection by means of ordinary socket current with a helical coil, which in turn transmits a magnetic impulse that withdraws a metal support from the window, permitting it to slide down by the force of gravity. The window is, of course, balanced with special weights and springs, so that it moves very easily. The register is opened similarly, the same magnetic impulse being transmitted to a plunger which holds it shut. The whole process takes about 10 seconds, after which the current is broken by the simplest form of Faraday's ring. The operation is very simple and so is the apparatus by which it is effected. The alarm clock and coil are placed in a closet and a wire runs to the window casing, in which the adjustable supporting device is set. When it is in working order, the whole thing is so inconspicuous as to pass unnoticed. And its cost is negligible, according to Professor Pyle.

The same clock and the same device are employed in summer with the electric fan. If the Pyles are retiring at 11 o'clock, they set the alarm for midnight, and at that time it operates to turn off the fan, which has been left running in their bedroom.

TWO years ago, just before he bought a new car, Professor Pyle built his own garage. He set the foundations, and put up the frame structure in 10 days, and by so doing saved $100. Also, he incorporated several of his own inventions.

To drive into Professor Pyle's garage with him is an experience. He pauses about half-way up the drive and pulls a small ring attached to a post, which is partially obscured in the hedge. The garage doors swing open and Professor Pyle drives in. Once inside, he reaches over and touches three switches, which are within reach from the driver's seat. The lights of the garage go on, the outer doors swing shut and a small exit door opens. Then, just before leaving, he presses still another switch, which opens the side door of his house, but a few steps away. Once inside the house he presses a master switch, which shuts off all current to the house and garage doors, leaving them securely locked. All this sounds very complicated and expensive, but Professor Pyle claims that it is not.

Throughout the Pyle house there are many ingenious shortcuts to convenience. An electric light is automatically switched on when cupboard and pantry doors are opened and switched off when they are closed. Lights in closets are so arranged as to illuminate every corner and recess. Inevitably, one becomes curious about the Pyle electric light bill. It averages $2.50 a month, and is never more than $30 annually, and this at a rate which is about the average for the entire country, 9 1-2 cents a kilowatt hour.

And what he has achieved so far is just the beginning, Professor Pyle says. He has a half-dozen other de-

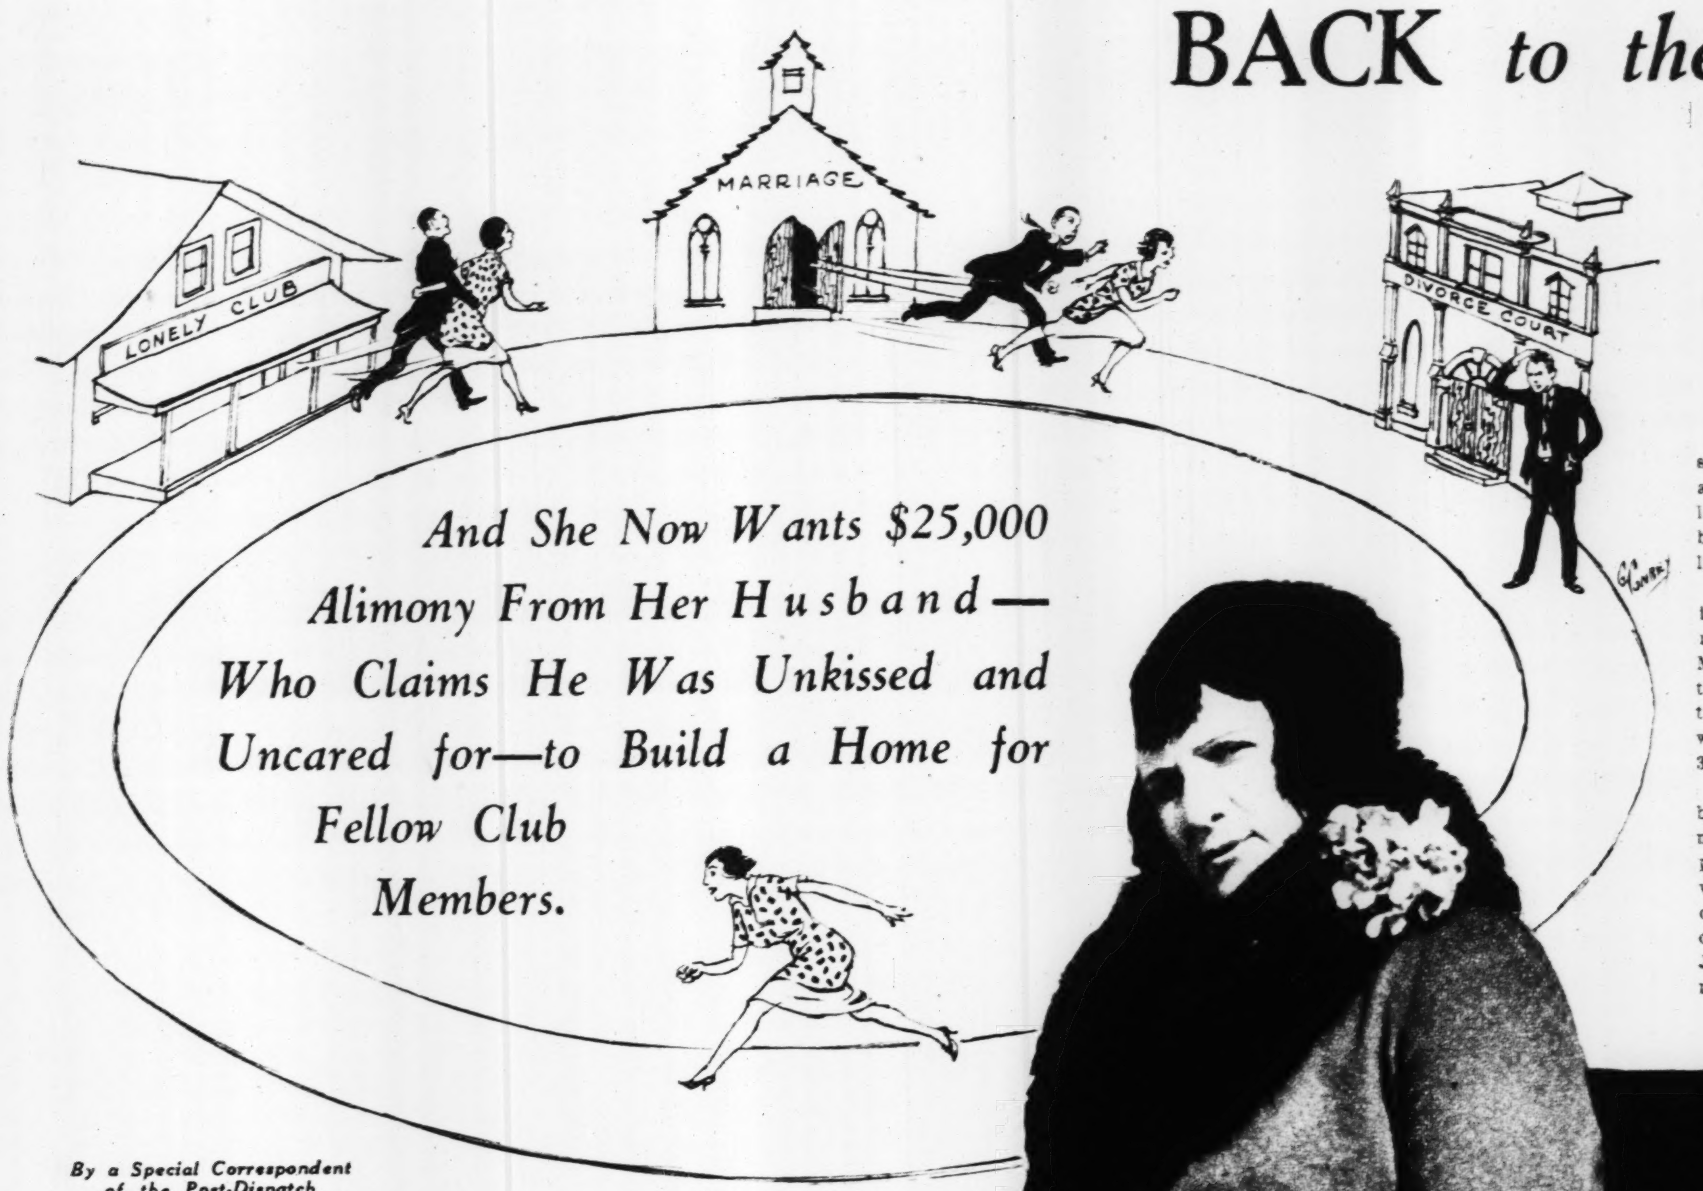
BACK to the LONELY CLUB for Mrs. Ethel Jones



And She Now Wants $25,000 Alimony From Her Husband—Who Claims He Was Unkissed and Uncared for—to Build a Home for Fellow Club Members.

DUNLAP, Iowa.

THE Goddess of Anti-Lonesomeitis, Mrs. Ethel Fritz-Chamberlain-McCord-Jones of these parts, is going to build a clubhouse for her Lonely Club—maybe. It all depends on Farmer James Jones, Madam's unkissed husband, and the divorce court at Council Bluffs, Iowa. If Madame gets the $25,000 she asks for from James, then the lonely ones get the clubhouse. If Madame doesn't, then the lonely don't either. Mr. Jones, who is fairly wealthy, rather healthy, and pretty wise, suggests that if his spouse gets the $25,000, it will be over the legally expired corpses of his attorney and himself.

Mrs. Jones is something of an expert on lonesomeitis, by her own admission, and something of an expert on marriage, by anybody's inference. She has been lonely so much, she says, that she has almost become hardened against it. And if Jimmy Jones speaks the truth, one might think she has become hardened against husbands, too.

Let us look into the history of Mrs. Chamberlain-McCord-Jones.

Years ago, as Miss Ethel Fritz, one of the belles of the neighborhood, she had her first contact with the ogre of loneliness. Some nights she would have a date, and some nights she wouldn't. On those nights she didn't, she would note other young women and other young men casting goo-goo eyes at each other as the old hoss made its ambling way down the old dirt road under the full Iowa moon. Was that conducive to lonesomeness? Rather!

There, then, was Madame Jones' first contact with the ogre. A sort of an overture. A scant introduction. For it wasn't long before Ethel Fritz, being the belle she was, was gathered to the arms of a promising young agriculturist named Herman Chamberlain. He drove away that lonely feeling, kept the roses in her school-girl complexion, courted her, wooed her, won her and honorably married her.

Tradition has it they were very happy. But, unfortunately, Chamberlain died. And then Madame got a taste of true, unadulterated loneliness.

FOR several years she went along her solitary way, saying she did not ever again want to marry. After a time she accepted the invitations of other young married persons, went to their parties and their dances and various other of their gatherings.

But, she felt, she was just an outsider. She was a wall flower, a spare tire. She got to the place where she began refusing invitations. Contrary to the accepted belief, the men (in the vicinity of Dunlap, at least) didn't seem to care for engaging widows.

It was in those dark days that the then Mrs. Chamberlain got her first inspiration for the Lonely Club that later was to blossom into being. But not yet.

For some 10 years ago Jesse McCord, a farmer so rich in soil that he was known to the Dunlapites as the "land king," began escorting the winsome widow to neighborhood dances. McCord was several years older than the lady. But this did not abash him. He had been sighing long, palpitating sighs, and Mrs. Chamberlain's eyes were observed, by such watchers as already smelled romance in the air, flickering and fluctuating in a manner that could only be ascribed to one who sees Cupid's chubby hands about to loose the bow.

And love came to Ethel and Jesse, and with it the sweetness of divine mating. In other words, they were married.

For a time the two not only seemed very happy, but really were. As McCord was a "land king" he was able to give his lady all that she desired in the way of material bounty. He talked of building a great home on the outskirts of Dunlap, of making this Iowa chateau the show place of the State. And Dunlap's social lights nodded their heads and murmured: "What a fine catch Ethel Chamberlain made."

It seemed she had. She gave every evidence of being delighted with her new husband. 'Tis said she babied him and honeyed him and darlinged him in public, and all that sort of thing, and friends declare she was just as nice to him at home. Mrs. McCord soon became the best-dressed woman in her part of Iowa.

Then came the farm depression of 1920. And just about the same time, a change in sentiment between the McCords. They were no longer seen together as much as before. Affection seemed to be cooling. There was less honeying, darlinging, etc.

The ghastly rumor became prevalent that Jesse McCord was land poor. Then, it was said that Mrs. McCord said Jesse didn't come home every night. Gossip had it the McCords were no longer living together, gossip declared she contemplated a divorce. And before long that ugly demon, gossip, was proved to be correct. Mrs. McCord filed her divorce papers, charging cruelty and non-support.

Well, she won her suit. And she got something like $20,000 in alimony. McCord pleaded that this was more money than he could possibly pay. But the court refused to change its judgment.

McCord's financial condition went from bad to worse after that. He has never been able to come back. Today he is one of those men who, traveling by excellent farms lining the sides of the roads, points them out and says, "See that farm? I used to own that."

For when his wife got her divorce, he said it broke his heart. He told his friends he didn't care whether he lived or not. For three years or so he assumed a perfectly indifferent attitude toward life, and one by one his fine farms were taken away from him. When he finally tried to overcome the debts that hung upon him, it seemed as though he had lost the determination to win his way to victory. Today the man who once was one of the section's most prominent citizens is a fellow of very small importance.

Mrs. Ethel Fritz-Chamberlain-McCord-Jones.

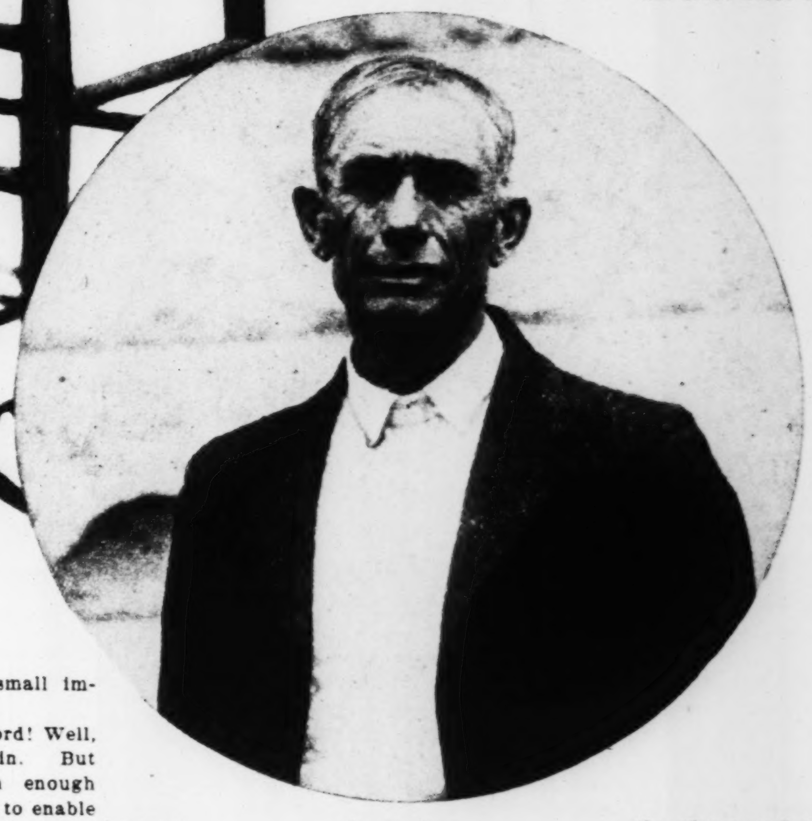
But Madame McCord! Well, she was lonely again. But as she had gotten enough money from McCord to enable her to live quite well, for a time at least, she spent considerable of her time visiting about. But always she returned to Dunlap.

Dunlap, however, was not as cordial as it had been. In the first place, McCord had been one of the most popular men in the county. Then, the men did not go about with her because town gossip would have had them paying attention to "that divorcee." Lonesome, more lonesome, still more lonesome. She thought about how lonesome she was, how lonesome many other persons must be. And the Lonely Club saw the light.

It started in a small way. At first it was limited to persons who were more than 40. About a year ago, Madame Jones, evidently coming to the realization that persons younger than that could likewise be afflicted with the malady, lowered the age to 30.

Her rules were simple. Each member must be single. Each member must be lonesome. Each member must pay $5 a year in dues—but, if that was too much, then one dollar would do, and if that was still too high, you could get by for nothing at all. Mrs. Jones explained that hers was not a money-making affair, that her only desire was to provide friends for the lonely. Two or three times a year she gave free banquets for the club members. The last one was held at Council Bluffs, early this year. Something like 150 men and women attended that banquet. They came from all parts of the Middle West, from Nebraska and Iowa, Kansas and Missouri and Minnesota, from even as far away as Ohio and Montana.

The club was not a matrimonial bureau, said Mrs. Jones. She did not desire to promote marriage. Her intention was to arrange correspondence so that four or five or six persons could correspond with each other. Or if two persons wrote from the same place, she arranged a meeting. True it is that occasionally a wedding was the outcome of some of the meetings she engineered, although that was not her purpose.



James Jones.

But what of Jimmy Jones? Was he a member of the Lonely Club? Yes! He explained that he never was a lonely widower, that he joined the club mostly for the fun he could get out of it.

Madame Chamberlain-McCord and Mr. James Jones were married at Council Bluffs on April 17 of last year. Mr. Jones, nearing 60, was some 15 years older than his bride.

This is his version of the story:

"Shortly after I joined, Mrs. McCord started making eyes at me at dances and places. She seemed unusually friendly all of a sudden and I had often wondered why.

"Whenever I'd come to Dunlap she'd generally see me on the street and suggest we go over and sit in the Postoffice or go to an ice-cream parlor. This went on for about three years. Then one day this spring she says to me, 'Jimmy, you and I ought to get married. You have lots of money and so have I, and we can get along nicely together. You have that big house of yours on the farm and we'll get along jim-dandy.'

"I DIDN'T take to this so very well because I was pretty old to be getting married. But I was sort of lonesome, too, and when she kept on insisting we get married I sort of fell for it.

"She suggested we go to Council Bluffs and keep the wedding secret. Why, before I realized what I was doing she had me before a judge and we were married.

"That wasn't so bad, though. But when about an hour after we were married I suggested we go home in my car, she said, 'No,' that we would each go to our own home till we announced the wedding.

"She wouldn't even kiss me and to this day I've not been kissed by my bride."

(Mr. Jones did say, though, that he had kissed the lady to some considerable extent before their marriage.)

"You see," Mr. Jones continued, "the general sentiment around Dunlap is that I've got a lot of money, but I haven't. Ethel fell for that story about me being a rich farmer, and when she found out that I didn't have so much she got mad and wouldn't live with me."

Mr. Jones said that occasionally his bride came out to his farm house. On such occasions, he related, he tried to induce her to come there and live, but she always put him off. He said she would telephone him and ask him to buy a rug or chickens or furniture, saying she was going to take them to his house and fix it up. Instead, he relates, she took them to her own home in Dunlap. He says he wrote numerous checks for her, at her request, in an effort to provide for her, because he really believed she meant to go out to his farm and live with him.

"She tried to say I promised her so many acres," said Mr. Jones, "if I married her. Then she called me on the phone and threatened to divorce me if I didn't sign the land grant. And I told her to go ahead and sue me for divorce, and that if she didn't come out and live with me I'd sue her for divorce."

So, a short time ago, Mrs. Chamberlain-McCord-Jones proceeded to Council Bluffs, took up residence there, and filed her divorce suit, charging desertion, cruelty and incompatibility.

It is her story that Jones refused to turn certain lands over to her, after they were married, as she claims he promised to do if she married him.

"I'll come out all right," says Mrs. Jones. "Old man McCord talked the same way before the trial, but there is still some justice for the lonely widows of this country. I'm confident that soon I'll be $25,000 richer, and the lonely widows and widowers of my club will be less lonely and discontented.

"Everybody is always trying to take advantage of a lonely widow woman." Still, "I haven't lost faith in mankind just because Jones has said nasty things about me."

vices in mind that he plans ultimately to work out. At present he is perfecting an electric dishwasher. He discovered at a time when his wife was ill that dishwashing is an extremely irksome task. The electric dishwashers he found on the market did not satisfy him.

Professor Pyle has never sought patents for any of his devices. He says the experience of a great-uncle had something to do with his attitude about patents. This great-uncle invented and patented a dozen devices, many of them now household commonplaces, but he spent a greater part of his life worrying over the fact that he had been cheated by cleverer men, who stole his patents through one subterfuge or another and exploited commercially the devices he had invented.

Furthermore, Professor Pyle is not interested in making any large sum of money. He is doing what he likes to do, and he has an adequate income, which is occasionally augmented by outside work. For example, the manager of a local movie house felt that his power was costing him too much. He called in three experts, who could find nothing wrong. Finally, he appealed to Professor Pyle, who very quickly discovered a fault in the generator. It was, he says modestly, only a matter of knowing the theory behind the practice of the average electrician. For this service he was paid a generous sum.

While he realizes that his is a special case because he is so mechanically inclined and has had such a wide range of experience, he is of the opinion that almost everyone could, if they tried, improve conditions of work and play in the home at very little cost. By the exercise of only a little ingenuity and effort.

"Although I am sometimes in need of ready cash," Professor Pyle says, "I don't see how I could be any happier even though I had a great deal of money."

THE BEAUTIFUL BRAGGIOTTIS PRODUCE ANOTHER ROMANCE

How the Grandson of Henry Cabot Lodge Won the "Most Picturesque Girl in Boston."

The beautiful Braggiotti sisters, daughters of the famous Lily Braggiotti, with Francesca in the center.

BOSTON, Massachusetts.

IT IS facetiously related that when young John Davis Lodge married Francesca Braggiotti a short time ago the broken-hearted debutantes were so numerous that they were able to get special excursion rates to Europe on a sort of "Forget Lodge" tour. The truth of that rather large statement may, of course, be subject to serious question, but it is a well-known fact that a great many Boston society girls did set their caps for the late Senator Lodge's grandson and, in considerable force, were bundled off to Europe by sympathetic mammas when he chose somebody else. His marriage to Francesca, it appears, was something of a surprise to society, though nobody seems to know just why it should have been unless it was because he was of the Cabot tribe, reputed to speak only to God, and she was a professional dancer.

Anyway, it doesn't really matter a great deal. The disappointed debutantes are forgetting rapidly, as they nearly always do, and Mr. and Mrs. John Davis Lodge are on their honeymoon in Italy. They are spending it at romantic Florence, a circumstance which is in harmony with the story of their courtship.

AS EVERYBODY in Boston society knows, Francesca Braggiotti was and is about the most colorful girl in the charming old town. It is quite readily admitted that she is dazzlingly pretty and dances like a dream come true. Of course, nearly all girls dance in one manner or another, but Francesca was rather remarkable in more ways than that of being a good dancer. She was, extraordinarily, a society girl who danced for a living and still managed to be accepted by society. She danced for more than one thing, too. She danced for the livings of younger and more helpless Braggiottis. Almost from babyhood she has managed the financial and social affairs of a large and motherless family. And, with the assistance of her sister, Berthe, has brought up a flock of seven younger brothers and sisters. She did it by running a dancing school and dancing, besides, on Keith's vaudeville circuit. It is doubtful if any other girl in Boston society could have got away with anything like that, because Boston is nothing if not conservative, and is decidedly shy of dancing teachers and vaudeville performers. Moreover, Francesca made a good many of her own dresses and trimmed her own hats. Between times, she taught her younger sisters to dance and helped her father give them music lessons.

John Davis Lodge was what society girls and their aspiring mammas term a "catch." He was a good-looking and eligible bachelor, all of whom are supposed to be "catches." Four years ago he was graduated from Harvard and was personally popular. He was said by authorities on such matters to be the handsomest man in amateur theatricals anywhere about. Upon graduation, he joined a few more exclusive clubs and studied law on the side, thereby establishing the relative importance of both in his life.

Francesca Braggiotti was busy supporting a family. He rushed her for months, and she went on about her work, never snubbing anybody. Then came Berthe's illness and death, which tragically interrupted her romance.

Berthe, it seems, had been ill for some time, but she and Francesca were determined that Gloria, their youngest sister, should have a coming-out party. The two sisters hired a country club for a big party and sent out hundreds of invitations. They say there was something glamorous and mysteriously lovely about Berthe that night. She wore white satin and looked very much like the great Florentine ladies Leonardo liked to paint. She seemed sad. Somebody suggested that she looked like a Mona Lisa.

When the party was over Berthe collapsed. She was taken to a hospital. She became delirious and talked only of being buried in Florence beside the grave of her mother. When she died, Francesca determined to carry out that wish, and did so. Berthe's body was placed in a vault until Francesca could save enough money for the trip to Italy. Then Francesca sailed alone to bury Berthe in Florence.

Francesca returned to Boston in December, and immediately her engagement to young Lodge was announced.

Society was astonished. Society girls were willing to admire the girl for her spunk and ambition and devotion to her family, but they weren't willing to accept her as a rival for one of their "catches." The wedding was in June, and James Cabot Lodge II came home from Paris to be best man.

The newlyweds plan to return to America in October and to live in New York. But, remembering what happened to Francesca's mother, society is speculating.

Francesca's mother was Lily Braggiotti, and her romance was lovely, too. She and her husband, Isadore, parents of Francesca, were a talented pair.

Lily was a Boston society girl, of a proud and haughty family, who eloped with the young Italian, Isadore, who was handsome and interesting, but poor as a church mouse. Following their marriage they sailed (like Francesca and her husband) to Italy. There they went to Florence to the Villa Braggiotti. They meant to honeymoon for a little while in Florence and then return to Boston.

BUT Lily never came back from that wedding trip. Time flew by and Lily found she was to become a mother. She decided then to wait and surprise her parents with a grandchild. So Isadore, who was a musician, took a few pupils and they settled down for the winter in Villa Braggiotti. Another summer came and another winter. Years passed and still they remained in Florence. Lily Braggiotti had nine children on her wedding trip. She died when the ninth one was born.

Thus, Lily never returned from her honeymoon. They buried her on a hillside in Florence, and all the city wept. Then Signor Braggiotti gathered his brood about him. He felt that never again could he give singing lessons in that villa where Lily had spent her honeymoon and died. They came to Boston and the father installed his children in a big, rambling house in Brookline. There he began to give music lessons.

The obvious thing, when the two oldest girls were faced with the need of adding to the family income, was to make something of their dancing. Berthe and Francesca talked things over and went together to see Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, founders of the famous Denishawn School. The Shawns, delightedly, accepted the beautiful sisters as pupils. And, before long, the Braggiottis opened a school of their own.

"We're set for life," they told each other happily. . . . But now Berthe is dead. And Francesca married. And that leaves Gloria, youngest girl of the family, to carry on alone.

The Whole Eaton Family Now Gathered in Hollywood

What Resulted When a Virginia Mother Worked for Her Children's Career Instead of Her Own.

Mary and Charles Eaton in the rear; Doris, Mrs. Mary Eaton and Pearl Eaton, sitting. Only Joe is missing.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

HOLLYWOOD, California.

THERE was once a popular children's story of the five little Peppers and how they grew. There were seven little Eatons but five of these grew to places of distinction in the world of the theater, which in this day includes both the legitimate stage and the talking movies. When the little Eatons started out there were no such things as talking pictures, so Mother Eaton hitched her kite to the lure of the real footlights and back-drops and not the celluloid version. But times have changed and the little Eatons have changed with them, which brings them all together again in Hollywood, grown up and famous.

There were lean days in Norfolk, Virginia, but through it all Mother Eaton held fast to her purpose of putting the kids on the stage. She had been a high-spirited girl who yearned to dance before the footlights, but the prejudices of her family had prevented her from having a career. So she jumped in and married, putting all the force of her thwarted ambition into the lives of her children.

They had lessons in dancing and dramatic art, and although she could not teach them, she did her part in seeing that they had nourishing food, and plenty of sleep; that their faces were shiny and clean and hair brushed to a brilliancy.

When Mother Eaton moved the family to Washington, District of Columbia, it was she who waited in the reception rooms of producers' offices, making engagements for Evelyn, Joe, Robert, Pearl and Mary. Doris and Charlie were not old enough yet. Little Mary, with the golden blonde hair, was the first to attract attention. She made her debut in 1912 as one of the children in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Afterward, with Pearl and Evelyn, she appeared in production after production. Then Mary and Doris went on the stage with Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird," Mrs. Eaton accompanying them. Evelyn stayed home and kept the rest of the family together. After they returned there were several years in New York when it was pretty hard to find engagements. Pearl and Evelyn got their first really profitable engagement in the Winter Garden. Mary was put in Kosloff's Russian Ballet School. In 1919 she was in "The Royal Vagabond." It was then Flo Ziegfeld saw her and wanted her for the Follies. She was in the Follies for three years, followed by a vacation in Europe, returning in 1923 to star in "Kid Boots." In the meantime, things were looking up for the rest of the Eatons as well. Doris and Pearl had numerous engagements in musical comedy, Evelyn in the Winter Garden. Charlie played John to Marilyn Miller in "Peter Pan." Joe and Robert had many minor stage roles. Robert rebelled a little at the idea of wanting to go on the stage. He wanted to be a soldier, and his ambitions were centered around West Point. Joe, the youngest, left the stage and went to the University of Pittsburg. Evelyn married and has children of her own, but the three girls and Charles continued in the way their mother had desired and worked so hard for. Gradually, with the change of times, the Eatons found their way to Hollywood. Charles was signed by William Fox, and is now a contract player at that studio. Pearl is the only woman producer in the business, having charge of all the dancing productions at RKO. Doris is dancing in "The Very Idea" at RKO. Doris is the young lady that introduced the famous "Doll Dance" to the world. Mary has just arrived, having finished two pictures in the east coast studios of Paramount, "Cocoanuts," with the four Marx brothers, and "Glorifying the American Girl." With the arrival of Joe, who yielded to the lure of being with the family and threw his cap and gown away and grabbed the first train west, the five little Eatons are together again. They have taken a big house for the summer and are all moving in together.

Mary Eaton.

And will Mother Eaton sit back and admire and feel satisfied with her job of making her children famous? Not quite. She will continue to be their severest critic, their inspiration; constantly urging them on, advising them, or, if advice doesn't work, insisting.

And that is the story of the five little Eatons and how they grew.

MONGOOSE Charged With Being an UNDESIRABLE ALIEN

IN THE role of attorney for the defense, George P. Vierheller, superintendent of the St. Louis Zoo, recently saved from summary execution by the Federal Government two of the rarest specimens in his collection of animals.

The situation was not without drama and a faint flavor of the movies—the innocent victims of the processes of the law, the threatening hand of the executioner and the last-minute stay.

Add to this the fact that Mr. Vierheller has become deeply attached to one of the victims and there are all the elements of stirring melodrama. The two under sentence of death were the common, or Egyptian, mongoose and the slightly larger water mongoose.

The Government objects to their presence in the United States, there being a special statute forbidding their importation, along with English sparrows, flying foxes and other fauna labeled as injurious pests. For two years the mongooses have been displayed here. Just how the Government finally got wind of their presence is something of a mystery to Mr. Vierheller and to George E. Dieckman, president of the Zoological Society. They had had no previous warning when one day a Federal customs agent from Chicago appeared with an order for the destruction of the two mongooses.

At present a stay of sentence has been secured through an appeal to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde. And until Secretary Hyde gives a final decision the mongooses will be allowed to occupy their cages in the Forest Park Zoo. In his letter Mr. Vierheller pointed out that a provision of the law allows importation of the animals if they are to be used for scientific purposes. And, in a sense, the two exhibited at the zoo come under this category. Furthermore, even if the appeal is denied, the mongooses will not be killed. Mr. Vierheller will send them to some zoo in Europe, an alternative permitted under the law.

The gray-brown water mongoose, from South Africa, is a most friendly animal. It looks like an extra large rat with bushy fur. When Mr. Vierheller stops before its cage, it stands upon its hind legs and behaves rather like a tame rabbit. If he puts his finger inside the cage, it gnaws at it playfully. But it is fully as deadly, when confronted with its natural enemy, the snake, as its first cousin, the common mongoose.

The latter is decidedly unfriendly. All attempts to tame it have been in vain. It is smaller than the water mongoose and a cinnamon-brown in color. The moment the door to its cage is opened it gives the long, angry, chattering cry which is characteristic, and bares sharp teeth. There were two of this species originally, a male and a female, but the latter did not live long in captivity. All three were purchased through accredited animal dealers, for about $40 each.

The mongoose in India and Africa performs a very definite and highly-valued service. For they destroy thousands of venomous reptiles, including the deadly cobra, which is the sworn enemy of the mongoose. As well, however, the mongoose kills birds. Mongooses were introduced in Hawaii during the last century to exterminate a plague of rats. They killed the rats, all right, and then proceeded to work destruction on other animal life necessary in keeping certain insect pests in check.

In India, particularly in the outlying provinces but occasionally even in large cities, mongooses abound. They often attach themselves to homes and become household pets. No one who has ever read "Rikki-tikki-tavi" in Kipling's "Jungle Book" is likely to forget the mongoose hero of that tale.

Rikki—so called because of the chattering call—adopts an English family in the story, newcomers and unaware of the danger to their small son in the presence of a cobra family, Nag, Nagaina and their nest of eggs in the garden. The story relates Rikki's encounters with Nag and Nagaina and how he saved the little boy's life and finally killed his two mortal enemies.

"If you read the old books of natural history," writes Kipling, "you will find they say that when the mongoose fights the snake and happens to get bitten, he runs off and eats some herb that cures him. That is not true. The victory is only a matter of quickness of eye and quickness of foot—snake's blow against mongoose's jump—and as no eye can follow the motion of a snake's head when it strikes, that makes things much more wonderful than any magic herb."

And here is the description of the fight in the bathroom of the house, in which Rikki kills Nag:

"Then he jumped. The head was lying a little clear of the water jar, under the curve of it; and, as his teeth met, Rikki braced his back against the bulge of the red earthenware to hold down the head. This gave him just one second's purchase, and he made the most of it. Then he was battered to and fro as a rat is shaken by a dog—to and fro on the floor, up and down, and round in great circles; but his eyes were red, and he held on as the body cartwhipped over the floor, upsetting the tin dipper and the soap dish and the flesh brush and banked against the tin side of the bath. As he held he closed his jaws tighter and tighter, for he made sure he would be banged to death, and, for the honor of the family, he preferred to be found with his teeth locked. He was dizzy, aching, and felt shaken to pieces when something went off like a thunderclap just behind him; a hot wind knocked him senseless and red fire singed his fur. The big man had been wakened by the noise, and had fired both barrels of a shotgun into Nag just behind the hood."

A Too Realistic Novel and the Tragedy It Caused

PRAGUE.

NO ONE can say with any degree of certainty whether the unfortunate Mrs. Stephen Gyorke was in fact the heroine of "The House of the Beautiful Angela," the latest novel of Michael Tamas, which has created a sensation in Hungarian literary circles as well as in the home town of Mrs. Gyorke. She asserted that Mr. Tamas in his story drew a grossly-distorted picture of herself, and sued him for libel. The author denied this charge most emphatically, and declared that his heroine was only an imaginary character. Whatever the truth may be, there is a shocking similarity between the final chapters of Mrs. Gyorke's romance of life and Mr. Tamas' novel. The beautiful Angela of the story commits suicide because her husband leaves her. Mrs. Gyorke shot herself in the heart a few weeks ago when her husband divorced her because of the scandal awakened by Mr. Tamas' novel.

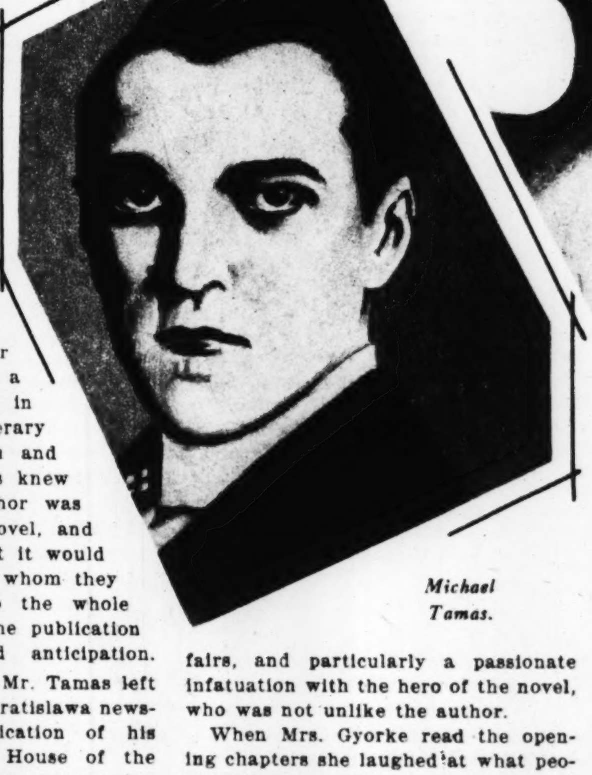
And with this dramatic climax one of the most unusual literary sensations and one of the strangest realized romances come to a tragic close.

Michael Tamas belongs to the younger generation of Hungary's men of letters. During the past few years he has published several novels which attracted attention, and critics prophesied for him a brilliant future. Living in that part of Czecho-Slovakia which is mostly populated by Hungarians, he has been regarded as the representative writer of the Hungarian minority in the Central European republic, and as such he has also played a not unimportant role in the political life of the country.

About two years ago the young writer spent a vacation of several months in Beregujfalu, a small town situated in a valley surrounded by mountains and forests. Naturally, the local intelligentsia received the celebrity with open arms. Invitations came to him from the leading families, and soon he was acquainted with the intimate details of the social life of the place.

ORIGINALLY he had not come to Beregujfalu to work. But the paltry, yet colorful and interesting, existence of the people interested him, and he began to consider the possibilities of a novel depicting the small-town life of the remote Czecho-Slovakian province. He had learned to know the land and the people and found excellent models for character study among his acquaintances in Beregujfalu.

One of the families he visited regularly was that of the Rev. Dr. Stephen Gyorke, pastor of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Gyorke, a young and unusually beautiful woman, interested him very much. Mrs. Gyorke, on her part, seemed to like the author, with whom she could talk about things more interesting than a new dress or a tea party given by a local light. She often accompanied the writer on long walks in the hills and invited him to her house two or three times a week. She told him many things about the lives of their mutual acquaintances—all excellent material for the new book—and confided some details about her own life. While this friendship was in progress Mr. Tamas began writing his book. In a few weeks he was able to send the first half of the manuscript to his publisher and simultaneously arranged for serial publication in a Hungarian newspaper in Bratislawa. The literary circles of Beregujfalu and the neighboring towns knew that the popular author was working on a new novel, and the rumor spread that it would deal with real people whom they knew personally. So the whole countryside awaited the publication with high-pitched anticipation.



Michael Tamas.

A few months later Mr. Tamas left Beregujfalu, and the Bratislawa newspaper began the publication of his novel, entitled "The House of the Beautiful Angela." The very opening instalments created a wide sensation in the province where the scenes were laid. Readers thought they recognized their friends, or even themselves, in the characters, and some said Mrs. Gyorke was the central feminine figure. The novel dealt with the love-life of this woman, picturing her as a Hungarian "Madame Bovary" who had innumerable surreptitious affairs, and particularly a passionate infatuation with the hero of the novel, who was not unlike the author.

When Mrs. Gyorke read the opening chapters she laughed at what people called resemblances. Later instalments aroused her indignation, and by the time the story reached its conclusion she found life in her home town unbearable. Even her husband, who adored her, tormented her with questions and suspicions. At last Mrs. Gyorke determined to bring suit against her one-time friend, the author, for criminal libel.

Mrs. Stephen Gyorke.

A trial of the extraordinary case was held in the city of Ungvar, and no little excitement was manifested throughout the Czecho-Slovakian province. The Court subpoenaed a number of witnesses, who told interesting details about the origin of Mr. Tamas' novel and supported the theory that the author had given a more or less true photograph of social life in Beregujfalu. Those who thought to recognize themselves in certain characters of the novel were indignant, and asserted that the leading feminine character of the story was pictured in such a way that everybody who read the story and knew Mrs. Gyorke had the distinct impression that "The House of the Beautiful Angela" depicted that lady's own personal conduct. One of the witnesses, a country doctor, testified that he had a conversation with Mr. Tamas during which the author told him that he was working on a new novel, something like a Hungarian "Madame Bovary," with real characters. The Court ordered some of the most telling parts of the novel to be read, particularly the chapter in which Angela becomes the mistress of the writer, Nicholas, and commits suicide when her husband at last discovers the deception.

The most dramatic moment of the trial came when Mrs. Gyorke herself took the witness chair.

"This novel of Mr. Tamas'," she said, "is nothing but a mean act of revenge on the part of the writer. From the first time he saw me he wanted to make love to me. He told me that I was the most beautiful woman he had ever met, that I had become his inspiration, and that he could not live without me.

"FIRST I laughed at this nonsense, but when he became insistent I told him that I did not wish to see him any more. Every word in that novel of his is a spiteful hint at me. He pictured me as a modern Cleopatra, a woman with innumerable love affairs, and one who loved the author passionately. Since the novel appeared I haven't been able to set foot on the street without being subjected to humiliations. People point at me, my husband no longer believes in me. That novel has ruined my life."

In vain Mr. Tamas delivered a long and earnest speech before the Court, declaring that "The House of the Beautiful Angela" was wholly the work of Guerrilla Warrior and Pal of Jesse James'

Jim Cummins, who fought with Bill Anderson and robbed, in moderation, with Jesse James.

JIM CUMMINS, Whose Early Life Was One of Battle, Bloodshed and Banditry, Reaches the End of the Trail, a Peace-Loving Old Man.

HIGGINSVILLE, Missouri.

"ASHES to ashes," says the preacher. "Crunk, crunk," goes the twisting automatic sound of the long metallic bars as they lower the coffin down into the grave. "Dust to dust," says the preacher. Six old men in the gray coats of the Confederacy watch the progress of the gray box, blink their eyes, glance at the "Stars and Bars" at the side of the grave. A few other old soldiers of the South lean heavily on their canes, or stand with hunched shoulders staring down into the pit. Another comrade gone. Another comrade finding his rest in this little burial ground clustered with simple headstones simply telling their story of names and dates and "Rebel" regiments. "Plunk, plunk, thud," goes the fresh dirt. Up, up it rises till it reaches the top of the grave; up, up it goes till the mound is finished.

Then preacher and veterans, the few visitors and officials, turn about and make their way up the road toward the houses and dormitories of Missouri's Confederate Veterans' Home, and you see the Stars and Stripes floating at half-mast to denote the passing of one of those who fought in the war between the states.

Almost as quiet and peaceful a funeral as there could be. No long strings of automobiles, no thumping bands, no great ceremony. Only a few prayers, the parson's sermon, a song or two. And the end of the story for Jim Cummins. Bandit Jim Cummins, the same Jim Cummins who'd ridden hell-bent for blood and thunder with Bill Anderson and his guerrillas at the "Centralia Massacre," who'd furnished the sanguinary inspiration for thousands of yellow-backed dime books, who'd galloped into tired Missouri towns in the days after the Civil War, shouting the "Rebel" war-whoop, shooting and yelling and cussing and riding off again as hard as he came, with his hell-raising cohorts, to some sequestered spot where Jesse James chose to split the loot.

The end of the story for Jim Cummins, the last of those spurred and booted brigands who answered to the roll call of the James gang.

Jim Cummins spent 82 years upon this earth. His life was stormy, stormy and strange. After his banditry, as a fugitive, he wandered about the West. He served as a Deputy United States Marshal, as Deputy Sheriff, he gambled. And between times he opened a cobbler's shop, worked on farms, plowed corn, threshed wheat, broke colts.

He was a great horseman. He broke more than 80 wild colts in less than two weeks for a farmer in Clay County, Missouri, after he had reached the age of 60. He was the finest horseman in Anderson's guerrilla band and none of that personnel was a tenderfoot. He was a dead shot, on the ground or on horseback, and Superintendent Fred Chambers of the Confederate Home tells me that Jesse James' brother, Frank, once said that Jim was the best horsetrader he ever knew. Mr. Chambers, however, points out that in Jim's palmy days it only took one man to make a horse trade.

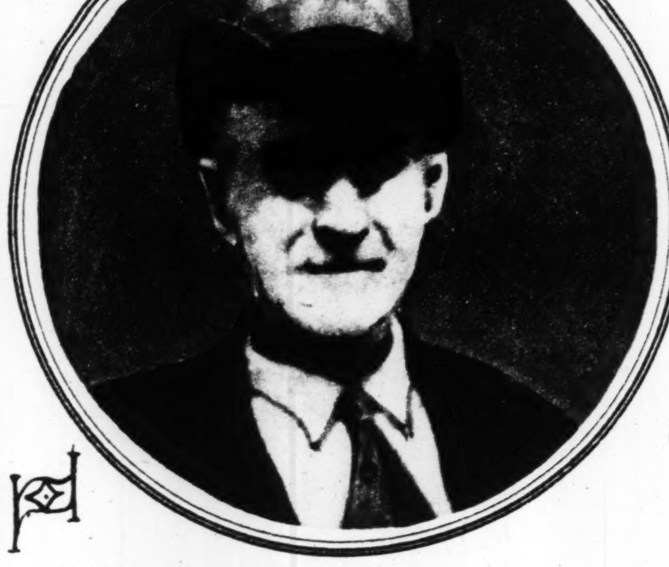
Some say that Jim killed 17 men during his lifetime. That may be true. What with the Centralia affair and other guerrilla massacres he may have killed a good many more than that. Others have said he never killed a man after the war. But they said that before 1909. He got into an argument with another inmate at the home in that year. The man cursed Jim, and Jim killed him with a blow of his fist. The next day he rode in the funeral procession, driving a team of mules hitched to a load of fodder.

Still, there is no reason to believe that the real Jim Cummins was a bloodthirsty fellow. That he fired his pistol with deadly effect in the days of his youth, when the war hysteria had him in its grip, there is no denying. But that he intentionally or willfully killed anyone after that is an extremely dubious possibility.

Frank James did not think he was very bad. "Jim is not at all dangerous," Frank once told a newspaper reporter, "and the State has no occasion to worry about him. I have no doubt that if he reads what I am telling you he will say, with a most comical drawl: 'Ya-as, there's that fool goin' to turn State's evidence. I'll kill the damn scoundrel as soon as I clap eyes on him—by God, I will!' But Jim won't; that's one of his little plays of fancy. He frequently has them, but he never kills anybody. It's too much trouble."

BUT then, in behalf of Jim's sanguinary reputation, it must be related that Jim and Frank were enemies. I am informed, by those who say they know, that Jim always considered Frank his chief among enemies. The enmity seems to have had its source in this: Not long after Jesse's death, Frank James came in to stand trial at Gallatin, Missouri, for the murder of two members of the train crew in the Winston train robbery. Five men were accused, including Frank and Jesse, but at the time of Frank's trial all were dead except, of course, Frank. The defense, denying Frank's presence at the holdup, tried to substitute Jim Cummins as the fifth man. Jim wasn't one of the band, in fact Jim was working on a Kansas farm at the rate of $1.50 a day when the murders were committed.

Naturally, Jim didn't like the accusation and he and Frank never made it up. They met once after that, but there was little love lost between them on that occasion.



Cummins as he looked shortly before his death.

I am informed that Jim once wrote: "The most charitable thing that can be said about Frank James is that he was an ordinary sneak thief, without principle, cowardly, vicious, a man of no soul of honor, who would sell or betray his best friend. Well, as I said, just an ordinary sneak thief."

That, according to unbiased reports, is a pretty prejudiced view of Frank James. Many of those who knew him considered him, outside his banditry, "a decent fellow."

James Robert Cummins was born in Clay County, Missouri, on January 31, 1847. Clay County, on the western border of the State, touching the Kansas line, was doomed, in a few years, to be the very center of the bloodiest section of the Civil War. There were no great battles fought there, no Gettysburgs or Shilohs, but the strife was, instead, of a peculiarly murderous kind, consisting of the forays of parties of Kansas Red Legs or Missouri guerrillas upon some defenseless hamlet or town and the cold-blooded murder of any of the residents the attackers could get their hands on. It was the region of Quantrill and Anderson, vicious before the war, who found the hostilities a convenient excuse for the exercise of their bloody propensities.

There is no reason to believe Jim ever served with Quantrill. But he did serve with Bill Anderson, and if there was any difference between the two, it would take a psychiatrist to discover it. Jim couldn't have been more than 16 or 17 years old when he enlisted under Anderson's banner. Jim, not being with Quantrill, wasn't at Lawrence, Kansas, when Quantrill, at the head of about 450 men, rode into the Kansas town on the morning of August 21, 1863, and on the excuse that he was a Confederate officer invading enemy territory and seeking revenge for Jayhawker invasions of Missouri, ordered every male citizen shot to death and the torch applied to the town. When it was all over, 182 had been murdered.

It was Bill Anderson's squad that did more killing at Lawrence than did that of any other of Quantrill's lieutenants. Sometime after this Bill Anderson broke away from Quantrill and proceeded to practice murder on his own.

So in September of the next year, the "Centralia Massacre" occurred. Jim Cummins was there and so was Jesse James. Anderson and his troop of 84 men attacked a railroad train at Centralia, Missouri, and captured 26 Federal soldiers they found on board. Then Anderson lined up his captives and had them shot.

But the day had just begun for him. Late that afternoon he combined forces with another guerrilla, George Todd, and not far from Centralia attacked a Federal command of 260 raw recruits. Within a short time more than 200 of the Federals had breathed their last. It is said that every time, in his later years, Jim Cummins thought about that day's work, he shuddered.

LATE in 1864, according to some evidence, Jim was sworn into the regular Confederate service. He joined General Jo Shelby's brigade, and there is some authority for believing that he rendered valuable service as a scout. If Jim did enlist with the regulars, that doesn't necessarily mean it was a matter of conscience. Already it was looking dark for the Confederacy, and a Union victory could mean just about one thing for hard-riding, pistoling guerrillas—a rope and a tree. There were plenty of irregulars enlisting in the gray ranks in those days with the hope that the cessation of hostilities would find them released as honorable prisoners of war.

But according to Jim's own story of his experiences at the end of the war, one is inclined to believe he was a guerrilla first and last and in-between. At about the time the war ended, according to his tale, he found himself in Texas with Jesse James and a lot of other erstwhile Andersonians, Bill Anderson himself having been killed by this time.

The band decided they'd better come in while the coming was good. They fought their way up through the old Indian country. They got into Missouri and in a fight with some Federals on the banks of the Missouri River, near Lexington, Jesse James was badly wounded in the right breast. The irregulars got away, carrying James with them. They hid in the brush for a couple of days and then, having gotten assurance from the Federal officials that they would be granted their liberty, just as regular Confederates, if they surrendered, they put James in a wagon, rode into Lexington and gave themselves up. Later they were released on the same basis as other captured soldiers.

The spot where Jesse was placed in the wagon for his drive of surrender is so near the present Confederate Home, here, that Jim Cummins could see it from the institution's grounds.

Records on file at the War Department show the capture of a Jim Cummins at Lexington, Missouri, on May 24, 1865, and further state he was a member of Shelby's brigade. The Shelby's brigade story may have been a convenient one for the surrendering guerrillas, or it may have been the outcome of an agreement with the Federal commanders, who were willing to lend a more pleasant touch to their records than, "Served with Bill Anderson." But, according to Jim's own version of the affair, it appears very dubious that he ever swore allegiance to the regular forces of the Confederacy.

The first great bank robbery of the post-bellum days came in February, 1866, the year after Jim Cummins surrendered. It was the robbery of the bank at Liberty, Missouri. Jesse James didn't participate in it, for Jesse was confined to his bed at the time. If Jim Cummins was a party to any of the more important banditry, it was at Liberty that he served. And it seems unlikely that he rode there.

Undoubtedly he was a friend of the James gang in its earlier days and it seems possible that he galloped and shot and shouted with them in some of their minor escapades. Robertus Love, author of "The Rise and Fall of Jesse James," who has made a close study of the careers of Jesse and his men, and who met Jim Cummins more than 25 years ago and talked with him and questioned him on several occasions, has never found any evidence that leads him to believe Jim was a first-class James gang hell-snorter.

That Jim was "wanted" there isn't any doubting. The State of Missouri put $5000 on his head, but Jim, living under an alias, managed to keep clear of capture. When he finally came in of his own accord, he found they didn't want him.

JIM'S western wanderings started in about 1870. They took him to, among other states, Texas, California, Wyoming and North Dakota. During these years it was that he practiced such varying duties as Deputy Sheriff and Deputy United States Marshal, as farm hand and cobbler.

He got back to Missouri about 1900. He went to Liberty, county seat of Clay, and saw the authorities. They told him they didn't want him and Jim found himself a free man. All in all, Jim, tired of being a fugitive, surrendered on several occasions. And each time he found he wasn't wanted. They say he was the only one of the former guerrillas, who later engaged in banditry, who was never captured, made to stand trial or killed.

A rough life, you may say, utterly bereft of the gentle touch of domesticity. Not entirely. Around about 1907 Jim met and married a widow, Mrs. Florence Sherwood, who was an actress. He even went upon the stage with her, but his acting career seems to have been short, even of less duration than his wedded life. For, I am told, they were divorced after about a year.

Jim Cummins never returned thoroughly to peace. Every now and then came something in the manner of battle, but it does not appear that Jim was entirely the aggressor.

HIS grandnephew, Raymond Cummins, a Kansas City attorney, told me the story of a Confederate reunion at Lone Jack, Missouri, near Kansas City, in 1905. Jim was there and so was Raymond's grandfather, William Cummins, who had served as a Lieutenant with the Confederate regulars. Raymond, then a small boy, had come along with his grandfather. Sometime during the day an elderly man arrived at the celebration and wanted to know if there were any former guerrillas present. Somebody pointed to Jim, and the newcomer walked up to him, announced he was a Kansan who had lost all his belongings in a guerrilla raid, and said he thought it was about time somebody made it up.

"Uncle Jim drew himself up," Raymond Cummins told me, "and said, 'Well, if they missed you, I'm here to finish up the job now.' My grandfather had on one of those old Confederate officer's coats, and I remember him lifting up his coattail and going for his hip pocket. Another old veteran who was in his old uniform pulled his saber from its sheath. But just about that time some of them grabbed the man from Kansas and hustled him out of town."

In 1907 somebody took a shot at Jim. It was at the scene of a guerrilla reunion in the western part of the State. Naturally, the business of the day was refighting the war. One of the veterans alluded to Jim as "the boy who held the horses." Jim, I suppose answered him in kind, and his accuser pulled a revolver and fired. But he missed Jim and the bullet struck somebody else in the toe, causing Jim to remark, "The damned old fool can't shoot any better than he could 40 years ago."

JIM killed a veteran at the Confederate Home in 1909, as we have related, and just a few years ago one of the veterans stabbed him.

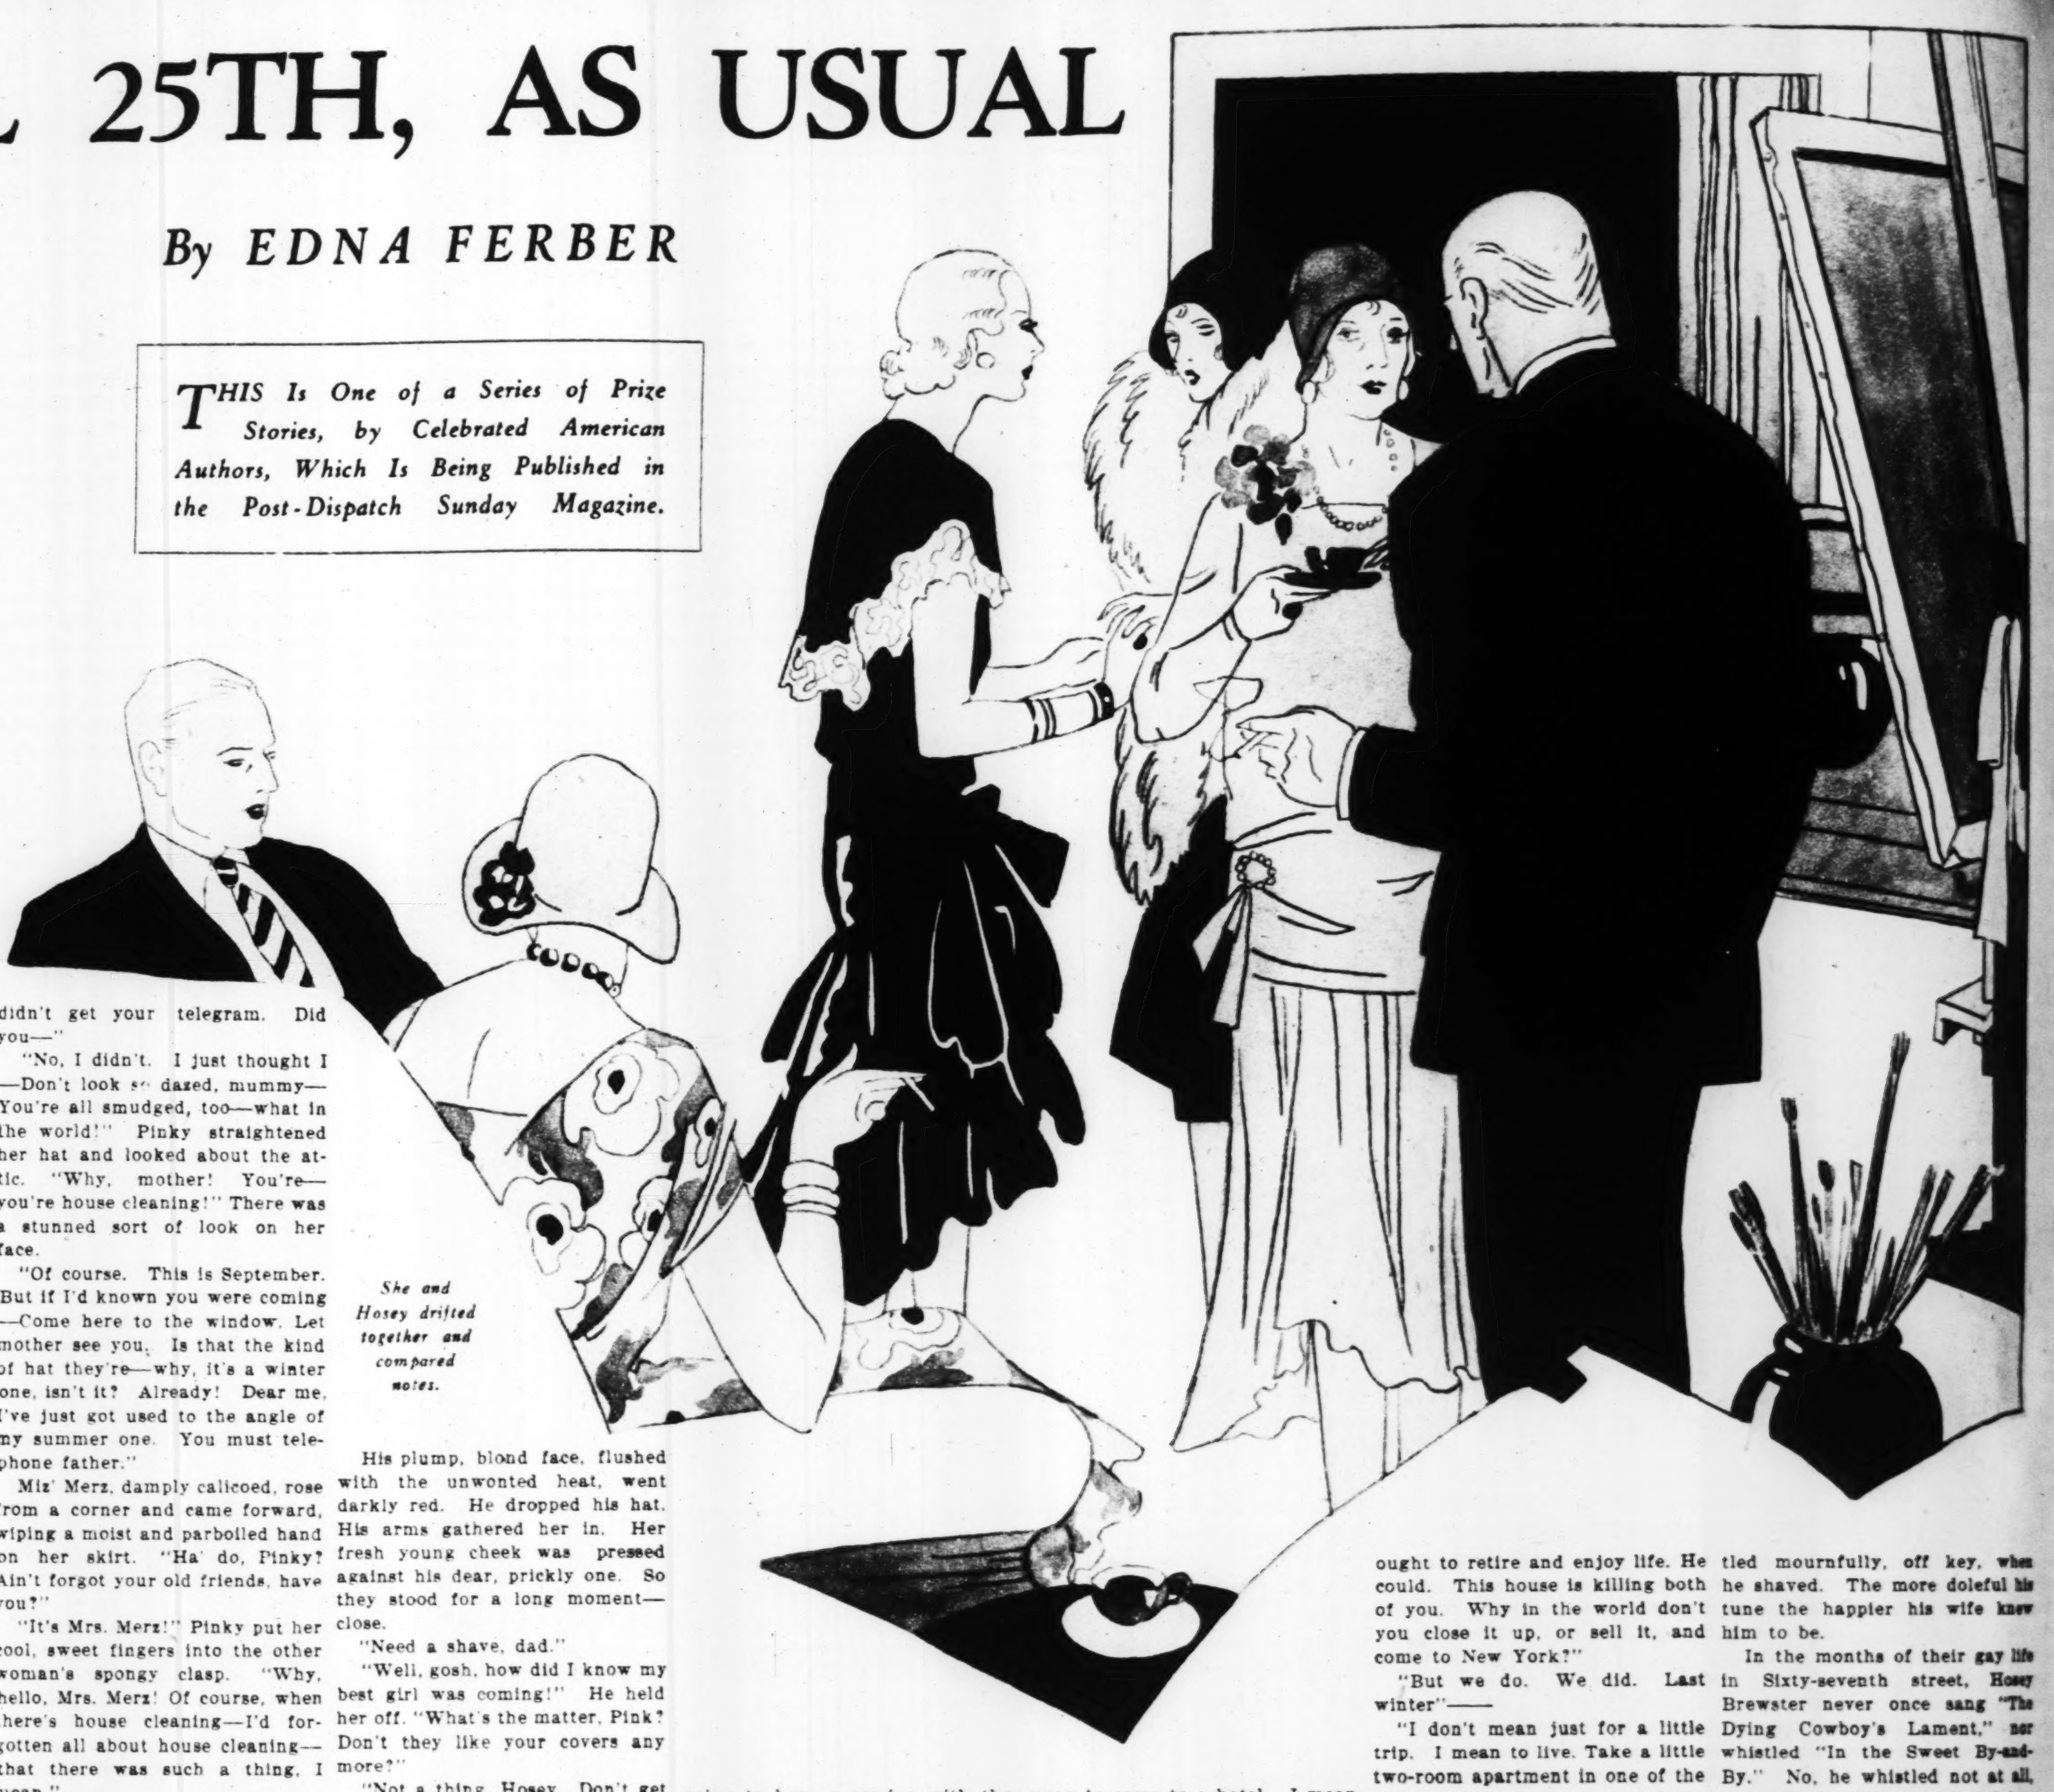
It was no fault of Jim's, Superintendent Chambers relates. The mind of one of the old veterans began to fail, said Mr. Chambers. This old soldier got to the point that if anyone took his favorite chair, he'd draw his knife on the occupant. The superintendent heard about it, and took the knife away. But the old man, who had lost all his teeth, found it difficult to go about his pastime of chewing tobacco, for having no teeth he couldn't "bite" off a chew, and having no knife, he couldn't cut off one. But he happened to be a friend of Jim Cummins, and Jim, all compassion, gave the old man a pocket knife of his own. Not long after, the veteran misplaced some article. It later was found in another place. But the old fellow, in his feebleness, accused Jim, whose quarters were near his, of taking it, and the next thing Jim knew the veteran had opened up the pocket knife Jim had given him and inflicted upon Jim a few nasty cuts. The wounds put Jim in the hospital at the home for awhile, but Jim recovered. He held no malice, for he realized his assailant's condition.

So lived Jim Cummins. Strife and adventure and blood from boyhood almost until death, a man who, it seems, was drawn into battle more by circumstance than by inclination. Mr. Chambers tells me that during the last eight years of Jim's life, the years that Chambers has served as the institution's head, Jim was an ideal guest, pleasant, interesting, always willing to co-operate, a kindly man and a gentle one. If Jim wished to die with his boots on, as some will tell you, his wish was not fulfilled. Old age brought him to the grave, slowly, peacefully, his last years spent in surroundings pleasant to him, comfortable surroundings at this excellent home, clean and sightly, that the State maintains for the veterans who fought for Jefferson Davis. Jim Cummins was the last of the guerrillas who held with James. His death becomes the anticlimax to one of the strangest periods of the nation's history.

APRIL 25TH, AS USUAL

By EDNA FERBER

THIS Is One of a Series of Prize Stories, by Celebrated American Authors, Which Is Being Published in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.



She and Hosey drifted together and compared notes.

MRS. HOSEA C. BREWSTER always cleaned house in September and April. She started with the attic and worked her purifying path down to the cellar in strict accordance with Article I, Section 1, Unwritten Rules for House Cleaning. For twenty-five years she had done it. For twenty-five years she had hated it—being an intelligent woman. For twenty-five years, towel swathed about her head, skirt pinned back, sleeves rolled up—the costume dedicated to house cleaning since the days of What's-Her-Name, mother of Lemuel (see Proverbs —) Mrs. Brewster had gone through the ceremony twice a year.

Furniture on the porch, woolens on the line, mattresses in the yard—everything that could be pounded, beaten, whisked, rubbed, flapped, shaken or aired was dragged out and subjected to one or all of these indignities. After which, completely cowed, they were dragged in again and set in their places. Year after year, in attic and in cellar, things had piled up higher and higher—useless things, sentimental things; things in trunks; things in chests; shelves full of things wrapped up in brown paper parcels.

Now don't gather from this that Mrs. Brewster was an ample, pie-baking, ginghamed old soul. Nor that Hosea C. Brewster was spectacled and slippered. Not at all.

THE Hosea C. Brewsters, of Winnebago, Wisconsin, were the people you've met on the veranda of the Moana Hotel at Honolulu, or at the top of Pike's Peak, or peering into the restless heart of Vesuvius. They were the prosperous Middle-Western type of citizen who runs down to Chicago to see the new plays and buy a hat, and to order a dozen Wedgwood salad plates at Field's. The Brewster house was honeycombed with sleeping porches and sun parlors and linen closets, and laundry chutes and vegetable bins and electric surprises, as your well-to-do Middle-Western home is likely to be.

That home had long ago grown too large for the two of them—physically, that is. But as the big frame house had expanded so had they—in tolerance and understanding and humanness—until now, as you talked with them, you felt that there was room and to spare of sun-filled mental chambers, and shelves well stored with experience, and pantries and bins and closets for all your worries and confidences.

By noon of this particular September day—a blue-and-gold Wisconsin September day—Mrs. Brewster had reached that stage in the cleaning of the attic when it looked as if it would never be clean and orderly again. Taking into consideration Miz' Merz (Mrs. Merz by the day, you understand) and Gussie, the girl, and Fred, there was very little necessity for Mrs. Brewster's official house-cleaning uniform. She might have unpinned her skirt, unbound her head, rolled down her sleeves and left for the day, serene in the knowledge that no corner, no chandelier, no mirror, no curlicue so hidden, so high, so glittering, so ornate that it might hope to escape the rag or brush of one or the other of this relentless and expert crew.

THE smell of soap and water, and cedar, and moth balls, and dust, and the ghost of a perfumery that Pinky used to use pervaded the hot attic. Mrs. Brewster, head and shoulders in a trunk, was trying not to listen and not to seem not to listen to Miz' Merz' recital of her husband's relations' latest flagrancy.

" 'Families is nix,' I says, 'I got my own fam'ly to look out fuh,' I says. Like that. 'Well,' s's he, 'w'n it comes to that,' s's he, 'I guess I got some—' " Punctuated by thumps, spatterings, swashings and much heavy breathing, so that the sound of light footsteps along the second-floor hallway, a young, clear voice calling, then the same footsteps, fleeter now, on the attic stairway, were quite unheard.

Pinky's arms were around her mother's neck and for one awful moment it looked as if both were to be decapitated by the trunk lid, so violent had been Mrs. Brewster's start of surprise.

"Pinky! Why—my baby! We didn't get your telegram. Did you—"

"No, I didn't. I just thought I—Don't look so dazed, mummy—You're all smudged, too—what in the world!" Pinky straightened her hat and looked about the attic. "Why, mother! You're—you're house cleaning!" There was a stunned sort of look on her face.

"Of course. This is September. But if I'd known you were coming—Come here to the window. Let mother see you. Is that the kind of hat they're—why, it's a winter one, isn't it? Already! Dear me, I've just got used to the angle of my summer one. You must telephone father."

Miz' Merz, damply calicoed, rose from a corner and came forward, wiping a moist and parboiled hand on her skirt. "Ha' do, Pinky? Ain't forgot your old friends, have you?"

"It's Mrs. Merz!" Pinky put her cool, sweet fingers into the other woman's spongy clasp. "Why, hello, Mrs. Merz! Of course, when there's house cleaning—I'd forgotten all about house cleaning—that there was such a thing, I mean."

"It's got to be done," replied Miz' Merz severely.

They smiled at each other then, the mother and daughter. They descended the winding attic stairs happily, talking very fast and interrupting each other.

MRS. BREWSTER'S skirt was still pinned up. Her hair was bound in the protecting towel. "You must telephone your father. No, let's surprise him. You'll hate the dinner—built around Miz' Merz; you know—boiled. Well, you know what a despot she is."

It was hot for September, in Wisconsin. As they came out to the porch Pinky saw that there were tiny beads of moisture under her mother's eyes and about her chin. The sight infuriated her somehow. "Well, really, mother!"

"Now, just what does that mean?" said Mrs. Brewster equably. "Take off your hat and coat, Pinky, but don't treat them that way—unless that's the way they're doing in New York."

Of course Pinky laughed then, and kissed her mother and hugged her hand. "It's just that it seems so idiotic—your digging around in an attic in this day and age! Why, it's—it's—" Pinky could express herself much more clearly in colors than in words. "There is no such thing as an attic. People don't clean them any more. I never realized before—this huge house. It has been wonderful to come back to, of course. But just you and dad." She stopped. She raised two young fists high in impotent anger. "Do you like cleaning the attic?"

"I've always done it, Pinky. And while they may not be wearing attics in New York, we haven't taken them off in Winnebago."

It was a cool and serene young daughter who greeted Hosea Brewster as he came limping up the porch stairs. He placed the flat of the foot down at each step, instead of heel and ball. It gave him a queer, hitching gait. The girl felt a sharp little constriction of her throat as she marked that rheumatic limp. "It's the beastly Wisconsin winters," she told herself. Then, darting out at him from the corner where she had been hiding: "S'prise! S'prise!"

His plump, blond face, flushed with the unwonted heat, went darkly red. He dropped his hat. His arms gathered her in. Her fresh young cheek was pressed against his dear, prickly one. So they stood for a long moment—close.

"Need a shave, dad."

"Well, gosh, how did I know my best girl was coming!" He held her off. "What's the matter, Pink? Don't they like your covers any more?"

"Not a thing, Hosey. Don't get fresh. They're redecorating my studio—you know—plasterers and stuff. I couldn't work. And I was lonesome for you."

Mrs. Brewster's light footsteps sounded in the hall. She wore an all-enveloping gingham apron. "How did you like your surprise, father?" She came over to him and kissed the top of his head. "I'm getting dinner so that Gussie can go on with the attic. Everything's ready if you want to come in. I didn't want to dish up until you were at the table, so's everything would be hot." She threw a laughing glance at Pinky.

But when they were seated, there appeared a platter of cold thinly-sliced ham for Pinky, and a crisp salad, and a featherweight cheese souffle, and iced tea, and a dessert coolly capped with whipped cream.

"But, mother, you shouldn't have"—feebly.

"There are always a lot of things in the house. You know that. I just wanted to tease you."

Father Brewster lingered for an unwonted hour after the midday meal. But two o'clock found him back at the cold-storage plant. Pinky watched him go, a speculative look in her eyes.

SHE visited the attic that afternoon at 4, when it was again neat, clean, orderly, smelling of soap and sunshine. Standing there in the center of the big room, freshly napped, smartly coiffed, trim, the very concentrated essence of modernity, she eyed with stern deliberation the trunks; the chests; the boxes all shelved and neatly inscribed with their "H's Fshg Tckl" and "Blk Nt Drs."

"Barbaric!" she said aloud, though she stood there alone. "Medieval! Mad! It has got to be stopped. Slavery!" After which she went downstairs and picked golden glow for the living-room vases and scarlet salvia for the bowl in the dining-room.

Still, as one saw Mrs. Brewster's tired droop at supper that night, there is no denying that there seemed some justification for Pinky's volcanic remarks.

Hosea Brewster announced, after supper, that he and Fred were going to have a session with the furnace; she needed going over in September before they began firing up for the winter.

"I'll go down with you," said Pinky.

And though she did not descend to the cellar until the overhauling process was nearly completed, she did come down in time for the last of the scene. She perched at the foot of the stairs and watched the two men, overalled, sooty, tobacco-wreathed and happy. When, finally, Hosea Brewster knocked the ashes out of his stubby, black pipe, dusted his sooty hands together briskly and began to peel his overalls, Pinky came forward.

She put her hand on his arm. "Dad, I want to talk to you."

"Careful there. Better not touch me. I'm all dirt. G'night, Fred."

"Listen, dad. Mother isn't well."

HE STOPPED then, with one overall leg off and the other on, and looked at her. "Huh? What d'you mean—isn't well? Mother." His mouth was open. His eyes looked suddenly strained.

"This house—it's killing her. She could hardly keep her eyes open at supper. It's too much for her. She ought to be enjoying herself—like other women. She's a slave to the attic and all those huge rooms. And you're another."

"Me?" feebly.

"Yes. A slave to this furnace. You said yourself to Fred, just now, that it was all worn out, and needed new pipes or something—I don't know what. And that coal was so high it would be cheaper using dollar bills for fuel. Oh, I know you were just being funny. But it was partly true. Wasn't it? Wasn't it?"

"Yes, but listen here, Paula." He never called her Paula unless he was terribly disturbed. "About mother—you said"——

"You and she ought to go away this winter—not just for a trip, but to stay. "You"—she drew a breath and made the plunge—"you ought to give up the house."

"Give up"——

"Permanently. Mother and you are buried alive here. You ought to come to New York to live. Both of you will love it when you are there for a few days. I don't mean to come to a hotel. I mean to take a little apartment, a furnished apartment at first, to see how you like it—two rooms and kitchenette—like a playhouse."

Hosey Brewster looked down at his own big bulk. Then around the great furnace room. "Oh, but listen"——

"No, I want you to listen first. Mother's worn out, I tell you. It isn't as if she were the old-fashioned kind; she isn't. She loves the theaters, and pretty hats, and shoes with buckles, and lobster, and concerts."

He did not even deny it. He seemed suddenly old. Pinky's heart smote her a little. "It's just that you've got so used to this great barracks you don't know how unhappy it's making you. Why, mother said today that she hated it. I asked about the attic—the cleaning and all—and she said she hated it."

He dusted his hands together, slowly, spiritlessly. His eyes looked pained and dull. "She did, h'm? You say she did?" He was talking to himself, and thinking, thinking.

Pinky, sensing victory, left him. She ran lightly up the cellar stairs, through the first-floor rooms and up to the second floor. Her mother's bedroom door was open.

A LITTLE mauve lamp shed its glow upon the tired woman in one of the plump, gray-enameled beds. "No, I'm not sleeping. Come here, dear. What in the world have you been doing in the cellar all this time?"

"Talking to dad." She came over and perched herself on the side of the bed. Mrs. Brewster looked incredibly girlish with the lamp's rosy glow on her face and her hair, warmly brown and profuse, rippling out over the pillow. Scarcely a thread of gray in it. "You know, mother, I think dad isn't well. He ought to go away."

As if by magic the youth and glow faded out of the face on the pillow. "What do you mean, Pinky? Father—but he isn't sick. He"——

"Not sick. I don't mean sick, exactly. But sort of worn out. That furnace. He's sick and tired of the thing; that's what he said to Fred. He needs a change. He ought to retire and enjoy life. He could. This house is killing both of you. Why in the world don't you close it up, or sell it, and come to New York?"

"But we do. We did. Last winter"——

"I don't mean just for a little trip. I mean to live. Take a little two-room apartment in one of the new buildings—near my studio—and relax. Enjoy yourselves. Meet men and women. Live! You're in a rut—both of you. Besides, dad needs it. That rheumatism of his, with these Wisconsin winters"——

Slow steps ascending the stairs—heavy, painful steps. The two women listened in silence. Every footfall seemed to emphasize Pinky's words.

Three days later Pinky left. She waved a good-by from the car platform, a radiant, electric, confident Pinky, her work well done.

"Au 'voir! The first of November! Everything begins then. You'll love it. You'll be real New Yorkers by Christmas. Now, no changing your minds, remember."

AND by Christmas, somehow, miraculously, there they were, real New Yorkers; or as real and as New York as anyone can be who is living in a studio apartment (duplex) that has been rented (furnished) from a lady who turned out to be from Des Moines.

Pinky had dinner with them the first night, and they laughed a great deal, what with one thing and another. After Pinky left there came upon them, in that cozy, little, two-room apartment, a feeling of desolation and vastness, and a terrible loneliness such as they had never dreamed of in the great 12-room house in Winnebago.

They lay very still in the little, stuffy, rose-colored room, and the street noises of New York came up to them—a loose chain flapping against the mud guard of a taxi; the jolt of a flat-wheeled Eighth avenue street car; the roar of an L train; laughter; the bleat of a motor horn; a piano in the apartment next door, or upstairs, or down.

She thought, as she lay there, choking, of the great, gracious, gray-blue room at home, many windowed, sweet-smelling, quiet. Quiet!

He thought, as he lay there choking, of the gracious, gray-blue room at home; many-windowed, sweet-smelling and quiet. Quiet.

They awoke next morning unrefreshed. Pa Brewster, back home in Winnebago, always whistled mournfully, off key, when he shaved. The more doleful his tune the happier his wife knew him to be.

In the months of their gay life in Sixty-seventh street, Hosey Brewster never once sang "The Dying Cowboy's Lament," nor whistled "In the Sweet By-and-By." No, he whistled not at all, or, when he did, gay bits of jazz heard at the theater or in a restaurant the night before. He deceived no one, least of all himself.

They saw Pinky less frequently as time went on and her feeling of responsibility lessened. Besides, the magazine covers took most of her day. She gave a tea for her father and mother at her own studio, and Mrs. Brewster's hat, slippers, gown and manner equaled in line, style, cut and texture those of any other woman present, which rather surprised her until she had talked to five or six of them.

She and Hosey drifted together and compared notes.

"Say, Milly," he confided, "they're all from Wisconsin—or approximately; Michigan and Minnesota, and Iowa, and around. Far's I can make out, there's only one New Yorker really in the whole caboodle of 'em."

"Which one?"

"That kind of plain little one over there—sensible-looking, with the blue suit. I was talking to her. She was born right here in New York, but she doesn't live here—that is, not in the city. Lives in some place in the country, in a house."

A sort of look came into Mrs. Brewster's eyes. "Is that so? I'd like to talk to her, Hosey. Take me over."

SHE did talk to the quiet little woman in the plain blue suit. And the quiet woman said: "Oh, dear, yes." She ignored her r's fascinatingly, as New Yorkers do. "We live in Connecticut. You see, you Wisconsin people have crowded us out of New York; no breathing space. Besides, how can one live here? I mean to say—live. And then the children—it's no place for children, grown up or otherwise. I love it—oh, yes, indeed. I love it. But it's too difficult."

This was the first woman that Mrs. Brewster had talked to—really talked to—since leaving Winnebago. And she liked women. She missed them. At first she had eyed wonderingly, speculatively, the women she saw on Fifth avenue. Swathed luxuriously in precious pelts, marvelously coiffed and hatted, wearing the frailest of boots and hose, exhaling a mysterious, heady scent, they were more like strange exotic birds than women.

Pa Brewster had taken to conversing with the doorman. That adamantine individual, unaccustomed to being addressed as a human being, was startled at first, surly and distrustful. But he mellowed under Hosey's simple and friendly advances.

"I guess you ain't a New Yorker, huh?" Mike said.

"Me? No."

"Th' most of th' folks in th' buildin' ain't."

"Ain't!" Hosey Brewster was startled into it. "They're artists, aren't they? Most of 'em?"

"No! Out-of-town folks, like you. West, East an' Californy, an' around there. Livin' here, though. Seem t' like it better'n where they come from. I dunno."

Hosey Brewster took to eyeing them as Mrs. Brewster had eyed the women. He wondered about them, these tight, trim men, rather short of breath, buttoned so snugly into their shining shoes and their tailored clothes, with their necks bulging in a fold of fat above the back of their white linen collar. He knew that he would never be like them. It wasn't his square-toe shoes that made the difference, or his gray hat, or his baggy trousers. It was something inside him—something he lacked, he thought. It never occurred to him that it was something he possessed that they did not.

HIS ruddy color began to fade. He took to haunting department-store kitchenware sections. He would come home with a new kind of cream whipper, or a patent device for the bathroom. He would tinker happily with this, driving a nail, adjusting a screw. At such times he was even known to begin to whistle some scrap of a doleful tune, such as he used to hum. But he would change, quickly, to something lively. The price of butter, eggs, milk, cream and the like horrified his Wisconsin cold-storage sensibilities. He used often to go down to Fulton Market before daylight and walk about among the stalls and shops, piled with tons of food of all kinds. He would talk to the market men and the buyers and the grocers, and come away feeling almost happy for a time.

Then, one day, with a sort of shock, he remembered a farmer he had known back home in Winnebago. He knew the farmers for miles around, naturally, in his business. For his family's sake the farmer had moved into town, a ruddy, bearded, clumping fellow, intelligent, kindly. They had sold the farm with a fine profit and had taken a boxlike house on Franklin street. He had nothing to do but enjoy himself. You saw him out on the porch early, very early, summer mornings.

HIS ruddy color began to fade. He took to haunting department-store kitchenware sections. He would come home with a new kind of cream whipper, or a patent device for the bathroom. He would tinker happily with this, driving a nail, adjusting a screw. At such times he was even known to begin to whistle some scrap of a doleful tune, such as he used to hum. He used often to go down to Fulton Market before daylight and walk about among the stalls and shops, piled with tons of food of all kinds. He would talk to the market men and the buyers and the grocers, and come away feeling almost happy for a time.

Then, one day, with a sort of shock, he remembered a farmer he had known back home in Winnebago. He knew the farmers for miles around, naturally, in his business. For his family's sake the farmer had moved into town, a ruddy, bearded, clumping fellow, intelligent, kindly. They had sold the farm with a fine profit and had taken a boxlike house on Franklin street. He had nothing to do but enjoy himself. You saw him out on the porch early, very early, summer mornings.

You saw him ambling about the yard, poking at a weed here, a plant there. A terrible loneliness for the soil he had deserted. And slowly, resistlessly, the soil pulled at him with its black strength and its green tendrils, down, down, until he ceased to struggle and lay there clasped gently to her breast, the mistress he had thought to desert, and who had him again at last, and forever.

"I don't know what ailed him," his widow had said, weeping. "He just seemed to kind of pine away."

IT was one morning in April—one soft, golden, April morning—when this memory had struck Hosey Brewster. He had been down to Fulton Market. Something about the place—the dewy fresh vegetables, the crates of eggs, the butter, the cheese—had brought such a surge of homesickness to him as amounted to an actual nausea. Riding uptown in the subway he had caught a glimpse of himself in a slot-machine mirror. His face was pale and somehow shrunken. He looked at his hands. The skin hung loose where the little pads of fat had plumped them out.

He thought, then, of the red-faced farmer who used to come clumping into the cold-storage warehouse in his big boots and his buffalo coat. A great fear swept over him and left him weak and sick.

The chill grandeur of the studio-building foyer stabbed him. The glittering lift made him dizzy, somehow, this morning. He shouldn't have gone out without some breakfast, perhaps. He walked down the flagged corridor softly; turned the key ever so cautiously. She might still be sleeping. He turned the knob, gently, tiptoed in and, turning, fell over a heavy wooden object that lay directly in his path in the dim little hall.

A barked shin. A good, round oath.

"Hosey! What's the matter? What"—— She came running to him. She led him into the bright front room.

"What was that thing? A box or something, right there in front of the door. What the"——

"Oh, I'm so sorry, Hosey. You sometimes have breakfast downtown. I didn't know"——

Something in her voice—he stopped rubbing the injured shin to look up at her. Then he straightened slowly, his mouth ludicrously open. Her head was bound in a white towel. Her skirt was pinned back. Her sleeves were rolled up. Chairs, tables, rugs, ornaments were huddled in a promiscuous heap.

Mrs. Hosea C. Brewster was cleaning house.

"Milly!" he began sternly. "And that's just the thing you came here to get away from. If Pinky"——

Truth—blinding, white-hot truth—burst in upon him. "Mother," he said—and he stood up, suddenly robust, virile, alert—

April 25th, as Usual

Mechanically, she began to unpin the looped-back skirt.

"When?"

"Now."

"But, Hosey! Pinky—this flat—until June"——

"Now! Unless you want to stay. Unless you like it here in this—this make-believe, double-barreled, duplex do-funny of a studio thing. Let's go home, mother. Let's go home—and breathe."

In Wisconsin you are likely to find snow in April—snow or slush. The Brewsters found both. Yet on their way up from the station in 'Gene Buck's flivver taxi, they beamed out at it as if it were a carpet of daisies.

At the corner of Elm and Jackson streets, Hosey Brewster stuck his head out of the window. "Stop here a minute, will you, 'Gene?"

They stopped in front of Hengel's meat market, and Hosey went in. Mrs. Brewster leaned back without comment.

Inside the shop. "Well, I see you're back from the East," said Aug Hengel.

"Yep."

"We thought you'd given us the go-by, you stayed away so long."

"No, sir-ree! Say, Aug, give me that piece of bacon—the big piece. And send me up some corned beef tomorrow, for corned beef and cabbage. I'll take a steak along for tonight. Oh, about four pounds. That's right."

It seemed to him that nothing less than a side of beef could take out of his mouth the taste of those fiddling little lamb chops and the restaurant fare of the past six months.

ALL through the winter Fred had kept up a little heat in the house, with an eye to frozen water pipes. But there was a chill upon the place as they opened the door now. It was late afternoon. The house was very still, with the stillness of a dwelling that has long been uninhabited. The two stood there a moment, peering into the darkened rooms. Then Hosea strode forward, jerked up this curtain, that curtain, with a sharp snap! He stamped his feet to rid them of slush. He took off his hat and opened his arms wide and emitted a whoop of sheer joy and relief.

"Welcome home! Home!"

They did little talking after that. By 5 o'clock he was down in the cellar. She heard him making a great sound of rattling and bumping and shaking and pounding and shoveling. She smelled the acrid odor of his stubby, black pipe.

"Hosey!"—from the top of the cellar stairs. "Hosey, bring up a can of preserves when you come."

"What?"

"Can of preserves."

"What kind?"

"Can I have two kinds?"

He brought up quince marmalade and her choicest damson plums. He put them down on the kitchen table and looked around, spatting his hands together briskly to rid them of dust. "She's burning pretty good now. That Fred! Don't know any more how to fire a boiler than a baby does. Is the house getting warmer?"

HE CLUMPED into the dining room, through the butler's pantry, but he was back again in a wink, his eyes round. "Why, say, mother! You've got out the best dishes, and the silver, and the candles and all. And the table-cloth with the dodads on it. Why"——

"I know it." She opened the oven door, took out a pan of biscuits and slid it deftly to one side. "It seems as if I can't spread enough. I'm going to use the biggest platters, and I've put two extra boards in the table. It's big enough to seat 10. I want everything big, somehow. I've cooked enough potatoes for a regiment and I know it's wasteful, and I don't care. I'll eat in my kitchen apron, if you'll keep on your overalls. Come on."

He cut into the steak—a great, thick slice. He knew she could never eat it. But she did eat it all, ecstatically. And in a sort of ecstatic Nirvana the quiet and vastness and peace of the big, old, frame house settled down upon them.

The telephone in the hall rang startlingly, unexpectedly.

"Let me go, Milly."

"But who in the world! Nobody knows we're"——

He was at the telephone. "Who? Who? Oh." He turned: "It's Miz' Merz. She says her little Minnie went by at 6 and saw a light in the house. She—— Hello! What? . . . She says she wants to know if she's to save time for you at the end of the month for the April cleaning."

Mrs. Brewster took the receiver from him: "The twenty-fifth, as usual, Miz' Merz. The twenty-fifth, as usual. The attic must be a sight."

Eventually he told her he could no longer endure the torment and that it would be better for both of them if they were to separate. Mrs. Gyorke packed her belongings and left the house.

THENCEFORTH she lived with her aged mother in Ungvar. Her relatives tried to persuade her to go on a trip abroad, or at least to live for a time in Vienna or Budapest, among people who did not know her and had never learned the tragic sequel to her romance. But all expostulations were in vain. She remained where she was, hoping against hope that her husband would change his mind and that a reconciliation could be brought about. But month after month passed and there came no word from Dr. Gyorke. A few weeks ago the couple were legally divorced, and the married life of Mrs. Gyorke was wrecked beyond repair.

The day on which the Court handed down the final decision in the divorce suit Mrs. Gyorke locked herself in her room. She told her mother that she did not feel well and wished to be left alone. A few minutes later the mother heard a shot. When she and the neighbors broke in the door they found her daughter lying in a pool of blood, holding in her hand a small revolver. It was the end of the beautiful Angela.

Among the wreaths placed on the casket at the funeral was one sent by her husband and another sent by Michael Tamas.

Anyone may have it...

the added CHARM of real cleanliness!

How different we feel when fresh from the tub! And how different we look... to others!

Our blood tingles . . . and gives us a glowing complexion. Our hands and nails look nice in a way they never do from any slap-dash washing.

Our hair, when shampooed, doesn't please only us. To others, too, it is soft and wavy and full of high-lights.

The kind of beauty called "elusive"

When we're anxious to look our best . . . which is really almost always . . . how short-sighted it is to "have no time for a bath."

They're so easy, when one gets the daily or twice-daily habit. And the rewards are so great.

For the bath brings us something in beauty and in personality that can be had in no other manner . . . that comes from no cosmetics jar or beauty treatment. Not poise only, or self-assurance. Not even the clearer, more vivid skin. Something nearer to charm, daintiness, and "the kind of beauty called elusive."

Having beautiful hands

While the hands and nails require more frequent cleansing, their pink-and-whiteness after the bath is proof of how attractive they can and should be kept throughout the day.

Soap-scrub them in warm water just as often as you get the chance. And push the cuticle back from the nails with the towel while drying. Little else is needed you'll find, except for occasional shaping and polishing, to keep nails looking their very best.

A single rule about complexions

Do you want a better complexion?... to keep the fine unblemished skin you already have? Then remember: if there is one complexion rule that never should be broken, it is this: Wash your face thoroughly, at least once a day with soap and water.

All skins are invisibly oily. "Dirt" is oily, as well as gritty and harsh. It takes soap and water, the real cleanser, to break this film; to again free the pores; to stimulate, invigorate, and re-condition the skin of your face.

Then there's our clothes

Clean bodies, of course, deserve clean clothes. It is only cleanliness of the 100% and all-around kind that makes one truly "dainty", "charming", or "exquisite".

And the best part of it is that clothes wear longer when not over-worn. It isn't merely in the case of silk stockings that perspiration, sharp-cutting dirt and plain over-soiling are the chief enemies to satisfactory wear. This applies to all our clothes.

The best rule here is also simple: Anything that is doubtful is definitely too soiled to wear.

The greatest beauty secret

Beauty! How we all strive for it! (And rightly so.)

But how prone we are to forget that the greatest aid to beauty, beyond all question, anyone may have: real cleanliness of body, face, hands, hair, clothes, and all the little details.

"I LOVE AUGUST"

The Month for Which New Modes of Torture Were Invented.

Donald Ogden Stewart.

I LOVE August. August is a great month for vacations.

Vacations were invented by King Krabb in 1478 A. D., as a result of a complete failure of the customary modes of torture on a heretic named Isidor Kalbfleisch. According to the story, they had tried everything on Isidor—the rack, the thumbscrews, the slow fire, the hot boot. Nothing had worked. Isidor just wouldn't confess. Finally, one of the younger inquisitors had a big idea, and, after several conferences, the Committee on New Ideas voted to try it out. So Isidor was taken down off the rack, his joints put back in place, and he was brought into the office of the Chief Torturer.

"Good morning, Isidor," said the Chief, with a cheery smile.

"Good morning, Chief," said Isidor, looking around for his nearest exit.

"Isidor," remarked the Chief, "you don't look very well to me."

"Well, to tell you the truth, Chief," said Isidor, "I don't feel very well."

"H'mm," h'mmed the Chief. "What seems to be the matter?"

"I don't know," replied Isidor. "I have headaches—and spots in front of my eyes—and my joints hurt. I tell you what, Chief," he continued, "I don't want to complain, you understand, but there's an awful draft on that rack—honest, I'm sneezing all the time I'm on it."

"Isidor," said the Chief, "what you need is a vacation."

Isidor trembled.

"Yes, Chief," he replied. "What's that like?"

"WE WANT you to take your family," said the Chief, "and go down to the seashore for a couple of weeks—maybe a month. Gets lots of fresh air—sunshine. We'll pay all your expenses, of course."

Isidor seemed a little doubtful.

"My family, Chief?" he asked.

"Of course," replied the Chief heartily. "You don't see nearly enough of them, man."

"I suppose I don't," agreed Isidor. "It's awful how quick you get used to this cell life."

The Chief pulled a bell-rope and his secretary appeared.

"You rang, Chief?" he asked.

The Chief nodded.

"Mr. Kalbfleisch here," he said, "seems to need a vacation."

"Yes, Chief," said the secretary, with a glance at Isidor.

"Have you any suggestions?" asked the executive.

"I know just the place," beamed the secretary. "Whistlehurst-by-the-Sea. Bathing. Boating. Modern comforts"—

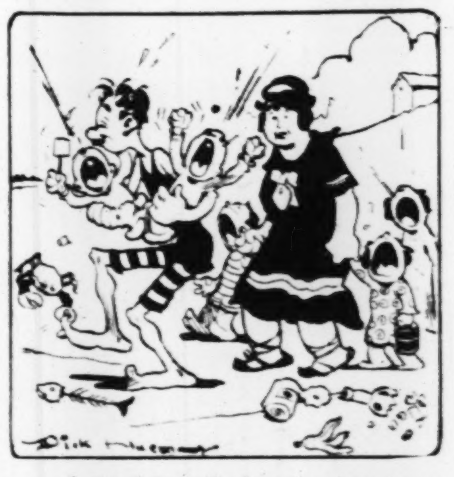
"All right," said the Chief. "Just fix Mr. Kalbfleisch up with time-tables and everything. Let's see, Isidor—you can leave tonight?"

"Well, yes," agreed Isidor. "But, Chief, are you sure"——

"Best thing in the world for you," interrupted the Chief. "Best thing in the world. Wish I could go with you—but that's what I pay for being an executive. Never have a moment." And he began fumbling with some papers on his desk.

"This way, Mr. Kalbfleisch," suggested the secretary, and with a final despairing glance at the Chief, Isidor followed.

Three days later he found himself at Whistlehurst-by-the-Sea—and his fears seemed quite ungrounded. Of course, it was raining, and the roof leaked a little—but what was that compared with the rack? And there was the beautiful ocean, where he could bathe—or, at least, there was the ocean, and if the beach out in front of his house seemed more than usually filled with rocks and old bottles, he had only to walk two or three miles to where there was quite a good beach. And he had with him his wife and nine children, whom he hadn't seen for 10 months, so all in all, Isidor began to think that a "vacation" wasn't such a bad thing after all.



A nice long walk along the shore.

The sixth straight day that it rained, however, Isidor began to have slight doubts. The children were beginning to become a little restless—in fact, they were getting just a bit on Isidor's nerves. There was something about 11 people in a small house smelling of mosquito oil that did not add to the general happiness of the group, and Hannah, his wife, didn't really look so very well with all those bites on her face and arms. And there was a certain mosquito who came up to Isidor's room every night just after he had gone to bed——

THE food, too, was not quite what might have been expected. Not that Isidor really minded having ants in his sugar and sand in the soup, but there seemed to be a certain damp staleness about everything, which Hannah explained by saying that the local farmers sent all their best stuff to the city.

It was a good explanation—but it made rotten meals. In fact, four of the children were taken sick with some sort of digestive trouble, and they, combined with the two who had been bitten by a spider, made quite a little hospital of the top floor.

On the ninth day the sun came out—and Isidor decided to take as many of his family as were still on their feet out for a happy day on the beach.

As I have suggested, there were certain disadvantages about bathing right in front of the house, but after a nice long walk along the shore (in the course of which Isidor cut his feet to ribbons) they reached the Whistlehurst beach—and there they found that some 4,198,274 people and 24,754,[illegible] horse flies had had the same idea. This made an average of 1,049,[illegible] people and 6,188,745 1-2 flies for each Kalbfleisch, so after a tasty lunch and a few cramps they walked back to their cottage, to find that Sammy and Fannie had got up out of bed in their absence and fallen over the cliff, breaking up Sammy's whole afternoon.

On the tenth day the Third Assistant Torturer of the local branch was somewhat astonished, upon opening up the torture chamber for the day, to find a man sitting upon the rack.

"Hey," he said. "What's this?"

"It's me," said Isidor, stretching himself out in the usual position. "I'm back from my vacation."

MABEL WALKER WILLEBRANDT TELLS

"THE INSIDE OF PROHIBITION"

Discusses All These Pertinent Points:

Is the prohibition amendment or law unenforceable?
Is there a legal substitute for prohibition of all intoxicating liquors?
Is prohibition enforcement effective, or is it losing in effectiveness?
Who is responsible for non-enforcement of the prohibition laws?
Are the best methods being employed in the enforcement of prohibition?
If not, why not?
Is it justifiable to take human life to enforce prohibition?
Should there be
- More "rigid" enforcement?
- More prohibition agents?
- More severe penalties?
- Searchers of homes?
- Use of the Army and Navy?
- Denial of jury trial to minor offenders?

What about the Jones amendment?
Are the wets winning?
Can prohibition be "sold" to the country?
What and where are the "big leaks"?
Can our cities be "dried up"?
Is the "noble experiment" of President Hoover doomed to failure?
Politics—enforcement's worst enemy.
- The boss and the bar-keep hold an old job under a new name.
- $84,000 in a dead Senator's safe deposit is inherited by the Party.

Corrupt officials and Canadian indifference.
Foolish drives.
When Canada co-operated.
Interdepartmental jealousy.
The big leaks.
- Bootlegging by Federal "Permission."
- The industrial alcohol "Steam-Roller."
- The "Rotten Permit System."
- Fifty thousand gallons of "perfume" that went astray.
- Enforcement officers hamstrung.
- $100,000 in a safe deposit.

The beer leaks.
- What's all the beer-shooting for?
- Breweries which wanted to be good.
- Anti-Saloon League protects the beer runners.
- Votes and schooners.
- Near-beer and needles.

Liquor and politics.
- A bootlegger king sends an Ambassador to the President.
- Politics appoints a collector and gets a distillery.
- The whisky ring calls in a cabinet officer.
- 30,000 gallons of whisky go wrong, one truck-driver goes to jail and one lawyer goes to Congress.
- Are Congressmen above the Law?

How wet is dry America?
- Production and consumption of alcoholic liquors before and after Prohibition.
- Comparative ease of securing a drink before and after.
- The Saturday night drunk.
- The cocktail shaker in the spotlight.
- The brass rail and "the bottle in the letter file."
- Wet Sunday at the Country Club and "blue" Monday in the factory.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT SAYS:

About Prohibition Killings

"If I thought that enforcement of the prohibition law hereafter would necessarily entail the continued killing and other acts of violence, and the outrage of private rights of persons and property that have occurred in the past, I would unqualifiedly demand the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the laws enacted thereunder."

About Liquor and Politics

"The influence of liquor and politics begins down in the city wards and country districts. But it extends, if it can, up to the Cabinet and White House."

About Prohibition Personnel

"It was my opinion in 1921, and it still is, that the Government is committing a crime against the public generally when it pins the badge of police authority and hands a gun to a man of uncertain character, limited intelligence, and without giving him any systematic training for the performance of duties that involve the rights and possibly the lives of citizens."

Prohibition!

Not since the days of slavery has a question so stirred the minds and emotions of people all over the United States. The issue has been debated in speak-easies and in the Senate. The controversy has raged not only on the merits of Prohibition, but has extended to heated discussion of the methods of its enforcement.

But in all the millions of words that have been spoken and written on the subject, many interesting and important facts never have been disclosed.

The Facts About Prohibition . . .

Now, at last, the real story of Prohibition conditions is to be told. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, for 8 years Assistant Attorney-General in charge of enforcement, will tell it in "The Inside of Prohibition," beginning tomorrow in the Post-Dispatch.

. . . Told From the Inside

Mrs. Willebrandt's story is outspoken. Frankly, and without fear, she quotes names, places and figures. The cases she relates came under her personal observation; the conclusions she draws are based upon her unusual knowledge of the subject.

Prohibition in St. Louis

Mrs. Willebrandt gives particular emphasis to the Remus and Jack Daniel Distillery case and the Heber Nations trials, the two most spectacular cases that have occurred in St. Louis.

"The Inside of Prohibition" is not propaganda. Mrs. Willebrandt is concerned only with giving an honest, vivid picture of all phases of Prohibition conditions. As such, her story should interest every reader, no matter what his personal views may be.

Remember, the enlightening story of "The Inside of Prohibition" will be published in daily installments, beginning tomorrow in the Daily Magazine of the

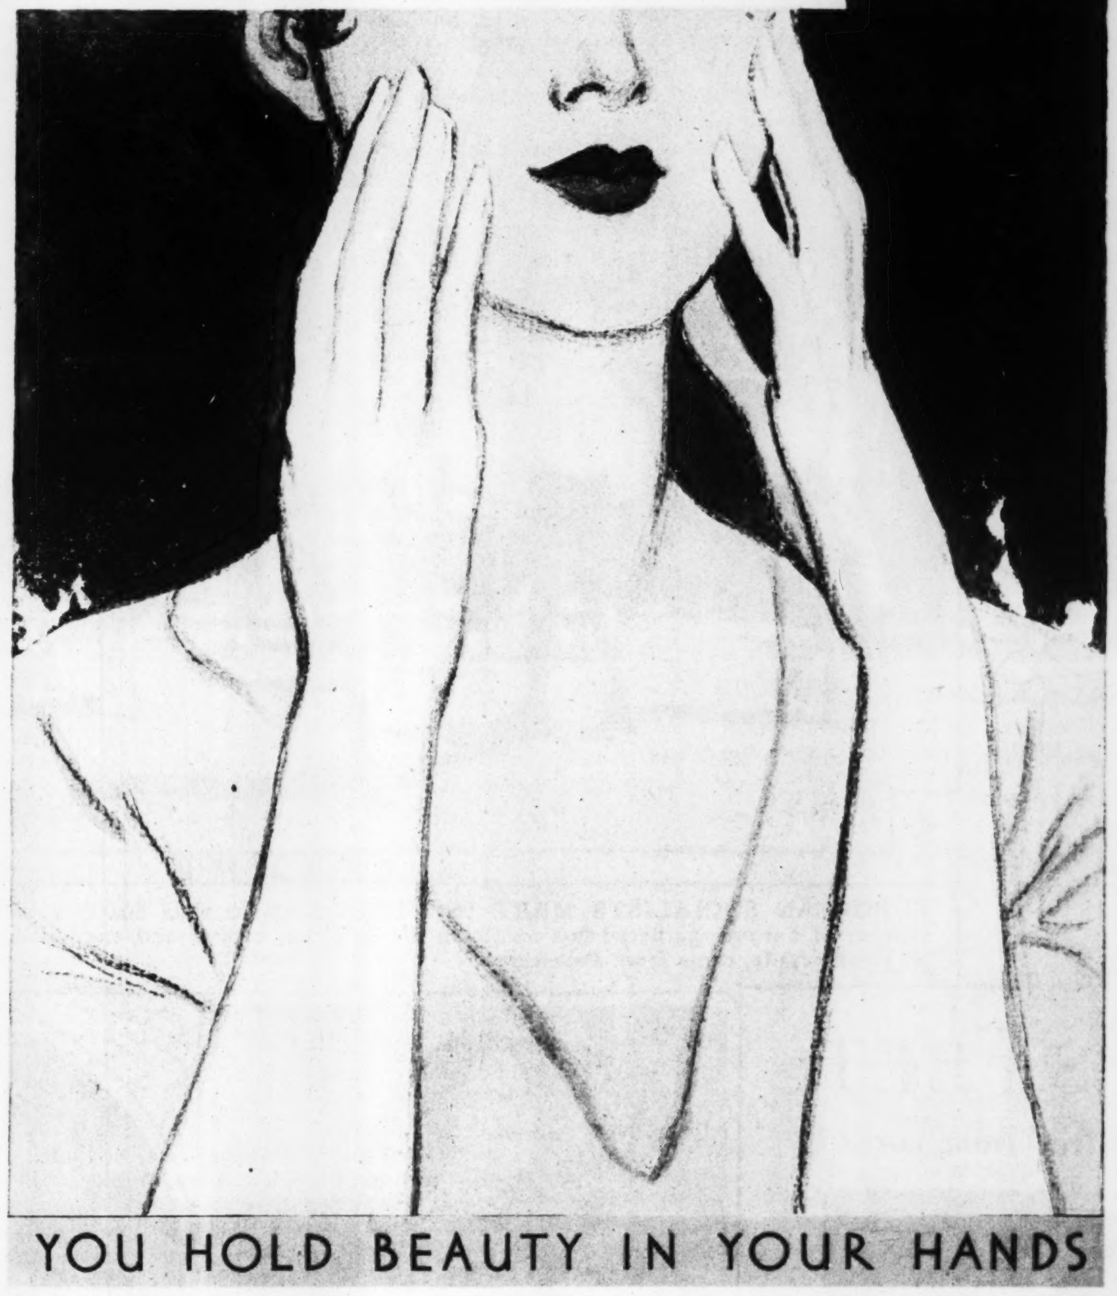
As your skin changes

-your own hands can make it lovelier!

This new DuBarry Hand Principle Brings the Beauty Salon to your own home



YOU HOLD BEAUTY IN YOUR HANDS

Every moment of your life, your skin is changing, aging, showing the tell-tale marks of time.

But now Richard Hudnut . . . with the new Du Barry Beauty Preparations . . . shows you the way to erase those lines about the eyes or mouth . . . to smooth the forehead into its natural unmarked freshness . . . to normalize those enlarged pores . . . to strengthen sagging chin muscles. And all right in your own home . . . with little jars and bottles of softest creams, fragrant lotions, tonic oils and astringents . . . to be patted on with your own finger tips . . . worked into your skin with your own two hands.

For these new Du Barry Beauty Aids are professional beauty aids, so designed of rare ingredients that even the woman with no cosmetic knowledge can use them with perfect success.

The whole fascinating process . . . the exact application of the various creams and tonics for each skin defect . . . are all explained in our little handbook which you may have by filling out the coupon below, or which will be given you when you purchase Du Barry preparations.

TONIC CLEANLINESS is the basis of every Du Barry treatment. You can see the simple finger movements in the illustration above.

"With the cushion tips of the fingers, smooth on Du Barry Cleansing cream generously. Begin at the base of the neck and stroke the cream up and up . . . It liquefies instantly . . . The combined heat of the hands and of the skin of the face is just enough to release the pu oils of its composition." (Quoted from the hand-book.)

The cream is then wiped off with soft Du Barry Cleansing Tissues and Du Barry Skin Tonic and Freshener Lotion applied to cool and close the pores. Isn't i simple! So is every other treatment with these Du Barry preparations:

Du Barry Special Cleansing Cream	May be used any time. Liquefies instantly . . . frees skin of dust and impurities.	$1.50, 2.50, 4.5

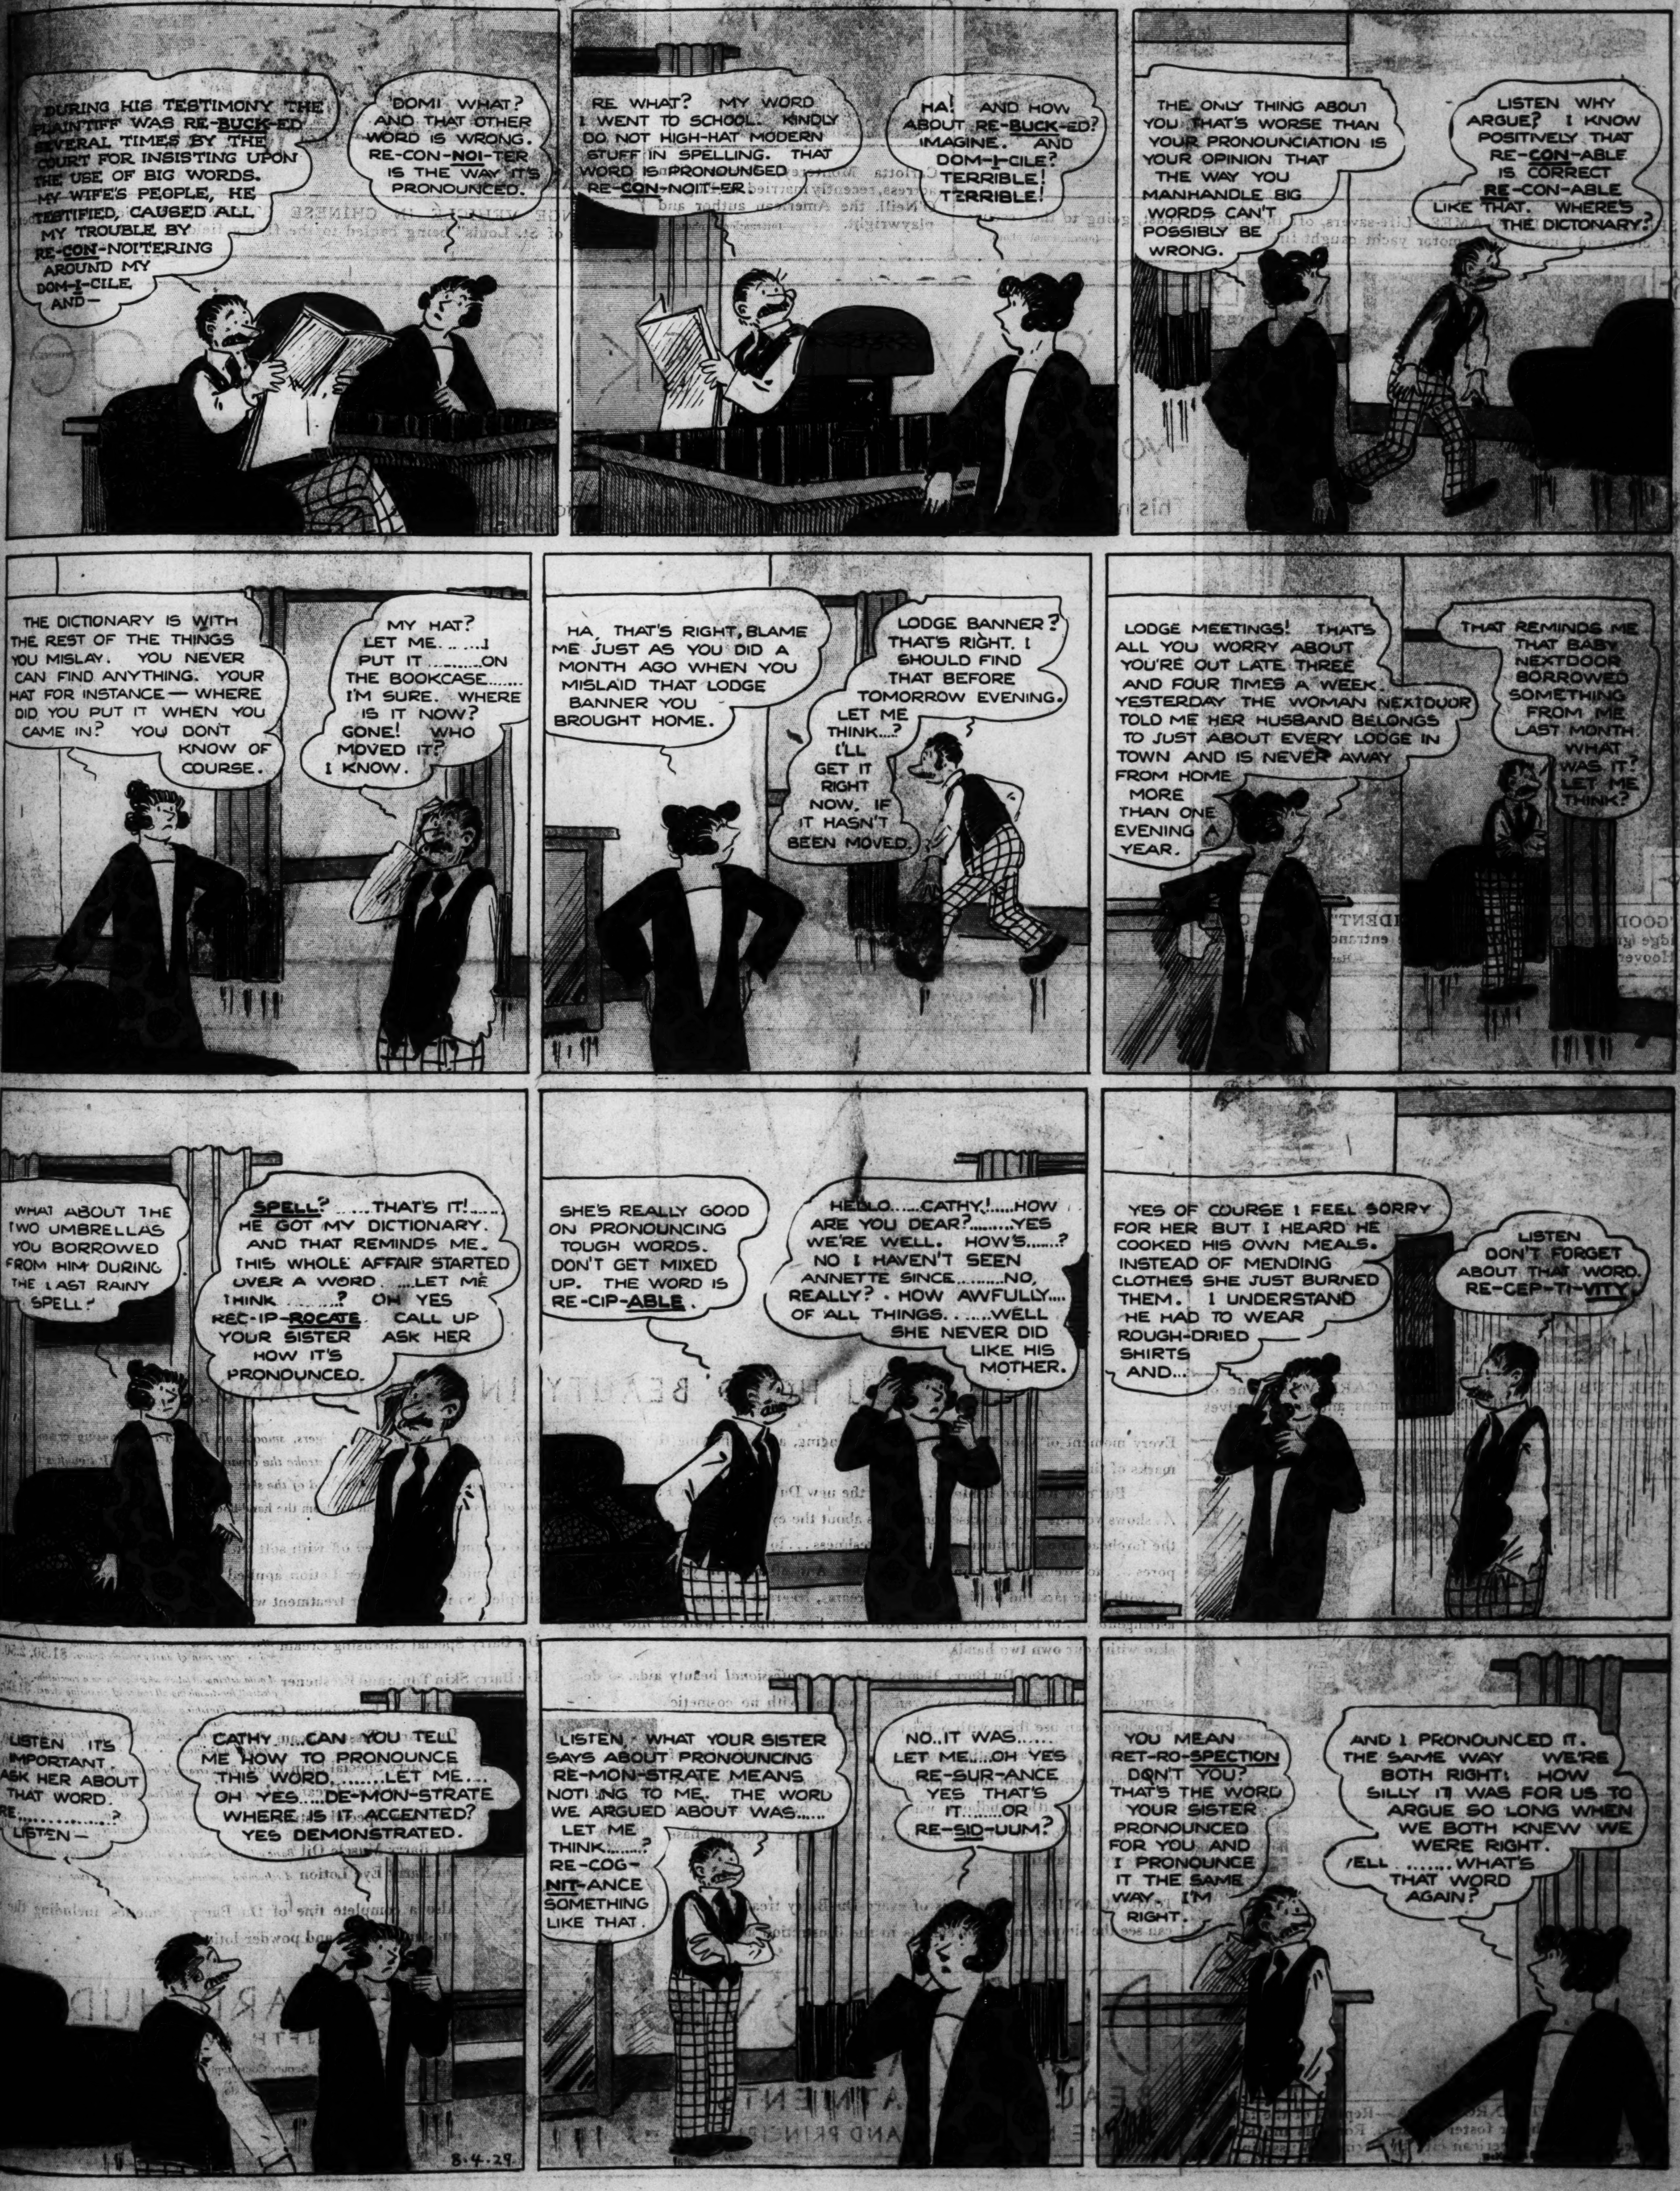
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

This comic appears every day in one of the TWO comic pages of the daily Post-Dispatch

By H. J. TUTHILL



DURING HIS TESTIMONY THE PLAINTIFF WAS RE-BUCK-ED SEVERAL TIMES BY THE COURT FOR INSISTING UPON THE USE OF BIG WORDS. MY WIFE'S PEOPLE, HE TESTIFIED, CAUSED ALL MY TROUBLE BY RE-CON-NOITERING AROUND MY DOM-I-CILE AND—DOMI WHAT? AND THAT OTHER WORD IS WRONG. RE-CON-NOI-TER IS THE WAY IT'S PRONOUNCED.
RE WHAT? MY WORD I WENT TO SCHOOL. KINDLY DO NOT HIGH-HAT MODERN STUFF IN SPELLING. THAT WORD IS PRONOUNCED RE-CON-NOIT-ER
HA! AND HOW ABOUT RE-BUCK-ED? IMAGINE. AND DOM-I-CILE? TERRIBLE! TERRIBLE!
THE ONLY THING ABOUT YOU THAT'S WORSE THAN YOUR PRONOUNCIATION IS YOUR OPINION THAT THE WAY YOU MANHANDLE BIG WORDS CAN'T POSSIBLY BE WRONG.
LISTEN WHY ARGUE? I KNOW POSITIVELY THAT RE-CON-ABLE IS CORRECT RE-CON-ABLE LIKE THAT. WHERE'S THE DICTONARY?
THE DICTIONARY IS WITH THE REST OF THE THINGS YOU MISLAY. YOU NEVER CAN FIND ANYTHING. YOUR HAT FOR INSTANCE — WHERE DID YOU PUT IT WHEN YOU CAME IN? YOU DON'T KNOW OF COURSE.
MY HAT? LET ME.......I PUT IT ....ON THE BOOKCASE....... I'M SURE. WHERE IS IT NOW? GONE! WHO MOVED IT? I KNOW.
HA, THAT'S RIGHT, BLAME ME JUST AS YOU DID A MONTH AGO WHEN YOU MISLAID THAT LODGE BANNER YOU BROUGHT HOME.
LODGE BANNER? THAT'S RIGHT. I SHOULD FIND THAT BEFORE TOMORROW EVENING. LET ME THINK....? I'LL GET IT RIGHT NOW, IF IT HASN'T BEEN MOVED.
LODGE MEETINGS! THAT'S ALL YOU WORRY ABOUT YOU'RE OUT LATE THREE AND FOUR TIMES A WEEK. YESTERDAY THE WOMAN NEXTDOOR TOLD ME HER HUSBAND BELONGS TO JUST ABOUT EVERY LODGE IN TOWN AND IS NEVER AWAY FROM HOME MORE THAN ONE EVENING A YEAR.
THAT REMINDS ME THAT BABY NEXTDOOR BORROWED SOMETHING FROM ME LAST MONTH. WHAT WAS IT? LET ME THINK?
WHAT ABOUT THE TWO UMBRELLAS YOU BORROWED FROM HIM DURING THE LAST RAINY SPELL?
SPELL? .....THAT'S IT!...... HE GOT MY DICTIONARY. AND THAT REMINDS ME. THIS WHOLE AFFAIR STARTED OVER A WORD. ....LET ME THINK ....? OH YES REC-IP-ROCATE. CALL UP YOUR SISTER ASK HER HOW IT'S PRONOUNCED.
SHE'S REALLY GOOD ON PRONOUNCING TOUGH WORDS. DON'T GET MIXED UP. THE WORD IS RE-CIP-ABLE.
HELLO......CATHY!.....HOW ARE YOU DEAR?.........YES WE'RE WELL. HOW'S.......? NO I HAVEN'T SEEN ANNETTE SINCE.........NO, REALLY? . HOW AWFULLY.... OF ALL THINGS. .....WELL SHE NEVER DID LIKE HIS MOTHER.
YES OF COURSE I FEEL SORRY FOR HER BUT I HEARD HE COOKED HIS OWN MEALS. INSTEAD OF MENDING CLOTHES SHE JUST BURNED THEM. I UNDERSTAND HE HAD TO WEAR ROUGH-DRIED SHIRTS AND...
LISTEN DON'T FORGET ABOUT THAT WORD. RE-CEP-TI-VITY.
LISTEN IT'S IMPORTANT. ASK HER ABOUT THAT WORD. RE...............? LISTEN—
CATHY ....CAN YOU TELL ME HOW TO PRONOUNCE THIS WORD, ...LET ME.... OH YES.....DE-MON-STRATE WHERE IS IT ACCENTED? YES DEMONSTRATED.
8.4.29.
LISTEN, WHAT YOUR SISTER SAYS ABOUT PRONOUNCING RE-MON-STRATE MEANS NOTHING TO ME. THE WORD WE ARGUED ABOUT WAS...... LET ME THINK........? RE-COG-NIT-ANCE SOMETHING LIKE THAT.
NO..IT WAS...... LET ME.....OH YES RE-SUR-ANCE YES THAT'S IT.........OR RE-SID-UUM?
YOU MEAN RET-RO-SPECTION DON'T YOU? THAT'S THE WORD YOUR SISTER PRONOUNCED FOR YOU AND I PRONOUNCE IT THE SAME WAY. I'M RIGHT.
AND I PRONOUNCED IT. THE SAME WAY. WE'RE BOTH RIGHT: HOW SILLY IT WAS FOR US TO ARGUE SO LONG WHEN WE BOTH KNEW WE WERE RIGHT. WELL ....WHAT'S THAT WORD AGAIN?

WALL STREET

ALL MONEY S UP; STOCK LIST HEAVY

rinkling of Public Utilities Maintain Early Gains Despite 12 Per Cent Rate for Funds.

OME NEW HIGHS IN LATE SESSION

lling in Such Recent Favorites as American Can, U. S. Steel Common and New York Central.

the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Call oney advanced from 10 to 12 per nt today and the stock market rned distinctly heavy although a rinkling of public utilities mained their early gains and closed ound the year's high prices. Pertent selling of such recent favors as American Can, United States eel common and New Iork Cenl, which dropped 3 to 4½ points, d a depressing effect on speculive sentiment, and resulted in a tual abandonment of pool operons in many specialties.

Wall street was taken more or unawares by the advance in call money rate to 12 per cent the early afternoon. Withdraws were held down to a normal y's figure running somewhere tween $15,000,000 and $20,000,0, but for a moment in the early ternoon offerings were light and w loans brought the 12 per cent te.

Beyond signifying that the situon on the whole is still rather enly balanced and the rate subt to sudden fluctuation as this lance is disturbed the higher e was not considered disturbing, ough the fact remains that it did fluence some selling in the afteron.

Watch for Change at London.

The market had also to cope a good deal of disconcerting k about the Bank of England count rate. Inasmuch as Govnor Norman will be home Thursday's weekly meeting, se who are satisfied that the k's position calls for a higher are anticipating an advance at t time.

Gold reserves are now down m last September's high of 73,659,000 to below £142,610,000, lowest since the gold standard reestablished in 1925. The tish bank rate, however, while advance might tend to draw me some London funds now beemployed here, is not viewed as aring so directly on our situation was the case when London sed its rate in February. Then it s considered possible the local nk rate might also be increased, t presently no apprehension is t on the latter score.

Mellon Rumor Again.

Not a little of the selling which de itself felt in the course of day was influenced by the reval of rumors that Secretary llon's resignation as head of the easury was an early possibility. rhaps the element of time brings development progressively rer, but indications are that Mr. llon will not be in any great ry about relinquishing his of. The head of the Treasury is now in Washington. But high cials there were quoted as usual holding such reports without ndation in fact.

Some New Highs.

Despite the rather heavy selling ing the afternoon, new high ords were established in the last of trading by New Haven at , American & Foreign Power 146¾ and American Water at 141⅛, up 4 to 7¼ points. Threshing broke 8 points, al Electric 6¼ and Underd Elliott Fisher, Frank G. tuck, Union Carbide, May Dertment Stores, Warren Bros., tern Union, Commercial Investt Trust, National Cash Regis-, American Tobacco B, Consold Cigar, Kennecott, Liquid nic, and Safeway Stores lost 6 points.

ading was not as heavy on the as it was in the initial ralthough the day's sales ran to 4,000,000 shares.

Commodity markets also were in nary. Wheat dropped about s a bushel. There was a increase in the visible sup-. Corn dropped 1⅛ cents a . Cotton yielded 1 to 14
